A German tourist has been found by a gendarme lying unconscious in a stable at St. Sulpice, in the Canton of Neuchatel, Switzerland. The man lost himself in the snow, and his feet became frost bitten. He crawled to the stable, and in his agony took out his pocket knife, and amputated two of his toes. Then he fainted, and is now in a hospital.

Time Saving.

A new variation of the now long familiar "while you wait" sign is found in an uptown avenue where a barber shop and a tailoring shop stand side by side. In front of the building hangs a sign on which are displayed the name of the tailoring concern and the name of the barber shop and this announcement: "Suit cleaned and pressed while you are getting shaved."—New York Sun.

England's Military Railway.

The South-Western is our most important military line. It skirts the Channel, and has more military stations on it than any other. It connects the three great naval stations, Portsmouth, Portland and Plymouth, with the two great camps, and serves as many garrison towns as it does cathedral cities. The road it jointly owns with the Brighton into Portsmouth is the only one in the country that passes through a rampart. And, owing to the concentration of the troopships at Southampton, it carries every British soldier that goes or returns on foreign service.—Westminster Gazette.

Buzzard Freed of Trap.

After a chase of three hours Abram Layton and his son captured one of the largest buzzards ever seen in this section. Attached to the bird's leg was a steel trap and an iron chain three feet long. The buzzard was so emaciated that it could hardly fly with its burden, which it had evidently carried for months, as the wound made by the snapping of the steel trap had entirely healed. The bird did not show fight, but seemed glad to get rid of its burden, and it looked so pitiful that Mr. Layton had compassion on it and set it free.—Clayton correspondence Philadelphia Record.

Democrats of Committee Hear Leaders Plea for Unity.

Washington, July 21.—Oscar W. Underwood, Democratic leader of the house, will begin to pilot Democratic house members of the banking and currency committee to an agreement on the Owen-Glass currency bill.

The committee took a recess Friday in disagreement on essentials of the bill. Time was demanded for additional study of the sections providing for rediscounts and defining the powers of the reserve board.

Underwood stated that he hoped the Democrats on the committee would be able to reach an agreement by the end of the coming week.

Sailors of Pac[illegible] Fleet Mob "Red Flag" Offices.

Seattle, Wash., July 21.—United States marines from the Pacific reserve fleet, most of the sailors wearing the name bands of the cruisers Colorado and California, started to "clean up the town," as they expressed it, by attacking the headquarters of the Socialists and the Industrial Workers of the World.

After destroying the Moderate Socialists' headquarters at Seventh and Olive the sailors demolished a meeting room of the Salvation Army, which somebody had said was an Industrial Workers' meeting place. A provost guard of fifty men of the fleet was hurried ashore in cutters to arrest all the rioters, who caused much damage.

Secretary of the Navy Daniels was dining on the cruiser West Virginia, the guest of Admiral Reynolds, when the rioting began. The rioting was ascribed to a speech he had made in denunciation of the red flag.

Mayor George F. Cotterill, Seattle's "free speech" mayor, ordered all saloons closed and suppression of the Seattle Times. He was overridden later by Judge Humphries of the superior court, who set aside the order closing the saloons, and enjoined the mayor from interferring with the publication of the Times.

"Misconceived senatorial dignity decrees that we shall wear a vest," explained Colonel J. "Ham," fingering the garment in question, "when we would fain divest ourselves of the incumbrance."

WILSON'S IDEA HAS STRENGTH

Washington Takes to Nicaragua Protectorate Treaty.

OF FAR REACHING IMPORTANCE

Treaty Proposed Would Minimize Revolutionary Troubles in Neighboring States—Secures Control of Fonseca Bay—Similar Treaties Expected with Other Southern Republics.

Washington, July 21.—The administration's proposal to establish by treaty what amounts to a American protectorate over Nicaragua was generally accepted as the most far-reaching step in the foreign policy of the United States since the Spanish-American war. As President Wilson's first piece of constructive statesmanship in the realm of foreign affairs, the proposal laid before the senate foreign relations committee by Secretary of State Bryan excited great interest and much approval. The prospects for the success of the administration's plan seemed bright. The arrangement with Nicaragua is assured of strong Republican support, including that of Senator Lodge and Root in the foreign relations committee. With the enthusiastic support of the president and his secretary of state it is considered almost certain that the plan also will receive the acquiescene of the Democratic members.

Will Check Revolutions.

While diplomatic and official Washington were greatly interested in the immediate effect of the Bryan proposal upon Nicaragua, their attention was directed chiefly to the larger aspect of the proposed treaty relations with this southern republic. The impression was general that Mr. Bryan's present proposal is merely a step in the evolution of a policy which inevitably will provide a more substantial and general control by the United States over Central America.

It is certain that the acceptance of the direct protection of the United States by the single republic of Nicaragua will have a remarkably calming effect on the revolutionary movements and upon political disturbance in all the other countries of Central America. The certainty of internal peace in this section will go far it is believed toward maintaining the stability of Honduras and Salvador, Nicaragua's neighbors on the north. Of Costa Rica on the south there is little cause for anxiety.

Upper Hand in Fonseca Gulf.

An importnat fact in the proposed arrangement is that not only will the peace and progress of Nicaragua be assured, but by the terms of the treaty the United States will be able to exercise the upper hand on the Gulf of Fonseca. The waters of this gulf, on which the United States is ceded a naval base, wash the shores of Nicaragua and those of Salvador and Honduras as well. In every disturbance between and in those three republics the waters of the Gulf of Fonseca have carried many a revolutionary and filibustering expedition. The domination of the gulf which is, by the way, the only good harbor between San Diego and South America, will enable the United States effectively to put an end to such expeditions in that quarter.

It is also a great stride toward securing that control of the Caribbean by the United States which in most progressive quarters has been long regarded as inevitable and essential.

GOVERNOR RECEIVES MEDAL

Presented Memento for Aiding in Gettysburg Reunion.

Indianapolis, Ind., July 21.—Governor Ralston received a silver medal from the Gettysburg Commission of Pennsylvania in recognition of his assistance in making the recent celebration of the Gettysburg anniversary a success. Accompanying the medal was the following letter from Lewis E. Beitler, secretary of the Gettysburg Commission of Pennsylvania:

"By direction of his Excellency the Governor, and our commission, I have the honor to present you the medal of silver herein, in appreciation of your active and earnest interest as the governor of the state of Indiana in aiding in every way in achieving the success that attended the great reunion of the blue and the gray at Gettysburg July 1 to 4 last. Trusting it may appeal to you as an acceptable memento of an occasion that surely, under divine providence, is destined to accomplish the real reunion of our nation."

AVERT "THIRD RAIL" STRIKE

Aurora and Elgin Line and Employes Agree on Arbitration.

Chicago, July 21.—The wage demands of the employes of the Aurora, Elgin and Chicago interurban line will be arbitrated and the threatened strike probably will not result.

A conference attended by George Reiser, business agent of the employes' organization, and Edward C. Faber, general manager of the "third rail" line, resulted in an agreement to arbitrate.

TERRE HAUTE RACE PROGRAM

$15,000 in Purses and Over 180 Horses Are Entered.

Terre Haute, Ind., July 21.—With the closing of the final entries, the directors of the Terre Haute Trotting and Fair association announced the program for the summer race meeting to open Tuesday, July 20. Three races will be run each day. More than 180 horses are entered and the list represents twenty states.

The association offers $15,000 in purses. Inquiries from horsemen indicate a livelier interest in the meet this year than any since the track was withdrawn from the Grand circuit. Many of the horses that will race here are entered in the blue ribbon events of the year.

PENITENT MAN GIVES UP LOOT

Express Employee Yields to a Stricken Conscience.

MOST OF $5,175 RETURNED

Accosts Philadelphia Policeman Arresting Drunk and Asks to Be Taken Up—Took Money from East St. Louis Tuesday—Only $36 of the Money Missing.

Philadelphia, July 21.—Stolen money—$5175—from the American Express company in the pockets of Alexander S. Woods, East St. Louis agent for the company, hurt his conscience as he wandered the streets of Philadelphia, and, unable to bear the disgrace, he surrendered to the police.

Woods stood beneath the arc light at Fifteenth and Market streets, watching Sergeant Daly and two officers wrestling with a drunk.

Tells Police He's Thief.

"Sergeant," he said, "would you mind sending me along with him?"

"Why?"

"Because I'm a thief."

"How's that "

"I'm wanted by the American Express company in East St. Louis for stealing $5,175 last Tuesday. I've stood it as long as I can. Here's the stuff."

Woods pulled a bundle of money orders and bills from his pocket and handed it to Sergeant Daly.

"I want you to send me back home. I want to face the music. I want my too little girls to know that even if I have made a big mistake I have done all I can to make it good."

Sergeant Daly motioned toward the waiting patrol and said:

"Jump in."

Wood's Story.

Woods obeyed and a few moments later he was in a jail cell. There he told the story:

"I never was in trouble before. My people are good people. I have been well educated. I knew better than to do what I did. I signed a note for a friend of mine—at least I thought he was a friend. Last Tuesday I had been collecting all day. I had $5,000 in money orders of $50 each and $175 in cash, all company money.

"On my way to the office I was told that the man whose note I was on had failed to make good. I felt I had to make good for him, my name being on the note. I did not have the money. Then I went to the Union station and started east with my pockets full of company money.

"I landed in Washingon. I did not sleep any and I ate one meal. Then I went to New York a day later and ate another meal, but did not sleep. Friday I came to Philadelphia. I have neither eaten nor slept since then. I had begun to realize what I had done. I thought of my two babies back there in St. Louis and realized what a stigma this act of mine will be upon their names."

Wood's father lives in Granite City, Ill. On Woods when searched at the station was found $136 of the $175 cash. He had already surrendered the money order books.

"I don't care much about myself," Woods concluded. "I have been separated from my wife for six years, and there is not much in life worth living for from my point of view; but I do hate to do my little girls an injustice like this."

BLACKMAILER IS A GREAT GENIUS

Youth Invents Mighty Death Engine to Get $1,000.

ADMITS THREAT TO KILL GIRL

Perfects Wireless Device by Which Bomb Can Be Touched Off from a Distance—Electrical Experts Say Invention Has Great Usefulness at Sea and in Preventing Rail Wrecks.

Salt Lake City, July 21.—In the presence of electrical experts, federal officers and detectives were demonstrated what was shown to be, perhaps, the most remarkable death-dealing machine invented in recent years.

The invention is the work of W. L. Cummings, twenty-three years old, who confessed to federal and municipal officers when he was arrested that he had threatened to use it to destroy Miss Dorothy Bamberger, a wealthy society girl, unless she gave him $1,000. After the demonstration, government officers took possession of the invention.

Has Great Usefulness.

What is held to be of more importance, the invention, it is said, can be turned to the saving of life by preventing train or ship collisions.

Electricians took the machine into a steel and concrete vault in an office building. Another part of the contrivance on which was mounted a bell and an incandescent globe, was placed in a closed room across a hall. Then the electric current of the machine was turned on. On the unattached box in the other room the bell rang and the lamp glowed brightly.

In his acknowledged letter to Miss Bamberger, Cummings sent a diagram of his invention, saying he would place a suitcase of nitroglycerin in her room and explode it from a distance. The demonstration, say the electrical experts, proves that he could have accomplished this Could Explode Mines in War.

In speaking of his invention as he sat in his cell, Cummings said the attachment could be installed in locomotive cabs where it would give a positive signal if a train ran past a closed block signal. In war, he said, mines could be exploded without wire attachment.

The prisoner told the police he had been induced to try to blackmail Miss Bamberger by two men who, he believed, were members of a New York gang of blackmailers.

LUTHER LEAGUE CLOSES

Twentieth Anniversary of Organization to Be Fittingly Observed.

Morris, Ill., July 21.—The nineteenth annual convention of the Illinois Luther league closed its three day session with the election of officers as follows:

J. Alex Nelson, Chicago, president; Miss Minnie M. Stehr, Elgin, executive secretary; Miss Hulda Miller, Chicago, recording secretary; Harry L. Hanson, Chicago, treasurer; Rev. Ira O. Northstein, Chicago, trustee.

It was recommended that the twentieth anniversary of the organization of the league in Illinois be fittingly observed throughout the state on June 4, 1914.

While Charles Monday stood on the Kalamazoo river bridge at Ceresco watching the fireworks during the celebration in that village, he was shoved off the bridge into the water, a fall of 20 feet. He was unconscious when pulled out by William O'Hearn of Battle Creek, and will recover.

WOMAN ON FENGE IS DECLARED A SUICIDE

Identified as Martine Winther; Had Black Hand Delusions.

Chicago, July 21.—The body of the young woman found hanging from a fence by a corn field near Oak Forest was identified as that of Martine Winther, a Danish seamstress, thirty-five years old, who started for Audubon, Ia., on Wednesday.

She is said to have been suffering from mental hallucinations for several months, and it is believed she committel suicide after jumping from a Rock Island train on Wednesday and after wandering about the country for hours.

The body was identified by Mrs. Zena Olson, 536 Dearborn avenue, with whom the girl roomed until a week ago. She then went to a rooming house at 111 West Indiana street after having a quarrel with Mrs. Olson. The girl was "queer," continually talking about her "persecutors." She left the Indiana street address on Wednesday afternoon. On Wednesday evening a woman disappeared from a Rock Island train between Blue Island and Joliet. She had shown a ticket for Audubon, Ia.

About 1 o'clock Thursday morning the woman apeared at the farmhouse of Joseph Berger, excited and sobbing. She asked for shelter, saying Black Handers were after her trying to force her into a life of shame. She was directed toward the Oak Forest infirmary and disappeared. Friday the body was found hanging to a fence on the farm of Chris Abbe near Tinley Park.

After learning of the positive identification Detective George Scrivner of Coroner Hoffman's office and Deputy Coroner Webster declared they believed the girl had committed suicide.

HELD ON KIDNAPING CHARGE

Boy's Grandfather Arrested Following Dispute With Half Brother.

Nashville, Ind., July 21.—David Harden, a farmer living two miles south of here, was arrested charged with kidnaping Harley Harden, twelve years old, from Jessie Harden, his stepfather. David was released on bond. David and Jessie are half-brothers and Jessie married David's daughter.

A legal battle is expected as both David and Jessie claim right to the boy.

CHAPPELL, NOT CHAPPELLE

Cominskey's $18,000 Beaut Is Also an American.

Chicago, July 21.—A mistake has been made in the pedigree of Comiskey's $18,000 outfielder, and the folks down in Jersey county, Ill., have protested. Also the young star's name has been spelled wrong. The high priced recruit declared his real name is La Verne Chappell, there being no "e" at the end. The name "Larry" is a nickname applied since he began playing ball.

His father, Fred Chappell, is American born, and so was his grandfather. The latter was born and spent his entire life right down in Jersey county.

"It makes no difference to me," said the boy outfielder, "what they call me or how they spell my name. But my father always spelled it 'Chappell.'"

The Central school building to be erected at Ironwood, metropolis of the Gogebic iron range, to replace a structure destroyed by fire last February, will cost $121,500. This figure does not include the furniture and furnishings for the 23 rooms. Contracts for various parts of the work have been awarded to Duluth, Milwaukee, Ironwood and Chicago concerns. The building is to be completed by July 15.

Deafness Cannot be Cured,

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

Theme for Children

By Maxim Gorky.

Every man has a stain upon his conscience. I am no exception. But the majority look at these adornmets very simply; they year them as lightly as starched shirts. But as for me I never wear such shirts, and probably for that cause feel my stain very uncomfortable. In one word—I wish to confess.

I do not confess merely because I have no other agreeable recreations in my life, or because confession is the only way in which I can attract the attention of others; I do not enter into confidences because it gives me an opportunity to expose my virtues. Not at all. I am not guided by any one of those motives which usually impel men to public confession. I confess only because I feel the time has come. And so I have taken up my pen with the intention of using it as a brush for the cleansing of my soul from that dark stain which has pained me for years.

It all began on a merry May day, when, walking up the street, I met a schoolgirl known to me. Her name was Lisotchka; she had merry hazel eyes—though now they were sad; a rosy, clear-cut, animated face—now pale and deadly; a walk like a bird's flight—now she could barely move a foot.

"Lisotchka, how d'ye do? May I ask after the health of your dolls?"

I forgot to mention the class she was in. It was the fourth. I loved to play with her dolls; after relations with men such play revives and animates.

"Good morning," answered Lisotchka; and in her voice I heard tears.

"What is the matter?" I asked in alarm. I confess I loved her; and she returned my love with the force and passion of her twelve summers. I was myself then only fifty-three.

"They—they have again—set—composition," she said through her tears.

"A composition? Is the theme so said that even before writing it makes you cry?"

She smiled.

"Yes. You are all right. You are not forced to write compositions!"

"Alas, Lisotchka, I am. Only you are forced by your master, and I by circumstances. We wont say which is worse off. But don't cry; I will write your composition. What is the theme?"

"'Water, its Importance in Nature and in Human Life.' Write it! Dear! Get me five marks!"

"I will try!"

The reason I offered to write her composition so unhesitatingly was that that kind of work was familiar to me. On one occasion a teacher of literature awarded me two marks for a composition written for a fifth class schoolgirl on the subject of "The Positive Traits in the Characters of Skalozub and Moltchalin." On another occasion I received one mark for a composition written for a sixth class boy, on the theme, "The Advantages and Disadvantages of Respect for Parents," or something of that kind.

But though I knew the task I had undertaken, I thought for a moment before beginning. I desired that my little girl should gain full marks. How must I write it so that she should receive the whole five?

After a moment's thought I decided. Before writing a word, I must convince myself that I was not a giant six feet high, but a little rosy-cheeked schoolgirl twelve years old.

It seemed beyond doubt that when the teacher names the theme he takes into account the child's knowlege of the subject, its pyschology, its style, and finally, its idealistic view of and relation to the subject. That was beyond doubt. The conclusion was that I, as far as I possibly could, should imitate a child. Admirable!

And we conversed together on the subject of the elasticity of friendship's bonds; how it happens that you walk away from a friend's house, and yet come to him, and prevent him sleeping. Then we spoke of wine and of people who drink wine, and we made the following discovery: People who have money in their pockets or credit at a wine merchant's may buy wine, whereas those who have neituer, cannot.

When I returned home I lay on the sofa, lighted a cigarette, and fell asleep—a thing I did not intend to do. I was awakened by a friend who came to call—a thing which it appeared he had no intention of doing. He had left his house without having any thought of coming to me; yet came. When my friend left it was too late to write about Water.

The composition was to be ready by Saturday, so there remained two days. But on the following day I again failed, not through friendship, but through wine, which this time proved itself an enemy. When the last day came, I sat down to write "Water and its Importance in Nature and Human Life." My head ached badly, but I wrote resolutely to the end. I then read it over, failed to understand a word; and after coming to the conclusion that I must have imitated a child with great success, and would more than satisfy the teacher, I took it to my schoolgirl.

She met me joyfully.

"It's done! How good! Five marks, eh? Of course for you are a writer. Come and play dolls!"

We went, and played, and then I returned home and slept peacefully.

On Sunday I called at her house. Her mother came into the room as majestic as a church clock tower; and her eyes gazed at me like two revolver muzzles.

"Ah, this is you—my dear sir! You?"

"I am almost certain it is I, no one else."

"No joking?"

"? ! ?"

"You are an author! A writer! Do you hear?"

"I think I hear—But I am not sure I understand—"

"What have you done with my daughter?"

"Allow me to try to remember."

"Look at her!"

I left the room and looked. She lay in a little bed, and cried bitterly.

"Lisotchka!" I began.

"Akh, maman, maman, tell the dvornik Matvei to cut him with a knife—with an axe—to kill him!" cried Lisotchka.

This was amazing.

"Explain—"

"Take your detestable composition which made my daughter the laughing-stock of the whole school, and which is responsibe for her not getting a single mark. Take it please, and—"

MAXIM GORKY.

I departed. I carefully concealed the composition in my pocket and walked home. It seemed to me that my pocket contained a whole Atlantic Ocean and its mysteries. On arriving home, I read the composition. Read it yourself!

Water is a wet liquid, the first appearance of which on earth is prehistoric. At first there was only a little water in the world, but since the Flood came by order of God, there has been more water than land; and from that time the water, never flowing away, remains in marshes, lakes, and seas. Water collects only in low-lying places but it cannot rest in high places because it is a liquid. If you pour it on the top of a hill it will soon flow to the bottom; for that reason the bases of hills are always surrounded by seas, lakes, and marshes. If you pour it on an orange it will also run off, although the earth is round as an orange. All the rivers also flow downwards because they begin on the tops of hills, and because water is liquid. Even if you pour it on the floor, it will flow to the lower parts, not to the higher. It can easily be distinguished from butter because it never gets solid. Fast-butter (oil) is more like water. In marshes water is dirty, in seas salt; and therefore such water is not drunk; people drink river-water, and even that only where there are no water-works. It is dangerous to drink water, as you may catch cold; better drink tea or coffee. Water also serves as a medium of communication, and those countries which have much water have great commerce; such in ancient times were Phoenicia and Greece, and in modern times, England. Fishes like to live in water. Water is very convenient for transporting merchandise on special ships which are called fleets; but you cannot walk on it as it is a liquid and slips from under your feet so that you drown. In Nature water appears when it is summer in the form of rain which makes a great deal of mud. When rain falls, it first falls on the roofs of houses, and thence flows in rivulets on to the ground. When it is raining grown up people go out in galoshes and umbrellas, while children sit at home and find it very tedious. In winter, rain freezes and falls on the earth in the form of snow, which makes it very cold. In human life, water has several uses; it is used for making tea and soup and for washing; and when in washing it is used with soap, it gets into the eyes, and makes them smart. Soap and water are used for making bubbles. To make bubbles you should melt some soap in the water, take a straw, and after dipping it in the mixture, blow very carefully. At the end of the straw will grow a big, pretty bubble of varied colors; and, breaking away from the straw it will fly through the air until it bursts. Water is also used for washing clothes, wash.

Valuable Chinese Medicine.

Curious experiences occasionally come to administrators of even so prosaic a department as the customs. A Sydney correspondent tells of one which recently befell Mr. N. Colston Lockyer, the Federal Assistant Comptroller-General. Above the mantelpiece in his office is nailed a sun dried lizard. It had been imported by an enterprising Chinese merchant, who desired Mr. Lockyer to take particular note of it and instruct his officers as to its nature and the amount of duty chargeable on similar consignments in bulk. The Chinaman explained that dried lizard was a very important item in the pharmacopaeia of the Celestial Empire, and when ground to powder possessed medicinal properties of untold value. The officers of the department were at a loss to know how to classify the article, their choice apparently lying between drug, preserved food and prohibited vermin. Mr. Lockyer cut the Gordian knot by classifying the "medicine lizard" as "unenumerated" and admitting it duty free.

A Busy Holiday.

"Naw, I dont think Jimmy'll be staying long on this new job he's took up wid," said Mrs. Herlihy. "'Tis too harrd fer him. Sure he gets no rist at all from Monda' mornin' till Sathurda' night, and 'tis not what the man's used to."

"He has his Sundays to rist in," hazarded the caller, boldly.

"An' what o' that?" said Mrs. Herlihy. "On Sunda's he has to go to church, an' take the children to their grandmamma's, an' visit wid his coosins an' all—'tis no rist at all."

"'Twas wan day out of ivery fortnit he had wid the ould job, wa'n't it?" queried the caller.

"It was," said Mrs. Herlihy, "an' 'twas a grand vacation he had. I'd save ivery bit o' the washin', an' he'd wring it out fine, an' hang it on the line for me; thin he'd saw an' shplit wood enough to last till the nixt vacation day, an' he'd bate ivery mat in the house an' shine up the faucets an' the b'iler, an' wash the windys, an' there'd always be some little exthra help, drivin' nails or the like, he cud give me.

"An' whin he'd go to h's bed at night he'd niver fail to say to me, 'Well, Celia, my vacation day is over, but I feel like it's made me ready to go back to wurrk to-morrer,' he'd say."

REMARKABLE HISTORY OF A TWENTY-FIVE CENT PIECE

In 1890 J. R. Hosmer, son of Judge S. P. Hosmer graduated from the Tecumseh High School.

One of the presents he received was a twenty-five cent piece. On one side was engraved these words. "Tecumseh, Mich., Class of 1890. J. R. Hosmer."

Mr. Hosmer carried this money as a pocket piece until the winter of 1899 when his trunk was robbed and it was taken with other valuables while he was staying at Piqua, Ohio. In May 1900 it was sent here at Tecumseh by a Wholesale Tobacco House located at Chicago. The family returned it to Hosmer at Masselon, O.

He was killed and robbed at Cleveland, O., in August 1900 and the coin was again taken.

A few days ago a letter came to Postmaster Bidwell enclosing the old piece and intrusting him to turn it over to Hosmer. The letter was written by F. K. Thompson of Pontiac, Mich. About 8 or 10 years ago Thompson received it in change and dropped it into his boy's bank. He thought nothing more of it until a short time ago when, thinking it might be valuable as a keep sake forwarded it to Tecumseh.

The remarkable part of this story is that it was twice stolen and twice returned to its owner.

FOURTH CLASS POSTMASTER EXAMINATION.

August 23, 1913.

The United States Civil Service Commission announces that on the date named above an examination will be held at Tecumseh, Mich., as a result of which it is expected to make certification to fill a contemplated vacancy in the position of fourth class postmaster at Britton, unless it shall be decided in the interests of the service to fill the vacancy by reinstatement. The compensation of the postmaster at this office was $150 for the last fiscal year.

AMUSING INCIDENT.

Messers. Ray Cummings and Ellis Lawson, two motoring enthusiasts, told at the Regal Factory an amusing episode incident to their recent tour from New York to Detroit in Mr. Cumming's Regal Roadster.

Leaving New York Monday morning they rolled smoothly across country and arrived in Detroit Thursday morning with but the following happening to mar their trip.

They were well on their way and both were enjoying to the full all the pleasures and exhilaration of such an outing when it was discovered that they were out of their course. Desiring to be directed to the right highway the tourists drew up before a public building and made known their plight to the gardener, who set them right.

Time passed. Mile after mile was covered but they arrived nowhere in particular. A consultation was finally held and it was decided to retrace their way. Upon reaching their last starting point the old gardener came running to meet them widely waving his arms and crying, "For God's sake don't go back! Don't go back! Don't go back! That's the road to Perdition!"

Just at that moment a rather official looking personage arrived from the building and taking the excited gardener kindly by the arm, led him away calling to the much surprised occupants of the Regal, "Don't mind him, he's only one of the inmates of the asylum."

Convicted by a Thermometer.

In connection with the death of Dr. Whitelaw of Kirkintilloch, Scotland, an interesting story is told of his early career. Being called up one night he was walking along with the messenger when he was set upon and knocked down in a lonely part of the road.

His pockets were rifled and he was left lying on the road severely injured. One of the articles stolen was a clinical thermometer with which he had that evening taken the temperature of a patient. He remembered the temperature registered, also that he had not shaken down the mercury before putting the thermometer back in his pocket and he communicated these facts to the police.

Some time afterward a thermometer registering the identical temperature was discovered in a pawnshop in Glasgow and by this means the police were enabled to track the doctor's assailants and to arrest them.

Orientation.

Orientation means that strange, baffling power by which many birds and animals find their way home in the dark. Fishes traverse worlds of water back to their spawning grounds, cats tied in a sack and taken over distances of many leagues find their way home again; horses after a water voyage of a hundred miles away from home have found their old places. In no end of similar cases the return path was found by other powers than sight and hearing. In some whales the eyes are set so far back in the head that they can see only rearward, seeming to sense their swift way by some oragns of sense in the head or snout.

DELIGHTFULLY ENTERTAINED

A walking party composed of Mesdames George Tiffany, A. E. Rice, T. C. Harris, Eugenia Gordon and Miss Louise Phelps were guests of Mrs. Eugene Harris Friday, to meet her cousin, Mrs E. E. Kimberly of Minneapolis Minn.

A fine fish dinner was served and a most delightful day was spent by all. On the return trip the ladies were overtaken by an automobile with only the driver as passenger and accepting his invitation they had a merry ride home.

BIRTHDAY SURPRISE

James VanAntwerp reached the age of 74 years Sunday and his family planned a surprise for him. Milton VanAntwerp and two sons, Ray and wife and Harry and wife and two children autoed from Jackson for the occasion. The other guests were Mr. and Mrs James Aten, Miss Franc Aten and Mrs. Catlin. A two course dinner was served and the company was given fine auto trips around the village.

BIRTHDAY PARTY

Mrs. A. W. Mills was hostess to a family gathering Sunday honoring Mr. Mills 70th birthday. A fine dinner was served and a very pleasant day was spent by all. A sister, Mrs. Helen Dodge of Oakland Calif. was present, and it was discovered that this was the anniversary of her 48th wedding day.

Mrs. LeRoy Mills of Adrian was also one of the guests.

UNPLEASANT ACCIDENT

Mrs Anna Furbush of Chicago who was here for the Kidman-Waldron wedding was the victim of a painful accident that night. She was the guest of her brother Grant Schreder for the night and by a mistep fell from the porch. Dr. Lochner of Adrian who had also been at the wedding was at the house and rendered the necessary assistance making her as comfortable as one with a badly sprained ankle, can be.

CONCERNING THE DOG DAYS

The dog days are hot stuff. They are also hot and stuffy. They warm up about the middle of August, and are sure sign that the backbone of winter is broken. It is only when the Dog Star rages that we have dog days, but nobody has yet discovered what the Dog Star rages about, unless it is the sidereal heavens at night, and he certainly does rage about there considerable. Which reminds us that the Dog Star rages only at night, and it is the dog days we hear more about. There is no answer to this one, either But that makes no difference to the Weather Bureau, and the mercury shins up the tube just the same, while mankind simply drifts along on a sea of perspiration. The name of the Dog Star is Sirius. This is because he is no joke. Dogs become mad during dog days, and why shouldn't they? Everybody else does, and swears besides, which dogs do not Dog daisies blossom at this season, and they are tropical flowers, all right. In conclusion it may be said without fear of successful contradiction that although every dog has his day, every day hasn't its dog, and the rest of us ought to be doggoned glad of it.

Chivalry in Lower Animals.

In rough and tumble competition like Peary's and Cook's, even the fiercest lower animals sometimes show a chivalric compassion. Tip with his own eyes saw a wet, dreary rat put into a cage and kept for days with a male and female mongoose, animals which cut a rat's throat like a pair of scissors. The wretched rat made a crouching, pitiful obeisance and the pair thereafter had no disposition to injure or kill this miserable prey. During the several days, however, perhaps a dozen husky rats were put in with the mongooses for the amusement of the ship's company and were instantly killed.—New York Press.

Europe's Onerous Burden.

In foreign lands the question of armament is discussed in conjunction with treasury deficits. In Germany increased taxation is grumbled at; Japan has already curtailed her military expenditures for lack of revenues, while in England an almost certain falling off of $25,000,000 in revenue is foreseen, and a demand for at least $60,000,000 new expenditure has been created by the enactment of service legislation coupled with the institution of old-age pension.

Scientists Aiding Rivals.

Science in its motives, philanthropies and results is almost identical with religion, and, as a rule, has not only been amiable toward rivalry but has often encouraged it for the common good. Many rival eminent scientists are constantly assisting one another outside the commercial science.

"Pittsburgh Perfect" Fence

CONSIDER SIZE OF WIRE When Buying Fence
DON'T BE FOOLED by Weight per Rod or Roll

There's no "bunkem" about weight per roll when you buy "Pittsburgh Perfect" because it is constructed without using extra wire to make the fence-joints. The extra weight of the joints in all wrapped, clamped, twisted or tied fences supplies no extra strength, but actually weakens these fences by persistently dragging down the panels, wearing them out before their time and making you buy more before you should. "Pittsburgh Perfect," the only fence with Electrically Welded Joints, is a one-piece fabric of unequaled strength, durability and economy, because we eliminate the expense of extra wire, and put this money into extra quality.

Made in Different Styles for FIELD, FARM, RANCH, LAWN, CHICKEN, POULTRY and RABBIT YARD and GARDEN

Every Rod Guaranteed

Ask your dealer for "Pittsburgh Perfect" and insist on his furnishing it. Do not allow him to persuade you that some other fence is just as good. If he doesn't sell it, write us direct.

A FATAL LEAP

Segar McLouth of Adrian who was at Wamplers Lake Sunday started out in his boat ready for a swim, reaching a point where the water was about six foot deep, he made a dive from the boat never rising to the surface, the alarm was given and rescuing parties soon reached the spot where he was last seen, the water was so clear that his body could be plainly seen by those in the boats, two men dove into the water the second one bringing up the body.

Several physicians were in attend- but it was thought that he was dead before he reached the bottom, as his lungs were free from water. A case of paralysis of the heart.

When it was known that nothing further could be done to recussitate the young man the body was taken to the boat house and Adrian relatives notified and later it was taken to Adrian in Mr Nisles auto and left at the Everiss undertaking rooms.

Mr. McLouth was a resident of Adrian nearly all his life and at the time of his death was in charge of the Grocery department at the Central market. He leaves a widowed mother and two sisters to mourn his untimely death.

TOLEDO TO OBSERVE PEACE CENTENARY

The City of Toledo is making great preparations for the coming centennial celebration of Perry's victory which opens Sunday July 27, and continues for the week following.

Mayor Whitlock has issued a proclamation calling on the people of Toledo to decorate their homes and business places with the colors of the nation, and that in the spirit of peace and good will they unite with sincerity and dignity to make this centennial impressive and memorable.

The executive committee are mailing especially embossed invitations to State officials of Ohio, Kentucky, Michigan, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, Virginia, and other States, county and city officials.

It is arranged that the Niagara will sail into the harbor of Toledo O., on Sunday the twenty-seventh of July. She will be convoyed by United States ships especially detailed to tow her and protect her. The convoy together with other ships and such yachts as fall into line will form a naval escort into the harbor.

PRACTICAL BAKING LESSONS

This is the first of a series of lessons which will appear on this page every week. There is a growing interest in home baking, as women are coming to realize that their own baking is far superior to the product of the bake shop and costs much less. In this department I will show you how always to have "good luck" with your baking. This is altogether a matter of having the right materials, putting them together the right way, and properly controlling the oven.

Bread Flour and Pastry Flour

OUR mills make two kinds of flours; one from hard Spring wheat called bread flour, the other from soft Winter wheat called pastry flour. The bread flour has a larger percentage of gluten which dissolves slowly and makes the flour harder to mix, so that it is less desirable than the soft wheat or pastry flour for quick baking. Pastry flour when pressed tightly in the closed hand, should feel soft and pack closely, retaining its form after the hand is opened, and showing the imprints of the fingers. If, on the other hand, the flour seems dry and harsh to the touch, and cannot be pressed dry into a form, it is bread flour, and will give good results only when a slow working leaven like yeast is used.

Pastry flour costs no more than bread flour and it is so much better for cakes, biscuits, muffins and all kinds of pastry that it should be kept on hand and regularly used. Please do not confuse pastry flour with the expensive packages of cake flour or the self-raising flour, which are sometimes called "Pastry Flour" and "Biscuit Flour." If you will remember that bread flour is a Spring wheat flour and pastry flour is a Winter wheat flour, and make it clear to your grocer which you want, you will be sure of getting it.

How to Make Delicious Biscuits

For biscuits let us select pastry flour, a good sweet shortening, a double-raise baking powder and sweet milk or water. Milk is to be preferred, as it browns the biscuits better. First, measure correctly and sift together at least three times, the flour, salt and baking powder. It is important to blend the baking powder thoroughly with the flour. Then with a fork or the finger tips work the shortening thoroughly into the flour and mix to a soft dough with the milk or water—just as soft as can be handled. Roll out very lightly, or better, spread and pat the dough out thin with the hands. Handle as little as possible after wetting. Then cut in small shapes for the oven, for small biscuits are very much better than large ones. If baked quickly, as biscuits should be, a large biscuit does not get the proper heat to raise and bake the center of the biscuit. A small biscuit raises perfectly, bakes better, is more palatable, and is easier to digest.

Biscuits should always be baked on a sheet or in a very shallow pan, as the biscuits should be above the sides of the pan in order to have the heat get to them quickly. If baked in a deep pan the sides shut off the heat, and the biscuits are likely to flatten out and run together and have heavy centers. Never crowd biscuits in a pan, but keep them well apart, allowing a passage between them for heat. The oven should be very hot, so that the biscuits may raise, bake and brown nicely in about 15 minutes.

I mentioned above that a double raise baking powder should be used. This is of especial importance with biscuits. With the old fashioned single acting baking powders it was necessary to have the oven ready so that the biscuits could be put in the moment they were mixed, but with K C Baking Powder you can mix your biscuits hours in advance if you like, letting them stand, and still have perfect biscuit when raised. In fact, it is entirely practical to mix a batch of biscuits before supper, bake what you want for that meal, and set the remainder of the dough away in the ice box until morning, when you can have freshly baked biscuits for breakfast without the loss of a moment's time in mixing. That you can do this with K C Baking Powder is due to the fact that it is virtually a blend of two baking powders, one of which commences to act as soon as the dough is mixed, the other commencing as soon as it is reached by heat. The dough after being mixed, will stay in a partly leavened condition for hours. Then when the heat is applied it will finish raising.

Recipes Worth Saving

Baking Powder Biscuits

3 cups pastry flour.
3 tablespoonfuls shortening.
3 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder
About 1 cup of milk or water.
1 teaspoonful salt.

Graham Biscuits

1½ cups white flour.
1½ cups graham flour.
3 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder
3 tablespoonfuls shortening.
1 level teaspoonful salt.
One cup milk or more if needed. (Graham usually requires more milk.)

Dixie Biscuits

3 cups flour.
3 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder.
3 level tablespoonfuls shortening.
1 cup milk.
Roll in sheet ¼ inch thick, spread with butter Fold over half and cut and bake as other biscuits.

Nut Biscuits

2 cups flour.
1 teaspoonful salt.
3 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder.
3 level tablespoonfuls shortening.
¾ cup milk.
½ cup chopped nuts.

Things to Remember

Use pastry flour and a double acting baking powder, such as K C.
Measure materials correctly.
Mix lightly.
Cut in small shapes.
Use a sheet or very shallow pan.
Have the oven very hot.
If baking on gas, oil or gasoline stove, bake on upper grate; if using a wood or coal range, on the floor of the oven.

Are there any regulations governing appointments to the diplomatic corps?

Yes Initial appointments from outside the service to secretaryships in the diplomatic service shall be only to the classes of third secretary of embassy or, in case of higher existent vacancies, of second secretary of legation or of secretary of legation at such post as has assigned to it but one secretary. Vacancies in secretaryships of higher classes shall be filled by promotion from the lower grades of the service based upon efficiency and ability as shown in the service. The assistant secretary of state, the solicitor of the deparment of state, the chief of the diplomatic bureau, the chief of the bureau of appointments and the chief examiner of the civil service commission or of some person whom the commission shall designate or such persons as may be designated to serve in their stead are constituted a board whose duty it is to determine the qualifications of persons designated by the president for examination to determine their fitness for possible appointment as secretaries of embassy or legation. Separate the yolk from the white of an egg, beat the yolk thoroughly and then beat the white to a froth, add a heaping teaspoonful of sugar, a trifle of salt. Stir these into the yolk and then add the white. Add enough milk to fill the glass and stir. Add either one or one-half 'spoonful of sherry. The salt offsets the flavor of the egg.

To Mend Agate Ware.

When rust has eaten a hole in an agate or enameled ware foot tub or other vessel of similar ware, that is not used on the stove, the hole may be covered by dropping in melted sealing wax; hot water does not affect the wax and when eventually it falls off, it may easily be renewed.—Home Department, National Magazine.

ADAMS PARK

Despite all the efforts of the ladies of the Town and Civic Improvement Club to make Adams Park a place of amusement for the children as well as those of older growth, there seemed to be a few people in town who do all they can to destroy and deface the benches the merry-go round the picnic tables and everything that has been provided by the ladies. Even the fountain has not escaped. Sand and gravel have been put in the basin stopping the flow of water, and converting the ground around the fountain into a bed of mud. Should these miscreants be caught, it might not be well for them.

Treating a Cold.

We like to think that we are much wiser, much more sensible and much further advanced than our ancestors, and so we are perhaps in many ways. Yet almost a hundred and forty years ago John Adams, who was working for his country like many other men and who had no idea that he would one day be president, and that his sayings would be worth quoting, prescribed the most modern sort of treatment for a cold—plenty of fresh air.

REAPING BENEFIT

From the Experience of Tecumseh People.

We are fortunate indeed to be able to profit by the experience of our neighbors. The public utterances of Tecumseh residents on the following subject will interest and benefit many of our readers. Read this statement No better proof can be had,

George D. Chaplin, carpenter, N Ottawa St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I willingly confirm the public statement I gave in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills in December 1905. I have taken this remedy on different occasions since then and have always found that it acts as represented. My kidneys were disordered and made me miserable. Knowing of several people in this vicinity who had used Doan's Kidney Pills with success, I obtained a supply at Wright & Son's Drug store and began using them. The results were very satisfactory and I am in hopes that other kidney sufferers will profit by reading of my experience."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Diplomacy.

Diplomacy is the practical application of strategy, but lots of people term it the double cross.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Rid Your Children of Worms.

You can change fretful, ill-tempered children into healthy, happy youngsters, by ridding them of worms. Tossing, rolling, grinding of teeth; crying out while asleep, accompanied with intense thirst, pains in the stomach and bowels, feverish and bad breath are symptoms that indicate worms. Kickapoo Worm Killer, a pleasant candy lozenge, expels the worms, regulates the bowels, restores your children to health and happiness. Mrs J. A. Brisbin, of Elgin, Ill., says: "I have used Kickapoo Worm Killer for years and entirely rid my children of worms. I would not be without it." Guaranteed. All druggists, or by mail. Price 25c Kickapoo Indian Medicine Co., Philadelphia and St. Louis.

Mason—"Do you think it's unlucky to have 13 at table?" Brown—"Not if the thirteenth is paying for the dinner."

Rheumatism and the Heart

Don't overlook the grave fact that rheumatism easily "settles in the heart," and disturbs the valvular action. The cure consists in removing the cause. Foley Kidney Pills so tone up and strengthen the kidneys that they keep the blood free of poisons and uric acid crystals, that cause rheumatism, swollen joints, backache urinary irregularties, and disturbed heart action. Try them. For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

STEEL, PAST AND PRESENT.

In the Good Old Days Every Gentleman Carried a Sword.

Not many men carry a knife these days, and if they do it is usually only a small penknife, a two-bladed affair, with a silver or pearl handle, one blade for sharpening pencils and for cleaning the nails, and the other for cutting fruit. The big jackknife with an edge like a razor is seldom seen these days. Men now are strenuous and do not sit down to whittle and talk politics as once was the popular pastime.

Fashions have changed greatly concerning this matter of carrying steel, says the Boston Globe. Once upon a time he was a gentleman who had a sword by his side. It was a hard blow to some of the gentry of old Salem when fashion decreed that they must give up their favorite blades. Hawthorne, in his picture of Salem, mentions swords as part of the correct costume of many gentlemen. And there are for eyes of today, some interesting specimens of swords worn in old New England and now contained in the collection of the Essex Institute.

If one is at all interested in swords and knives there are some specimens in Salem which will engage his attention for as long a period as his time will allow. In the Peabody museum are some of the most curious knives in the world, the sacrifical blades of African savages, secured by a member of the Stanley expedition. They are most curiously shaped, for they have irregularly shaped arms from their chief blade.

Then there are some remarkable swords from Japan. A ceremonial sword is about 14 feet long, and very likely two men had to handle it. In contrast with this monster sword are tiny swords, so slender that the American would consider them paper cutters but to the Jap they were deadly weapons, for they were used for thrusting into the skull, and a stab in the brain is as fatal as a stab in the heart.

A blade that is likely to interest many a man is the Chinese razor. This razor is shaped like an American razor, except that it is much shorter, but it never was concaved, and however its Chinese owner ever managed to get a shave with it is more than an ordinary observer can understand. It looks as if it might cut butter, but not bread.

SPARKING DISTANCES IN OIL.

That of the Olive Shows Lowest Insulating Power.

A large number of various oils have been examined with respect to their dialectric strength by E. Jona, the famous electrician of Germany. The charges were derived from an alternating current transformer, yielding voltages as high as 160,000. The oils differ greatly in their insulating powers, but the curves indicating the relation between voltage and maximum sparking distance all tend to become straight lines at voltages higher than 80,000.

Natural olive oil shows the lowest insulating power. Benzol and fused paraffine are at the other extreme, and of these benzol only shows a slight increase of sparking distance for the higher voltages. It begins at 44 centimeters, and only rises to 47 centimeters at a voltage of 160,000. The sparking distances in air show a very much greater increase with voltage than those in any liquid, but they also tend to a straight curve at the higher voltages.

All desiccated oils show a smaller change of sparking distances with the voltage than the corresponding oils do in their ordinary state. Toluol, xylol, and solution of colophony in xylol have nearly the same insulating power as benzol; but the modern vaseline oils used for transformers closely approach them. Benzol is, in any case, too dangerous on account of its inflammability.

To Determine the Age of Pewter.

It has been truly said that "no hard-and-fast dogmatic propositions can be accepted" as regards the age and makers of pewter. At least nine tenths of the pewter of today is without a mark of any description, so that the only way to determine the period to which it belongs is to study the history of pewter and then to arrange the dominant facts in the proper chronological order. For example:

"Straight or slightly curved lines preceded swelling curves; flat, unadorned lids came before domed tops with knobs or crests; few and simple moldings were the forerunners of many and elaborate ones.

"A vessel with the lower part of the handle attached directly to the body is older than the one having a handle connected with it by an intervening peg or strut. The Scottish 'quaigh' differs from the porringer, often incorrectly called a bleeding-vessel in that the former is round-bottomed, the latter flat, and the handles or lugs were always plain, not pierced or otherwise ornamented.

"The older a plate is the broader the brim and the heavier the metal from which it is made. This refers chiefly to large plates."

Motor Cars for Ammunition.

Trials to test the ammunition carrying capabilities of motor cars in war time have recently been going on between Berlin and Kiel. According to report, three cars transported altogether 51 tons of ammunition, and this is considered to be satisfactory.

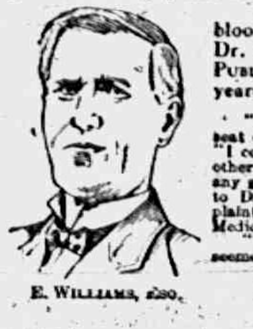
NATURE'S ESSENCE.—Extracted From Forest Plants.

Nature's laws are perfect, but disease follows if these laws are not obeyed. Go straight to nature for the cure, to the forest; there are mysteries here that we can fathom for you. Take the bark of the wild-cherry tree, the root of mandrake, stone, Oregon grape root, queen's root, bloodroot and golden seal, make a scientific, non-alcoholic extract of them with just the right proportions and you have

Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

It took Dr. Pierce, with the assistance of two learned chemists, eight years of hard work experimenting to make this pure glyceric extract and alterative of the greatest efficiency and without the use of a particle of alcohol.



E. WILLIAMS, Esq.

Just the sort of remedy you need to make rich, red blood, and cure that lassitude and feeling of nerve exhaustion. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery bears the stamp of PUBLIC APPROVAL and has sold more largely in the past forty years than any other blood purifier and stomach tonic.

"Some time ago I got out of health—my stomach seemed to be the seat of the trouble," writes MR. EZRA WILLIAMS, of Belleville, Kans. "I commenced to doctor with all the doctors at home as well as with other specialists on stomach and digestive organs. None seemed to do any good—in fact, most of the medicines did me harm. Finally, I wrote to Dr. Pierce, Buffalo N. Y., who replied, stating that I had liver complaint with indigestion and constipation, and advised Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and 'Pleasant Pellets.' "The 'Discovery' and 'Pellets,' have 'put me on my feet again'—seemed to be just what I needed. I could not have recovered without them."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are for liver ills.

The Old Field School

By FRANK M. VANCIL.

Here, 'mid nature's wild and rugged scenes,
With no inviting prospects to adorn,
The latent spark of genius brightened forth—
The greatest lives in history were born.

Backward, far backward, in the dim vistas of bygone years, there is no dearer or more revered spot in memory than that of our early school days. To most of those of advanced years these scenes were enacted amid the primeval shades of the "Old Field School House." This pioneer landmark was conveniently situated upon some country thoroughfare within a grove of natural forest trees, and, if possible, in proximity to a spring of water. The district, of which this rural temple of learning was the nucleus, included an irregular area of twenty or thirty square miles in extent, and embraced an isolated population of from forty to sixty children of school age.

The present system of free schools was unknown in those days. All terms of school were organized and conducted upon the subscription plan, that is, the patrons subscribed to an article of agreement with a teacher for a certain number of pupils at a stated rate of tuition per scholar, and paid therefor out of their own pockets at the close of the term. Board for the teacher was generally included, whereby it became necessary for him to "board round," visiting each patron with a frequency proportionate to the number of pupils sent by him to school. These perambulating sojourns were often very onerous to the schoolmaster, as they frequently took him miles away from the seat of his labors, where, in exceedingly cold weather, his early presence was necessary to have the room comfortable. They were, also, not conducive to preparatory study, nor always rewarded by that quality of diet satisfactory to one engaged in sedentary occupation.

The school building, erected by the volunteer labor of the citizens of the district, was made of logs from the adjacent forest, or hand-made brick, and seldom exceeded in dimension twenty-five or thirty feet square. The furnishings of the room were wholly the handiwork of the amateur mechanics of the neighborhood, and consisted of two or three stout wall-tables some three feet wide and ten feet long, used for writing, and upon which were placed the divers lunch buckets and baskets, and a motley array of sundry wearing apparel not convenient to hang upon the wooden pegs that ornamented all the vacant spaces between the one door and the four little windows of the building.

The seats for the pupils were rough benches of various heights and lengths, made from slabs, and placed parallel to the sides of the room—the lower ones for the smaller pupils on the interior—leaving a central rectangle, at one end of which was the wide-open fireplace and at the other, the ink-bespattered desk of the teacher. There was not a semblance of a blackboard or wall map; and the only decoration, aside from the gauzy network of the geometrical spider in the corners of the ceiling, were the hieroglyphics of "keel" and charcoal on the walls, made by spectacular urchins.

School was called by the loud rappings of the teacher upon the window sash, and the entrance of the mixed throng of knowledge seekers into the room was characterized by an indiscriminate rush for the more desirable seats. It was strictly a case of "first come, first serve," and everywhere there might be observed animated bevies of both sexes in promiscuous and hilarious enjoyment. Nothing but the most flagrant violation of decorum was noticed by the instructor, and the rod and ferule were the panacea for all severe offenses. Pupils came into the school at all hours of the day and no questions asked; and seldom did a teacher rebuke the social communications and sly mischievousness of the young tyro. But wilful misdemeanors and serious disturbances were common, and the severest chastisements were promptly inflicted. There was no schoolboard to which to appeal for assistance in subduing the unruly, and the tutor was truly a monarch of all he surveyed, and governed and controlled the infant republic or abdicated the realm. The contest for supremacy between the teacher and the combined force of disorderly boys was often spirited and sometimes tragical.

"Licken and larnen" were considered indissolubly allied in the Old Field School of antebellum days, and corporal punishment was an everyday occurence. A bunch of strong switches was always kept in store, and it was one of the funniest of tricks of the bad boy to discover these instruments of torture and encircle them with a sharp knife, which while unseen, caused them to fly into numerous pieces when applied. Another lesser punishment was to stand upon the floor, which was sometimes intensified by being required to hold out a book until the arm became semi-paralyzed. A very frequent and most reprehensible correction was the cruel application of the ferule or ruler to the inside of the hand.

The three R's—"Reading, 'Riting and 'Rithmetic," were the chief studies, of no practical importance, and were pursued only by an occasional student of mature years. Outside of spelling and reading there were no regular classes, owing to the great disparity in attainments and diversity of text books. Nearly every publication extant was represented by the students of reading, from the backless Testament to the last year's almanac. Most every one had a copy of Webster's bluebacked speller, which was also used for a reader in the more elementary grades. Others more advanced read from Bible, the Columbian Speaker, and the lives of Washington and Jackson. Fragmentary editions of the Revised Statutes were also to be seen. The copies of arithmetic most in evidence were those of Deboe, Pike and Ray. Slates of elaborate dimensions were exclusively used, and many ciphered out the intricate problems in "Tare and Tret," with bits of soapstone for pencils, gathered from the banks of neighboring streams.

As there is supposed to be a time to or for all things, so there was a time in the Old Field School set apart exclusively for writing. The copy book was a home product, made from the blue fool's cap paper, and the pens were fashioned from goose quills, under the skillful hand of the teacher. Copies were set suitable to the various capacities of the pupils, and ranged in character all the way from the initiatory step of "Pot-hooks," to that of "Many men of many minds." The writing class sat before the ponderous table facing the wall, and the only time of the day's session in school in which there was an approximation to quietness in the room was the half hour devoted to writing broken only by the musical squeak of two dozen goose quill pens.

The study of spelling was made very prominent and the recitations were always oral. The classes lined up in a long row, and the words of the lesson were pronounced to each pupil in turn. When a word was misspelled, the pupil below who spelled it correctly took his place above the one who missed it, and the pupil standing at the head of the class at the close of the recitation was given a head mark, and took his place next day at the foot of the class. The pupil obtaining the greatest number of head marks during the term of school was given a premium at the close. Then there were spelling matches in the evening—a season of unbridled fun and frolic. Two captains were designated, who "chose up," and the house was divided, as nearly every one spelt, and a battle royal raged for supremacy. The most exciting time came when both sides stood up and "spelled down"—each contestant sitting down on missing a word. This contest was often prolonged, for there were good spellers at that time, and it frequently happened that some diminutive pupil—most generally a little girl—would hold a half-dozen stalwart opponents in check, and ofttimes come off victorious.

A prominent incident, ever connected with a winter term of school, and one which was looked forward to as a red-letter day, was the "Christmas Treat." It was an unwritten law, sanctioned by universal custom, that the teacher must give to the pupils of the school not only a holiday on Christmas, but also a bountiful repast of apples, or cakes and candy. Very often this demand was positively refused, and then came the dangerous sport of "turning the teacher out and making him treat." To accomplish this, the schoolroom, in his temporary absence, was securely barricaded, so as to prevent ingress, while a force of the largest boys remained on the outside to guard against the possibility of entrance or the escape of the teacher from the premises. The penalty of a noncompliance was a ducking in some nearby stream or pond of water, the icy nature of which usually enforced a tardy and sullen compliance.

The recreative sports and amusements of the old country schools were many and varied in character. The boys mostly engaged in what were termed "Town ball," "Mumble peg," and "Roly poly," while the girls played "Puss wants her corner," "Jumping the rope," "Ante over," "Ring round rosy," and other more quiet games. Jumping, foot racing and "blackman" were also favorite pastimes of the boys; and skating, coasting and snow balling were highly enjoyed in midwinter. Attending all these were innumerable little joyous pleasure of youthful associations that have passed with the age of the olden times. "The grape vine swing is ruined," and bright-eyed boys and girls no longer, as of yore, troop the sylvan shades in nutting parties, search for wild strawberries in the meadows, or ramble beside the icy-fettered brook in early springtime, bedecked with nature's earliest floral offerings of "Johnny jump ups," and pendent blue bells. The cherished, halcyon scenes come back to us, but only upon the silent, mystic wings of memory.

Negative Virtues.

Beware of making your moral staple consist of the negative virtues. It is good to abstain, and teach others to abstain, from all that is sinful or hurtful. FLOWERS WITH EYES.

Touch Sensitiveness of Plants—The Capabilities of Sea Weeds.

Holding up his hand in front of a desert shrub an experimenter recently has taken a microphotograph showing half a dozen distinct images of his fingers formed by the eyes of the plant.

Many common garden and wild flowers—the nasturtium, begonia, clover, wood sorrel and bluebell among others—possess eyes situated on their leaves. They are minute protuberances filled with a transparent gummy matter which focuses the rays of light onto a sensitive patch of tissue at the back of it in a similar manner to that in which the eyes of an animal do their work.

A common nasturtium plant has thousands of such eyelets on its leaves, forming thousands of minute images of the objects around them. But though a plant may have eyes it does not follow that it sees. It is not yet known it the sense impressions are telegraphed to some central nerve exchange corresponding to the brain of the animal.

In addition to these light sense organs many plants possess a touch sensitiveness and a response to electric stimuli that show farther resemblances to the animal world, while ferns, mosses and seaweeds in an early stage of their existence are capable of actually swimming through water.

GENERAL NEWS.

CHRISTIANA, NORWAY — Mysterious stories of an attempt to kill the ten-year-old Crown Prince Olaf have caused a great commotion. An armed man was found hiding a week ago in the gardens where little Olaf plays. The man was arrested, but the fact was hushed up by the police. It is reported that the queen was prostrated and sobbed for hours, repeatedly saying that the royal family must leave the country, and that a bill now before the storthing virtually puts a premium on Olaf's head. That bill provides that if the king and the queen die without a male heir Norway shall become a republic.

CHICAGO — Postmaster Campbell said that he expects to receive from Washington early this week definite instructions as to how the new improvements in the parcel post service shall be put into effect. Commenting on the fact that the department had decided on increasing the maximum weight of parcels from eleven pounds to twenty pounds and that there was to be a reduction of rates and a simplification of service, he said: The department order doing away with the distinctive stamps and permitting ordinary postage stamps to be used on parcels was an excellent thing."

NEW YORK — A man who remarries after the death of his wife ceases to bear any relationship to the dead woman and therefore has no control over her body. This, in effect, was the decision of Justice Philbin in deciding that George B. Stone could not remove the body of his wife from a plot in Woodlawn cemetery to a single grave, so that he might sell the plot. Stone told the court that the plot where his wife was buried cost $1,700 and he needed the money he could get by selling it. A sister of the dead woman opposed the removal.

LONDON, ENG.—Anna Held had a narrow escape in an automobile smash while motoring from London to Brighton. The driver of the car was a French count, who, unfamiliar with the English rules of the road, was trying to avoid a collision with another vehicle when he overturned the car. Miss Held and her maid were pinned to the ground. The actress was painfully bruised and complained of shock, but was able to proceed to Brighton in another car.

SAN DIEGO, CAL. — U. S. Grant, Jr., who recently married Mrs. America Will, a young widow a week ago issued invitations for a dinner to celebrate the wedding. Many of the invitations were unanswered and dinner was finally abandoned. Mr. Grant's own children refuse to recognize the bride and the only one who appeared for the dinner was the youngest son, who is an undergraduate at Harvard.

WASHINGTON — President Wilson has granted unconditional pardons to William F. Kettenbach and George H. Kester, each sentenced to five years' imprisonment for making false reports to the comptroller of the currency on the condition that Lewiston (Idaho) National bank, of which they were president and cashier respectively. They were convicted April 4, 1911, but have not served any of their sentences.

PARIS, TENN. — F. E. Eubanks and Miss Gertrude E. Fuller of Marion, Ill., were married here after an exciting race against the telegraph. The couple eloped to Paduca, but found their plans had been forestalled by telegrams from the young woman's parents. They took the train to Paris and were married two minutes before a telegram to the county clerk asked him not to issue the license.

NEW YORK — While busily engaged in household duties at her home, Mrs. Patrick Vaughn, wife of a chauffuer, was seized with a violent fit of sneezing and coughing. A violent paroxysm brought from his wife's throat the remnants of a bullet which was accidentally shot into her head thirty years ago. In half an hour Mrs. Vaughn was ready to start on a vacation she had planned to begin.

MEXICO CITY — Five more arrests were made in the plot to assassinate President Huerta, Minister of War Blanquet and General Felix Diaz, provisional comander-in-chief of the army. Sixteen are now held. In a house in Guadaloupe, a suburb, which the conspirators used for their headquarters, several hundred rifles and revolvers and 6,000 rounds of ammunition were found.

LONDON, ENG. — The court circular announces the engagement of Prince Arthur of Connaught and the Duchess of Fife. The couple are second cousins. The duchess who was born May 17, 1891, is the daughter of King George's eldest sister. Prince Arthur of Connaught is the son of King George's uncle.

Klaas De Witt, one of the pioneers of western Michigan and the oldest citizen of Holland, celebrated his ninety-third birthday anniversary Sunday.

PRESIDENT CHOOSES NEW LABOR BOARD

W. L. Chambers Appointed Commissioner of Mediation.

President Woodrow Wilson has selected William L. Chambrs of the District of Columbia to be commissioner of mediation and conciliation under the Newlands act, and G. W. W. Hanger as his assistant. Their names will be sent to the senate.

The other two members of the new board will be Judge Martin Klapp of the United States commerce court and Louis F. Post, assistant secretary of labor.

Mr. Chambers, chosen to head the board, was at one time chief justice of the international court at Samoa and since 1901 has been a member of the Spanish treaty claims commission.

Mr. Hanger is chief statistician of the bureau of labor statistics and acting head of the bureau since the resignation of Dr. Neill.

Judge Knapp is presiding judge of the United States commerce court.

UNION WORKERS INCREASING

Organizations of Women Grow Fast—Most in Clothing Trades.

The bulletin of the New York state department of labor says that the number of labor organizations in this state on March 31, 1913, was 2,530, with a membership of 638,818, an increase of sixty-one organizations and 112,146 members since last September.

The increase of organized women for this period was relatively much greater than among the men, the increase among the former being eighty-nine per cent. Eighty-five per cent of the women are in the clothing trades in New York city.

MANY PEOPLE ARE MISSING

Chicago Police Search for Thirty—Many from Illinois Points.

The Chicago police are searching for thirty persons who have disappeared from their homes, been kidnaped or fled from institutions recently.

Chief of Police J. A. Gay of Springfield, Ill., telegraphed to Chief of Detectives Halpin asking him to watch for the arrival of the kidnapers of a seventeen year old boy. The name of the boy was not mentioned in the message, which said he was being taken to California by his abductors and that the latter may pass through Chicago.

Others reported lost are: Charles W. Cunningham, fifteen years old, vanished five weeks ago from his uncle's farm at Antioch, Ill.; Paul Hornday, twelve years old, Bridgeport, Ill., disappeared July 9.

The police also were asked to try to find relatives of a man believed to have been Anton Scotz, who was run over and killed by a train on the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railroad tracks in Tuscola, Ill.

Car Upsets; Kills Girl.

At Corry, Pa., Samuel Paterson of Warren lost control of his automobile at Dugall. The machine ran off the road and turned over in a ravine. Libby Simmons, aged sixteen, was caught under the car and killed. Gladys Long had both legs broken. Mr. and Mrs. Simmons, parents of Libby, Paterson and his daughter, the other occupants of the car were not hurt.

Battle Creek's Y. W. C. A. has raised $17,000 toward buying a site and equipping a new building, which will be erected with $50,000 recently donated by Prof. I. L. Stone.

F. A. Mansfield of Grand Haven was robbed of $482 Saturday night while boarding a Lake Shore train in Kalamazoo. Police believe the pickpocket boarded the same train with his victim.

David J. Downs of Algonac was drowned in St. Clair river, opposite Algonac, Sunday night, when he fell from a gasoline launch. Three companions in the boat with him were unable to rescue him. The body was recovered.

Judge North has directed a verdict of $2,782 in favor of George Howard of Albion in his suit against Receiver Irwin of the Albion National bank. This was the amount of a deposit made by Howard the day before the bank failed, and Howard claimed that the officers of the bank knew when they accepted the money that the institution was insolvent. The receiver will pay the judgment out of the first moneys that come into his hands as receiver.

Announcement is made that the Escanaba Lumber Co., whose factory at Masonville was destroyed by fire last year, will build a double band saw mill, with all its accessories, at Pike Lake, on the Soo line, at which station it will erect a large boarding house and 50 cottages. This location is convenient to the company's timber supply. The decision of the company appears to mark the final decay of old Masonville, once the seat of Delta county government, but now practically a deserted village.

BLIND FIFTY YEARS; SIGHT IS RESTORED

Children and Grandchildren Seen for First Time.

CHICAGO—A modern miracle occurred at Hillsdale, Mich. For the first time in her life Mrs. Mary J. Welsh saw her eight children and four grandchildren. The miracle was described at the Wesley hospital as a "simple operation," but it was none the less wonderful to the woman and her family, who spent the happiest day of their lives.

Fifty years ago, when Mrs. Welsh was sixteen years old, her eyesight failed and she became blind. Later, after she had married, she consulted physicians and was told that for $300 she could be operated upon and her eyesight restored. The necessary $300 might as well have been $3,000,000 as the family was in reduced circumstances.

A short time ago money was raised by the Rev. Howard Fisher of the Hillsdale Methodist church to pay for the operation on Mrs. Welsh's eyes. She was put aboard a train and pinned across her breast was a placard reading: "I Am Blind. I Am Going to Wesley Hospital, Chicago. Please Direct Me."

The operation took place two weeks ago. When the bandage was taken off her eyes she felt stunned, seemed surprised, then burst into sobs.

"I can see! I can see!" she cried. "I prayed that I might be made able to see and now I see everything before me."

Then she went home to her children and her joy was complete when she beheld her relatives in the flesh.

"All of you look just like I imagined you did!" she exclaimed.

HUNTERS WOUNDED IN DUEL

Battle Creek Posse Now Scouring Swamps for Victor.

BATTLE CREEK — Police officers, deputy sheriffs, and city firemen, armed with rifles, are searching the marshes and swamps east of this city for an unknown Italian, who shot and fatally wounded Tom King, an Australian.

King is in a hospital, suffering from two wounds inflicted by the Italian, when they engaged in a duel in a prairie east of the city. Both were members of a hunting party, and become involved in an argument. A challenge was accepted by the Italian, and the two squared off a hundred feet.

The man wanted is wounded in the arm, according to witnesses. City firemen were sent to aid the police in running the Italian down. King has no chance for recovery.

MAY SUCCEED KNAPPEN

Politicians Believe Kalamazoo Representative Will Be New Judge.

LANSING — Many of the state house politicians are of the opinion that Representative W. L. Fitzgerald, of Kalamazoo, one of the prominent Democratic leaders in the last legislature, will be named by Governor Ferris as successor to the late Judge Frank H. Knappen of Kalamazoo.

Whoever is appointed will hold only until the next election. This is the first time that Governor Ferris has had an opportunity to appoint a circuit judge.

The name of Claude S. Carney, Democratic candidate for congress, has also been mentioned.

THIEVES RODE IN AUTO

Burglars Smash Doors and Rob as Family Naps.

ADRIAN—A band of daring burglars who came in an automobile, and it is believed administered chloroform to all of the members of the family of John Whittman, living near Deerfield, got away with $200 in cash and a large quantity of silver.

The doors or the home was broken open with a crowbar, and drawers were smashed with the same instrument, but the family did not know of it until they awoke.

Grasping a wire carrying 7,200 volts and suffering no injury beyond being thrown to the ground, was the experience of William Spence, 12 years old, of Muskegon. The wire had been left unguarded by linemen.

The barn of George L. Burroughs in Saginaw county was struck by lightning and burned to the ground. The barn was full of hay and the biggest in the county. The loss is about $15,000, partly covered by insurance.

A hen that lays eggs of abnormal size, the shells of which bear biblical inscriptions and other mystic letters has stirred the religious colony of Mary and Benjamin, known as Israelites, which is located at Benton Harbor.

During a severe storm Saturday lightning put many telephones out of commission and caused much other light damage at Alpena. Dr. Otto Bertram, while talking over a telephone, sustained a shock and was rendered unconscious.

C. E. LITTLEFIELD

Mulhall Says He Paid $500 Bribe to Elect Him Representative.

In his testimony before the senate lobby investigators Colonel Mulhall of Baltimore told of the part played by him for the N. A. M. in campaigns in Pennsylvania, New York and Maine. In the fight in Maine for the re-election of Representative Charles E. Littlefield he said he had bribed Dr. G. L. Crockett, a prominent Democratic orator, with $500 to speak against Samuel Gompers and in favor of Mr. Littlefield.

The annual Clinton county fair will be held Sept. 30 and Oct. 1, 2 and 3 at St. Johns.

LEXINGTON, KY. — The carmen's strike has been settled here. The strikebreakers brought from New York were sent back. The company has consented to recognize the union and the union agrees to have prices fixed by order of arbitration.

Donald Dunham, 10-year-old son of Mrs. H. M. Dunham of Alma, had a narrow escape from death Saturday, when gasoline saturated his trousers and ignited while he was burning some weeds. He smothered the flames by rolling in the grass, but his legs were frightfully burned.

At its annual meeting at Cass City, the Farm Produce Co., a stock company in which many prominent farmers are interested, declared a dividend of 6 per cent on its paid up capital stock and the following farmers were elected directors: I. K. Reid, Hugh Cooper, George Hall, N. A. Perry, W. J. Schwegler, J. A. Benkelman and James Wilson. The amount of $4,378 represents the dividends paid for the three years the company has been in business, and after paying this sum, there still remains a net profit of $4,000, which is carried into a surplus fund. The company has a capital of $19,640.

Farmer Spear, which was winner of the trotting stake during the first day of the Short Ship circuit races at Saginaw, and which established the record of 2:12¼, the fastest mile made on a half-mile track during the present season, was sold Saturday to O. W. Parcell, Bad Axe, for $10,000. The horse was the property of Fred M. Thompson, Jackson, who entered him under the name of C. F. Cowham in the Short Ship circuit. Purcell is an importer and exporter of heavy draft animals, and it is understood Farmer Spear will be shipped to Europe, where, it is rumored, the horse will be sold to an English horseman for $12,000. When the option of $5,000 expired on Farmer Spear over a week ago at Port Huron, Thompson refused an offer of $6,000.

CLOSES SHOP WHILE HE TAKES VACATION

Holland, Mich., Merchant is in Business to Live.

HOLLAND—This city has a clothing merchant who is in the business rather as a convenience and when there are indications of inconvenience, he displays no compunction about turning the key in his door and sailing for the Netherlands to visit his mother.

Next week will mark the third time in eight years that the merchant, John Vanderpoel, has temporarily gone out of business to return to his native country, and the fifth time in that period that he has made the trip.

Five years ago he closed out his stock and two years ago stored in, resuming business on his return several months later. He expects to return in September, but this time will leave the stock undisturbed.

Mr. Vanderpoel is a bachelor, and enjoys a thriving business. His trade knows his hobby and consequently his business prestige does not suffer.

FORMER PASTOR DIVORCED

Got Drunk, Took Baby to Saloons, Tried to Swindle, Etc.

ANN ARBOR — Charging extreme cruelty and desertion, Mrs. Bessie Conant obtained a divorce from Ray Conant, formerly a Methodist minister in Windsor, Ont.

Mrs. Conant alleged that shortly after their marriage in Windsor in 1909, her husband became a drunkard.

When intoxicated Mr. Conant would smash the furniture and beat her. Later after the baby came, he would take the child to a saloon, and allow it, she alleged, to witness shocking scenes of drunkenness and debauchery.

Mrs. Conant alleged that her husband assisted in an attempt to rob a farmer in Detroit. Because he failed in the alleged attempt, he took the first boat for Windsor, and she says broke up the baby's high chair.

BAY CITY BOY IS DROWNED

Swims for Aid While Companions Cling to Boat.

BAY CITY—"Good-bye, Fred, old boy, hang on and keep up your nerve." With thes words Sam Asherton released his handclasp with Fred Wilds on the bottom of their upturned craft, three miles from the closest shore of Saginaw bay, and jumped into the water to attempt to swim ashore.

Two hours later Andrew Wilds, brother of Fred, had started the swim for aid for the other two. He had not been heard from since and searching parties patroled the shore all day and evening looking for his body.

Asherton and Fred Wilds were picked up by a launch after they had been in the water five hours, the former half way in to shore and the latter clinging to the boat.

A. H. Pickett, chief clerk at Jackson prison, has tendered his resignation to Warden Simpson, to take effect September 20. Pickett has been employed at the prison for the last 20 years, having held the positions of private secretary to the warden and purchasing agent. He was appointed chief clerk by Warden Simpson.

Getting out a country weekly newspaper is not exciting enough for William McDowell, editor of the Tustin Times, and he has agreed to be the bridegroom in a marriage which will take place in an aeroplane at the annual Wexford county fair in September. In return he will get a lot and full equipment for a house. The young woman is a popular Wexford county girl, but her name is not yet made public.

MELLEN-ELLIOTT

Head of New Haven Road, Who Resigned and Probable Successor.

Charles S. Mellen (at top), president of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, has been in hot water since the series of fatal wrecks on the system under his control, and it is believed his resignation was not unwelcome to the stockholders in the company. Howard Elliott, who may be his successor, is an experienced railroad man. He succeeded Mr. Mellen as president of the Northern Pacific in 1903.

Mrs. Charles Buzzell of Twin Lake was run over by a freight train Saturday morning and killed instantly.

Thomas Hanlon, the 10-year-old Jackson boy who was run over by a circus train Friday and both his feet cut off, died Saturday.

Wilda Phillips of Dowagiac lies at her home in a dangerous condition as the result of burns received when a gas-water heater exploded in a bathroom.

Charged with the abduction of Mary Jensen, 14, George Franks, who was arrested at Grant, was released when he introduced the girl to her father as Mrs. Franks.

Fred Kaiser, 45 years old, a farmer of Spalding township, was taken to the county jail and arraigned Monday on a charge of a serious offense against his 12-year-old daughter.

Work on the overhead bridge at the fatal gulch crossing of Marshall has been commenced by the Michigan Central at a cost of $20,000. It is a grade crossing and has claimed nearly a dozen lives in the last six years.

Ligouri and Perry Foy, young sons of Stave Foy of Merrill, who were thought to have been burned to death in the burning of Foy's barn Thursday night, were found at a neighbor's. They escaped from the barn during the fire.

The Antrim county alfalfa campaign began at Elk Rapids Tuesday and continues for three days. The campaigners will work north until them reach the Charlevoix county line, then make a sweep around the end of Torch Lake and go south to the county seat.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

FRENCH BEST LANGUAGE.

Paris and London Correspondents Transmit Messages in Record Time.

Long distance telephoning has become a little science on its own account, and has called into existence a class of operators who are valuable by reason of the clearness and sharpness with which they can pronounce words while speaking rapidly.

It has also developed the fact that the French language is better adapted to the purposes of the telephone than the English. The ordinary business of the long-distance telephone between Paris and London is frequently carried on in the French language.

It is stated that the considerable proportion of hissing syllables in English renders it a less easy and accurate means of communication. Certain English words are especially difficult of transmission by telephone. The word "soldier" is cited as one of these.

Proper names frequently occur, in the midst of an otherwise perfectly audible and intelligible conversation, which the ear cannot catch. These must be spelled out, involving delay.

Expert 'phone operators in the press service between Paris and London have succeeded in transmitting messages in the French language at the rate of 190 words a minute. This is at a much swifter rate than ordinary speech.—Scientific American.

Dickens's Cramped Quarters.

"Bleak House" at Broadstairs, which has failed to find a purchaser, is of interest to the Dickens lover because the greater part of "David Copperfield" was written there. But it is not the Bleak House of the novel, which is definitely located in Hertfordshire. The novelist and his family appear to have been somewhat tightly packed in their Broadstairs home.

When Lord Carlisle contemplated paying a visit to "Our watering place" in 1851 Dickens wrote promising him the North Foreland Lighthouse for a night light in his bedroom and he continues: "As we think of putting mignonette boxes outside the windows for the younger children to sleep in by and by I am afraid we should give your servant the cramp if we hardily undertook to lodge him." During the last few years the house has been transformed out of all recognition.—London Chronicle.

Not Fuel for an Automobile.

When a young South Side couple tried to start their automobile for a trip through Mill Creek Park, they were greatly puzzled when the machine refused to make any signs of action.

"What's the matter with the thing," cried the husband, "I just filled it with gasolene last night."

"That's odd," replied the wife, "I noticed the can untouched in the cellar a few minutes ago."

"In the cellar" retorted the husband; "why, I got this in the kitchen."

"No wonder the machine will not run," hysterically laughed the young woman, "you have filled the car with maple syrup."—Youngstown Telegram.

Where the Parson Scored.

A certain sceptic was contending before a minister that the work of the Creator was manifestly imperfect. "Have you not yourself," he asked, "noted defects in the human organism for instance, and thought of better contrivances?"

To his delight there was the frank reply, "Why, yes, I really think I have."

"Why," drawled the parson, "you see, when I want to shut out anything disagreeable from my sight I can draw down my eyelids and it's all done, but unfortunately I haven't any flaps to my ears."

Free conversation ceased at about that point.—Christian Guardian.

A Gladstone Receipt.

At a country house one morning the guests were discussing at breakfast the right way of packing a sponge bag, when the sponge has been used and is consequently waterlogged.

Mr. Gladstone, who had apparently been solely absorbed by his morning's correspondence, suddenly closed the discussion by informing the party that they were all wrong.

"The only proper method is to wrap it up in your bath towel, and stamp upon it. Then put it in your sponge bag. You will find it perfectly dry.—Travel and Exploration.

Volcano Region to Be Reservation.

An executive order is being prepared in the office of the Governor-General declaring the region about Taal volcano to be a public reservation and prohibiting residence thereon.

The exact terms of the order have not been given out, but it is believed that it will be modelled on the regulations applied to Taal during Spanish days, when no one was allowed to settle on the volcanic island or on the west shore of the lake.—Manila Times.

The Way of the Transgressor.

When Miss Cheney, one of the popular teachers in the Swarthmore schools, had to deal with a boy who played "hookey" she failed to impress him with the evil of his ways.

"Don't you know what becomes of little boys who stay away from school to play baseball?" asked Miss Cheney.

"Yessum," replied the lad promptly "Some of 'em gits to be good players and pitch in the big leagues."

The Smooth Way.

In the last generation Tyler Cobb, Esq., was a well-known citizen of North Bridgewater, now Brockton,—Massachusetts. He was famous throughout Plymouth County, says a contributor to the Boston Herald, for his witty retorts and dry humor.

Never having taken a sea trip, Mr. Cobb one day conceived the idea of making a voyage to New York. Accordingly he sailed from Boston in a small schooner.

The first day out a storm was encountered and Mr. Cobb became violently sick, but after several hours he mustered up courage and strength to look out upon the troubled waters.

As he looked from the side of the little ship up the trough of the sea, it seemed very smooth to him. The captain's cutting of the waves was "senseless," he told himself.

But as this mad steering continued, the unhappy passenger finally crawled out, on hands and knees, to where the captain stood at the wheel, and raising his voice above the dine of waves and wind, shouted:

"Man, man, keep in the ruts, keep in the ruts!"

SUBSTITUTE FOR OPIUM.

A Deadly Indian Weed That Is Cheap and Can Easily Be Smuggled.

The Indian weed is being largely imported into Indo-China at the present moment, says our informant, who holds a high position in the military world. He has given us a sprig or two of the hemp plant, which obviously lends itself to the uses of smugglers. With first hand knowledge of his subject he declared that this weed, more pernicious than opium or alcohol, will in the near future take the place of opium in the far East.

"It is of small bulk, this deadly weed, is cheap in comparison with its elder brother, opium, and can be smuggled easily. The opium convention does not, as far as we know, take acount of the danger which threatens from the importation of this drug.

The French authorities in Indo-China absolutely prohibit the hemp plant, but nevertheless it is being taken into the country in ever increasing quantities. It can be used as a drink, can be smoked or chewed; the physical and mental effects are deadly.

We have not been able to ascertain as yet whether this noxious drug has made its appearance in Hongkong, but we take this opportunity of calling attention of the authorities to the danger of it doing so. It is a danger that should exercise the thoughts of the legislative council.

This noxious weed is smoked much by the lowest class of natives in South Africa, where it is known under the name of dahgha and causes many crimes, the Bushmen and Hottentots running amuck when saturated with its hellish effects.—Hongkong Telegraph.

An Immense Flower.

The largest of all the flowers of the world is said to be the Rafflesia, a native of Sumatra, so called after Sir Stamford Raffles. This immense flower is composed of five round petals of a brickish color, each measuring a foot across. These are covered with numerous irregular yellowish white swellings.

The petals surround a cup nearly a foot wide, the margin of which bears the stamens. The cup of the Rafflesia is filled with a fleshy disk, the upper surface of which is covered with projections like miniature cows horns. The cup when free from its contents will hold about twelve pints. The flower weighs about fifteen pounds and is very thick, the petals being three-quarters of an inch.—Scientific American.

Why He Trembled.

A detachment of British soldiers was about to attack a tribe of rebel Indian tribesmen, who awaited them drawn up in battle order. A seasoned old sergeant noticed a young soldier fresh from home visibly affected by the nearness of the coming fight. His face was pale, his teeth chattered and his knees tried hard to knock each other out. It was sheer nervousness, but the sergeant thought it was downright funk.

"Callaghan," he whispered, "is it trimblin' ye are for yer own dirty skin?"

"N-no, sergint," replied Callaghan making a brave attempt to still his shaking limbs. "O'im trimblin' for the inimy. They don't know Callaghan's here."—London Ideas.

Gallipolis, Ohio.

"Very often residents of my home town when in Washington are asked the origin of the name," said Robert Mauch Switzer, member of Congress from Gallipolis, Ohio, "and it is explained that the town was laid out by a party of French emigrants in the early part of the century. They had been assured of fortune and all comforts in this land of the free, but they had rather a hard time of it at the start. They called the county Gallia and the town Gallipolis in honor of Gaul, which was divided in three parts, as we read in our Caeser during school days. Out of this French settlement grew a good town, and several decendants of the first settlers are living there to-day."—Washington Post.

The Irony of Fate.

"There are some times in my life when I have felt that fate is indeed ironical," said the man who was seldom troubled by his debts.

"Do you refer to any special occasions?" inquired one of his oldest creditors.

"One of them came last week when I was in Chicago," said the cheerful debtor. "I had a money order for $25 and the only person who could identify me was a man to whom I owed $30."—Youth's Companion.

Arizona Teachers' Outing.

Two schoolmarms, Miss Greer and Miss Agnews, pulled out of town horseback with pack animals to make a 700 miles journey, first to the petrified forest near Holdbrook, thence to the ice caves of Mt. Baldy, near Flagstaff, and from there to the Grand Canon of the Colorado.

These intrepid ladies go by themselves without male escort, and are well armed to keep off insurrectos and wild animals.—Clifton Copper Era.

England's Population.

At the death of Charles II, in 1685, England's population was estimated at between 5,000,000 and 5,500,000. The registrar-general's estimate for 1910 gives a total for the United Kingdom of 45,000,000.

A Boy Just the Same.

Little curly-headed, four-year-old Joe had often been mistaken for a girl by reason of those same beautiful curls, but it was a very sore point with him. He came very near, however, turning it to advantage one afternoon when his six-year-old sister was giving a birthday party "for girls only." Poor little Joe wandered around the refreshments spread on the grass, gazing wistfully at the cookies and lemonade which his sister was serving to her little girl guests. "No, Joe, this party is only for little girls, and no boys can come." Then poor little Joe turned past taunts into an argument that would admit him, and wailed out, "Well, Titter, I ain't much of a boy, anyway."—The Delineator.

World's Iron Ore.

The world has only 10,000,000,000 tons of iron ore available. Of these Germany has twice as many tons as the United States. Russia and France each have 400,000,000 tons more than this country. Our consumption is placed at 35,000,000, which is more than a third of the world's total consumption.

SOME CURIOUS SPOONS.

Uses to Which They Were Put by People a Few Centuries Ago.

We are familiar nowadays with spoons of many shapes intended for every variety of purpose, but some old fashioned styles are now merely curiosities. There is the old fashioned marrow spoon, for instance, which was used for extracting marrow from bones. It was made double, one end being used for small bones, and the other for those of larger bore.

Another example is the mulberry spoon. This has a perforated bowl and a spiked and pointed handle, says the London Globe. The implements were made for use in a day when mulberries were much more commonly eaten than they are at the present time. With the perforated bowl a little sugar was sprinkled on the berry, which was then conveyed to the mouth on the spiked end of the handle.

The introduction of tea led to the making of a variety of new kinds of spoons, including the necessary teaspoon itself, some of which still remain in use, while others have disappeared. At South Kensington may be seen for example, a curious collection of the little scoops so well known to our greatgrandmothers as "caddy spoons." Tea caddies of the old-fashioned kind have long been superseded, and when the caddy with its two lidded and metal lined end compartments and the sugar bowl in the cavity between went out of use the caddy spoon or scoop disappeared also.

Another obsolete curiosity is the snuff spoon, which, in the days when nearly everybody took snuff, and took it everywhere, was used for conveying the scented powder from the box to the hand, or in some cases direct to the nose. Candle spoons and pap spoons also are out of date. A Llangollen gentleman, a few months ago, wrote in a Shropshire paper that he had in his possession a silver pap spoon which had been originally given by the Marquis of Exeter to a member of the Hoggins family of Bolas. The possessor of this spoon remarked that it had been given to him by his father, with the wish that it should be handed over to the first married in each succeeding generation, for as such it had come to him through the intermarriage of the two families in years gone by.

Three hundred years ago there was one at Ilford, in Essex, which held more than a quart. Others of more legitimate make were such as the curious combination implement with which folk of that date were familiar. When most people still dipped their fingers into the general dish to help themselves to meat, more dainty diners carried about with them an implement which was a combination of spoon and fork and toothpick.

The fork was at the back of the spoon, while the handle of the double article was finished off with a little figure terminal, which served as handle for the toothpick. The terminal figure was a very favorite form of spoon ornamentation.

It is most familiar in the Apostle spoons, of which original sets fetch such high prices and of which latter-day imitations are so abundant; but the figures were by no means confined to the Apostles. In some cases the spoons were curiously finished with double heads, which can hardly have conduced, one would think to convenience of handling. A curious but decidedly unpleasant form of ornament gave its name to the "death's head" spoon, which was made for commemorative purposes—a very unattractive kind of "memento mori."

Success in Trout Flies.

In a quiet little home in Los Angeles Mrs. Frances Brown is making a good living preparing artificial flies for trout anglers. Mrs. Brown, a widow and formerly a school teacher, hit on the idea of preparing flies for the trout from the complaints of her pupils, who told how the fish ate the bait but escaped the hook.

She began by fashioning worms on silk, wool, thread, floss and chenille, and her wares were put on sale in stores dealing in sportsmen's goods. After a trial the fishermen came back enthusiastically for more, and several friends gave Mrs. Brown suggestions which enabled her to extend her business. Now she has half a dozen girls working for her, and even then she hardly can keep up with the orders. The bait is made so skilfully that the oldest and wisest trout are deceived.—Los Angeles Express.

How Chinese Trap Eagles.

Thousands of Chinese hunters trap wild eagles in Mongolia every year by the employment of tame eagles as decoys. They carry the tame eagles on their shoulders and when a likely locality is reached they arrange nets, within which are placed large quantities of bait, usually small fish.

Operating lines are stretched to a distance of about 500 yards from the nets and when the wild birds have joined the tame ones at the feast these nets are brought into action. The value of the capture depends upon the condition of the feathers, which are used for fans. Only the largest feathers are of use, and a fan of black feathers, white near the middle, brings as high as $25.—London Globe.

The Might of One Man.

The dwellers in Kensington's most charming and Old World square can now sleep o' nights without fear that the too enterprising "flat" builders will encroach on the green turf and greener trees of Edwardes Square and turn it into a wilderness of bricks and mortar. For—and this is where the Edwardes Squareites score—there still exists the old charter, which provides that so long as there is a male resident in the square the property must be left intact. This is a great joy to the dwellers thereon, many of whom have promptly proceeded to become absolute owners of their houses.—Lady's Pictorial.

Good and Bad Corsets.

The good corset is laced about the hips and holds its place independent of garters or straps. It has a straight front. It is only form fitting or loose about the waist and bust. It does not diminish the waist measure. It laces from below upward by means of two or more lace strings. A bad corset exercises its greatest compression about the waist and diminishes its measure from two to four inches. It is loose about the hips and held down by garters or by the tight lacing above.—American Medical Association.

A FAMILY GATHERING

The home of Mrs. M. Ide was the scene of a pleasant gathering Thursday July 24, when her brothers, Dr. J. B. Haines of Dundee, Chester Haines and wife of Adrian, Mr. and Mrs Clyde Harris of Adrian, and Mrs. Lyons and grandchildren of Detroit, met together. Mrs. Fred Postal, Mrs. Ide's granddaughter of Evart was also a guest. Mrs. Annette Crossman and other relatives in town were also present.

NATIONAL GUARD CALLED OUT FOR STRIKE IN U. P. COPPER DISTRICT

Governor Ferris and Adviser prepare for an Emergency

The entire National Guard of Michigan is ordered to the scene of the strike in the copper district, 2400 soldiers will reach there by Saturday morning. Brig. Gen. F. L. Abbey of the Mich. National Guard left Lansing this morning with Batteries A and B of Lansing via Chicago. Martial law may be declared by Governor Ferris today.

Tons of provisions have already been sent to Ludington and will be sent at once to the Copper country. Every mine in the district is closed, except the pumps which are necessary to keep down the leakage of water. No work is allowed for fear of bringing on further rioting.

A Crocodile in a Tree.

An African hunter once found a large crocodile hanging in the fork of a tree about ten feet from the ground. As the place was fully half a mile from any water, it was difficult to account for the crocodile's strange position. When questioned upon the subject the natives explained that it was put there by an elephant. It seems that when the elephants wade into the Lake Ngami to bathe the crocodiles are in the habit of worrying them and biting their legs. Sometimes when an elephant is annoyed beyond endurance it picks up its tormentor in its trunk, puts it among the branches of a tree and leaves it there.—London Graphic.

Boiling Vegetables.

Food experts long ago pointed out the very small quantity of mineral matter and bone building material in succulent vegetables. Now a household expert and food scientist has found that when such vegetables as spinach, cabbage and carrots are boiled they lose about half of the small amount of mineral constituents which they contain. Spinach, for example, gave up more than 50 per cent of its mineral constituents and cabbage 40 per cent. As the loss of mineral matter in these foods makes them less nutritious the problem of retaining these mineral parts of the food assumes some importance.—Farm and Fireside.

Ex-Governor Osborn is now having the time of his life in South Africa and does not expect to return to America until next year.

SECRET OF CANADA'S BOOM.

Due Not to Special Resources But to Up to Date Advertising.

When the Union Pacific was built, the first transcontinental line in the western hemisphere, the word publicity was rather restricted in meaning, and the work of the publicity man was even more restricted. If Kansas and Nebraska, or Iowa and Illinois a generation earlier, had been as persistently kept before the eyes of the world as has western Canada in the last ten years, the development of those States would have been far more rapid.

The reason for western Canada's rapid growth has not been because the land was better than any other, says the "Columbian Magazine," but because the people who wanted just such land were told where they could get it and how.

Saskatoon, Brandon, Regina, Edmonton, Calgary, Moose Jaw, Medicine Hat, etc., are cities that have sprung up from the plains in ten years. Winnipeg, on the eastern edge of the western Canadian prairies country, has grown more rapidly because of its location at the entrance to the new Territory.

Saskatoon, about in the centre of the province of Saskatchrewan, is a busy place of 15,000 people; ten years ago it was a village. Edmonton, in Alberta, a fur trading post for more than a hundred years, has suddenly developed into a city

Japanese Singing Frogs.

In Japan there is a kind of frog very celebrated for his sweet voice. He is called kajika, and people pay as much as $10 for a pair of these marsh musicians. A poet in Japan keeps scores of singing frogs at his home, and he sometimes gives a party to his friends, when after listening to the music every guest is asked to write a poem in honor of the frogs.—Raja Yoga Messenger.

Doughnuts
That will remain moist.

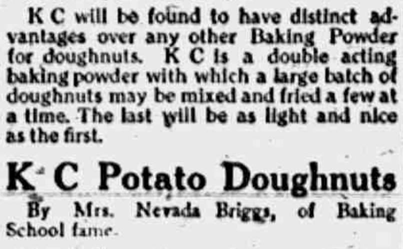
Every housewife who bakes her own bread knows that if a little potato is added to the sponge, the bread will not dry out as quickly. In this recipe potato is utilized to make doughnuts that will remain moist and fresh for several days.

K C will be found to have distinct advantages over any other Baking Powder for doughnuts. K C is a double acting baking powder with which a large batch of doughnuts may be mixed and fried a few at a time. The last will be as light and nice as the first.

K C Potato Doughnuts

By Mrs. Nevada Briggs, of Baking School fame.

3½ cups flour; 2 eggs; 1 cup sugar; 4 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder; ½ teaspoonful salt; ½ teaspoonful mace; 1 cup cold mashed potato; ¾ cup milk, or more if needed.



Sift three times, the flour, salt, spice and baking Powder. Beat eggs with rotary beater, then still using rotary beater, gradually add sugar, then work in the mashed potato with a spoon and alternately add milk and flour mixture. Make a soft dough, roll into a sheet, cut into rounds, pinch a hole in the center with the finger and fry in deep fat.

Fat for frying should not be hot enough to brown the doughnut until it has risen. When the doughnut is dropped into the fat it sinks to the bottom. As soon as it comes up it should be turned and turned a number of times while cooking. This recipe is excellent as they do not take the fat in frying and will stay moist for days.

JACKSON WANTS TO CINCH M. C. SHOPS

Official Delegation to confirm with Detroit Railroad Men

Jackson, Mich., July 22.—Mayor Bailey, members of the city council and Secretary Leidy, of the Chamber of Commerce, will go to Detroit tomorrow to confer with Michigan Central officials with regard to releasing the company from a contract providing that it have title to certain property in Jackson if it maintains its shops here and to forfeit all rights to the property in case the shops are removed.

The company wants to sell some of this land for factory sites, and points to $300,000 worth of shops it is building as evidence of its intention to keep the shops in Jackson.

Jackson wants a new depot and a separation of grades at Main street crossing, and this matter will also be taken up.—Detroit News Tribune.

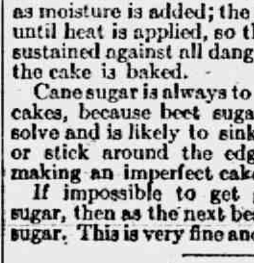
PRACTICAL BAKING LESSONS

CAKES



I often hear housekeepers attribute their success or failure in cake baking to luck. Others have the idea that cake bakers are born, and that unless one is naturally adapted to it, she cannot succeed. In reality anyone can bake the nicest of cakes if she will follow closely the few simple rules which are given below in full detail.

Nevada Briggs

D

The Right Materials

Bear in mind that the best materials make the best food.

A soft Winter wheat pastry flour is as necessary for cakes as for biscuits. In fact, it should always be used with baking powder, as it absorbs moisture more readily than hard Spring wheat bread flour, which contains much slow dissolving gluten. If bread flour is used for cake, one must use at least one-third more moisture than is called for by the recipe, for all cake recipes are written for pastry flour.

A great deal of the uncertainty of cake baking is eliminated by using a double-raise baking powder such as K C. The batter need not be hurried into the oven, nor need one be careful about slamming the oven door, or jarring the stove. K C is really a blend of two baking powders, one of which commences to raise as soon as moisture is added; the other is inactive until heat is applied, so that the raising is sustained against all danger of falling until the cake is baked.

Cane sugar is always to be preferred for cakes, because beet sugar is hard to dissolve and is likely to sink to the bottom or stick around the edges of the pan, making an imperfect cake.

If impossible to get granulated cane sugar, then as the next best thing, buy bar sugar. This is very fine and easily creamed.

Measure Everything

It will save time and many steps if you will get everything required by the recipe on your mixing table before starting. Everything should be measured correctly. If the recipe calls for sifted flour, sift it once before measuring. Measure flour by filling the cup with a spoon. If you dip the cup into the flour, it will pack and there is danger of over measuring. Measure the baking powder carefully, using level, rounding or heaping teaspoonfuls, according to the recipe. Sift the flour and baking powder together three times in order to get them thoroughly mixed, so that the cake will raise evenly; also to loosen up the flour.

Mixing

The flour and baking powder having been measured and sifted, measure out the sugar and butter and cream together. If the butter is cold and firm, warm the sugar slightly in the oven. After creaming the butter and sugar, separate the yolks from the whites of the eggs and with a rotary egg beater, cream the yolks until light lemon colored and very creamy. Add this to the butter and sugar, and blend all together. Now add a little of the water or milk and stir it in thoroughly; then a little flour, stirring it in thoroughly; then more moisture and more flour alternately, stirring each time until all the flour and moisture are in the batter, when it should be beaten until smooth and glossy. If the whites of the eggs are to be used, beat these with a flat or spoon whip until they are stiff enough to stand up, putting them in last. A little salt added to the whites of eggs helps in the beating. If yolks of eggs are not used, add the moisture and flour alternately to creamed butter and sugar and add the whites last. Where much more sugar than butter is used, as in Orange Cake, half of the sugar may be beaten into the yolks of the eggs.

Baking

One of the most important things about baking cakes is to have a moderate oven at the start; in fact, in using a gas, oil or gasoline stove, it is not necessary to light the stove until the cake has been put in. Then there should be a very low flame at first. After the cake has doubled in bulk, increase the heat and bake until a brown crust is formed and the center will respond to the touch. Never allow a crust to form over cake before the batter has doubled. In a wood or coal range, have a very light fire in the fire box. After the cake is in the oven, replenish the fire and by the time it has burned up the batter will have doubled and is ready for the hot oven to finish it. It is impossible to specify the length of time to bake cakes, for the larger and thicker the layer, the longer it takes to bake.

Orange Cake

¼ cup butter
1 cup sugar
Grated rind of 1 orange
½ cup milk or water
1½ cups sifted pastry flour
2 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder
Yolks of 2 eggs, beaten light
Whites of 2 eggs, beaten dry.
This makes two small layers.

Filling for Orange Cake

The unbeaten white of 1 egg, add to this ½ cup orange pulp and juice, with the rotary egg beater gradually beat in 1½ cups powdered sugar, beating it in slowly. When stiff enough to hold its shape spread upon the cake. Long beating makes this icing spongy and white.

Cream Cake

⅓ cup butter
1 cup sugar
Yolks of two eggs beaten light
1⅔ cups sifted pastry flour
2 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder
½ cup cold water
Whites of two eggs beaten dry
Flavoring to suit.

Cream Filling

¼ cup sifted flour
1 cup hot milk
½ cup sugar
⅛ teaspoonful salt
1 egg beaten light
1 ounce chocolate
1 teaspoonful vanilla extract

Mix flour and salt with a very little cold milk; stir into the hot milk and cook ten minutes, add the chocolate and stir until it is melted and evenly blended with the flour mixture, then beat in the egg mixed with the sugar, and lastly the vanilla.

FRATERNAL VISIT

A company of Pythian Sisters called on their sister, Mrs. Ed Ridgeway Wednesday just at the supper hour, much to that lady's surprise, who found them in possession on her return home from the Rosacrans' store, where she had been assisting for the afternoon The visitors were well provided with provisions for a fine supper, and also with various bumption packages the contents of which Mrs. Ridgeway was called upon to name, after which they were presented to her as a slight token of the esteem of the company. A very pleasant evening passed all to quickly and the shower being over the ladies departed to their several homes.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT

Mrs. Fred Aldrich met with a very painful accident while assisting in the grocery of Fred. Aldrich & Son. While cutting meat the knife slipped and struck her on the wrist cutting a terrible gash. Dr. Briegel was called at once and when the flow of blood was stopped it was necessary to take several stitches. Mrs. Aldrich was made as comfortable as possible under the circumstances.

A THIMBLE PARTY

Honoring her friend Mrs. Seagraves of Racine, Wis, Mrs. G. R. Newsome entertained a number of ladies Tuesday afternoon, the function taking the form of a thimble party. Among those present were Mesdames Nase, Campbell, Johnson, Freese, VanGelson and daughter of Clinton, and Mes. R. J. W. Bowen, Rosacrans, John Heesen and C. H. Bramble of Tecumseh.

The afternoon was spent in sewing and conversation, each one vieing with the other in both departments. A most delightful supper was served after which the ladies spent a pleasant hour in singing the songs of other days, and recounting the various happenings of the long ago.

At last the hour approached for the return home, and as the Clinton ladies took their departure, goodnights and good wishes went with them from their friends in Tecumseh.

Chauncey Miller, 15 years old, despondent over ill health, drowned himself in a pool of water which had formed in a ditch by the Lake Shore railroad track near his home in Deerfield. The body was found in six inches of water.

The Saginaw-Bay City interurban and traction companies started Saturday to lower the steps of its street cars. Monday night 82 prominent women petitioned the common council of Saginaw to request the company to lower the steps.

The state railroad commission has been petitioned by the Western Express Co. for permission to raise its rates. Since the railroad commission reduced the rates of express companies, the Western claims it has been operating in Michigan at a loss.

A month-old baby was found in a basket at Flint on the steps of E. C. Turner's home Saturday morning. The child was not too warmly clad and it had apparently been out all night, while its cries had been guarded against by drugs. According to a note left in the basket, it was born June 7.

Seger McLouth of Adrian was drowned Sunday in Wampler's lake, 20 miles north of town. He was out alone in a rowboat and the manner in which he tipped over and met his death is unknown. When he was missed and the overturned boat in which he had been was found on the water, a search revealed his body. He was 25 years of age.

State Treasurer Haarer has received a remittance of $17,000 from Marquette prison, to be placed in the general fund, the amount representing the first deposit on state account resulting from the establishment of an overall factory in the prison. Under the law requiring the prisons to abandon the contract system and manufacture for state account, the overall factory was established, and this is the first amount turned in since the system was established.

REAPING BENEFIT

From the Experience of Tecumseh People.

We are fortunate indeed to be able to profit by the experience of our neighbors. The public utterances of Tecumseh residents on the following subject will interest and benefit many of our readers. Read this statement. No better proof can be had.

George D. Chaplin, carpenter, N Ottawa St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I willingly confirm the public statement I gave in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills in December 1905. I have taken this remedy on different occasions since then and have always found that it acts as represented. My kidneys were disordered and made me miserable. Knowing of several people in this vicinity who had used Doan's Kidney Pills with success, I obtained a supply at Wright & Son's Drug store and began using them. The results were very satisfactory and I am in hopes that other kidney sufferers will profit by reading of my experience."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Rid Your Children of Worms.

You can change fretful, ill-tempered children into healthy, happy youngsters, by ridding them of worms. Tossing, rolling, grinding of teeth; crying out while asleep, accompanied with intense thirst, pains in the stomach and bowels; feverish and bad breath are symptoms that indicate worms. Kickapoo Worm Killer, a pleasant candy lozenge, expels the worms, regulates the bowels, restores your children to health and happiness. Mrs J. A. Brisbin, of Elgin, Ill., says: "I have used Kickapoo Worm Killer for years and entirely rid my children of worms. I would not be with it." Guaranteed. All druggists, or by mail. Price 25c. Rheumatism and the Heart

Don't overlook the grave fact that rheumatism easily "settles in the heart," and disturbs the valvular action. The cure consists in removing the cause. Foley Kidney Pills so tone up and strengthen the kidneys that they keep the blood free of poisons and uric acid crystals, that cause rheumatism, swollen joints, backache, urinary irregularties, and disturbed heart action. Try them. For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

Because she loved his little boy by his first wife so dearly, John Jessup, aged 37, of Cadillac, has married Mrs. Jennie Sheridan, aged 44, also of that city. A year ago Mr. Jessup, a widower, placed his 4-year-old boy in the care of Mrs. Sheridan, a widow. A great attachment between the lad and Mrs. Sheridan sprang up and the woman grew to love the boy as her own child. The love of the two for the boy brought them gradually closer together and the marriage resulted.

Mrs. Agnes Youder, 30, of Saginaw, made a signed statement Monday that she had smothered two of her three babies. The first at Beaverton and the second at Flint. She says she planned to smother the second child, her first crime, for months before it was born, and she did it when the infant was two days old. The other child lived to be 5½ months old before she killed it, she says. The crime so preyed on her mind that she is nearly insane and wants to pay penalty for her deeds before she loses her reason. Her husband said that both children were found dead in the morning wrapped in their blankets. Lung trouble was attributed in both cases. He believes their deaths were accidental. To add to the misfortune of the couple, two of their children burned to death at Cummins, Oscoda county, in March, last year.

Commissioners Notice

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee ss.

In the matter of the Estate of ALFRED JAMES, Deceased.

The undersigned having been appointed by the Probate Court of said County, Commissioners to receive, examine and adjust all claims and demands of all persons against the estate of said deceased, do hereby give notice that we will meet for that purpose at the Tecumseh State Savings Bank in the village of Tecumseh, Lenawee County, Michigan, on the 2nd day of August 1913 and on the 17th day of January 1914, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of each of said days.

JOHN BURNS, M. P.

Quick to Gain the Ear of the House After He Entered Parliament.

A change began to come over John Burns when he was elected to the London Common Council. The agitator turned by degrees into the administrator. He was the only Labor representative on the council, and his experience, sanity and good humor quickly made themselves felt.

He proved himself an indefatigable councillor, inspecting and inquiring into everything on his own account, and securing reform after reform in the treatment and wages of the council's employees, the conditions of its contracts, the provision of parks, drainage works, asylums, public control of the London street car system, the erection of artisans' dwellings and so on.

When he entered Parliament in 1892 he found the same sort of work waiting to be done on a far larger scale. He gained the ear of the House at once, first, because he never spoke without having something to say; secondly, because the breezy, vigorous confidence of the man, his sincerity and enthusiasm, made indifference impossible and thirdly, because on many subjects he probably knew more at first hand than all the rest of the House put together.

Everything that concerned the well being and interests of the working classes found John Burns equipped at all points. A great deal of the social and industrial legislation of the last twenty years bears the mark of his influence, and you would have to search long and deep to come across another M. P. whose career has been so useful and constructive.—McClure's Magazine.

Shopping in Luxury.

Luxurious shopping is probably only in an early stage of its development. It would not surprise us if in a few years shoppers were paid a salary.

IS LEPROSY CONTAGIOUS?

Specialists Still Doubtful Whether One Person Can Give It to Another.

There is possibly no disease the presence of which inspires greater fear in the public mind than does leprosy. This is perhaps in a measure due to the loathesomeness of the disease in its later stages, but it is in most cases simply fear of a name.

The disease or diseases spoken of as leprosy in the Bible are popularly supposed to be the same as the leprosy of to-day, and the evident fear the leper inspired in the people of old is held to justify the dread with which he is still regarded. The Biblical descriptions do not, however, fit modern leprosy, so that whether the fear of the "leper" of olden times was or was not justified it should not be allowed to color the view with which the leper of to-day is regarded.

Leprosy is indeed an infectious disease, that is to say, it is due to the presence in the tissues of a bacillus, after the Norwegian physician who discovered it; but whether it is contagious under the ordinary conditions of modern life in temperate climates, at least, is held by specialists in diseases of the skin to be very doubtful.

Of the few lepers known to the physicians in all the larger cities, some are cared for in hospitals, others live at home and visit the clinics or the doctor's office from time to time; yet an instance in which another person has acquired the disease from any of these lepers is unknown.

There are many diseases more to be dreaded than leprosy because more rapidly fatal, more painful or more contagious; yet none of them except perhaps smallpox is more feared.

The illogical terror of leprosy may be the cause of great cruelty to those afflicted. There are thousands of people who show culpable indifference to the enforcement of the laws against spitting in public places, although they know full well that the success of the crusade against tuberculosis hinges largely upon care in this regard. Yet these same persons would fly in horror from any place that had harbored a leper.

Trials by Bread and Cheese.

There were many odd ways in ancient times of detecting criminals. Our ancestors had not lived long enough to lose their faith in the gnawings of conscience, and Divine interference in earthly justice was superstitiously regarded as a daily occurrence.

No queerer example of this could be found than the ancient mode of trying prisoners by "bread and cheese." The unfortunate offender was led, with a halter round his neck, to the parish church, and there, in the presence of all the people, the priest put pieces of cheese and rye bread in a patten on the altar. These he blessed and then the supposed criminal had to eat them dry before the congretion.

If he managed to swallow them easily he was acquitted; but if he choked he was condemned. Naturally enough, scores of innocent folk were thus done to death.

Treasured Trees.

Two trees [illegible] the main street of Thorshavn, the capital of the Faroe Islands, have an interesting history. Trees [illegible] refuse to grow in these islands, except in some few sheltered spots, and the inhabitants there ore prize them greatly. When the road was made it was decided to leave the trees in the middle of the carriage way rather than be guilty of the crime of felling them.

Those only deserve a monument who do not need one; that is, who have raised themselves a monument in the minds and memories of men.—Hazlitt.

Testimony from a Dry Country.

Physicians assert that modern business life is driving men to drink. In some of the Oregon counties they have to drive quite a distance.

A WOMAN'S WISDOM.

The worried mother wakes up to hear her baby's heavy breathing—a little cough—perhaps the croup or whooping cough. She does not want to send for the doctor when perhaps the trouble does not amount to much. Finally she thinks of that medical book her father gave her, The Common Sense Medical Adviser, by R. V. Pierce, M. D. She says "just the thing to find out what is the matter with the little dear." Two million households in this country own one—and it's to be had for only 31c. in stamps—1,008 pages in splendid cloth binding. A good family adviser in any emergency. It is for either sex. This is what many women write Dr. Pierce—in respect to his "Favorite Prescription," a remedy which has made thousands of melancholy and miserable women cheerful and happy, by curing the painful womanly diseases which undermine a woman's health and strength.

MRS. ZUBERT AND BABE.

"My desire is to write a few lines to let you know what your valuable medicine has done for me," writes MRS. MARGARET ZUBERT, of 323 S. Bentalon Street, Baltimore, Md. "Before the stork came to our house I was a very sick woman. I wrote you for advice which was kindly given and which made me a different woman in a short time. After taking the first bottle of 'Favorite Prescription' I began improving so that I hardly knew I was in such a condition. I did my own housework—washing and ironing, cooking, sewing, and the worst of all nursed three children who had whooping cough. I hardly knew of the advent ten minutes before—so easy was it. The baby is as fat as a butter-ball. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the best medicine for any woman to take when in this condition. I recommend it to all my friends."

New 12-Cent Stamp.

A new twelve-cent postage stamp is to be provided by the Post Office Department to meet the changed conditions resulting from the increase of the fee for registering letters and parcels from 8 to 10 cents.

Acting Postmaster General Stewart has requested the Secretary of the Treasury to authorize the preparation of such.

The new stamp will ultimately result in the discontinuance of the thirteen cent stamp. The latter was calculated to cover the cost of the eight-cent registry fee and the 5 cents international postage rate. The fifteen cent stamp will serve this purpose for the registry fee has been increased from 8 to 10 cents. The proposed twelve-cent registry fee and the two-cent postage rate in this country and for England and Germany. The twelve-cent stamp was discontinued some years ago. It bore the head of Washington.

A War on Wild Pigeons.

A great slaughter of wild pigeons took place all over the Isle of Wight and it was estimated that quite a thousand guns were enrolled for the campaign, among them being landowners, occupiers and shooting tenants who were publicly invited to take part. The guns were stationed in woods and coppices over a wide area. Some big bags were obtained. The farmers have suffered terribly owing to the depredation caused by the wild pigeons.—London Evening Standard.

Peruvian Sand Dunes.

The cresent-shaped sand dunes which move in thousands across the desert of Islay, near La Joya, Peru, have been investigated by Astronomer S. I. Bailey, who found the points of a cresent to be 160 feet apart, while the convex side measured 477 feet, and the greatest width was more than 100 feet. The estimated weight was 8000 tons, yet it was carried 125 feet a year by the prevailing south winds.

An Admirer of Mary Queen of Scots.

Theodore Napier, who for eight years brought a wreath from Edinburgh to lay on the site of Mary Queen of Scots's execution at Fotheringay, near Peterborough, attended for the same purpose recently in full Highland attire. On this occasion, however, he was refused admission to the castle site by the occupier of the farm of which it forms part. Mr. Napier left the wreath on an adjacent hedge, and will abandon the pilgrimage unless the prohibition is withdrawn.—London Evening Standard.

THE EMANCIPATION OF MISS SERENA.

By A. M. Davies Ogden.

Miss Serena Bradford, sitting in thoughtful perplexity before the pretty rosewood desk in her sunshiny den, and accustomed frown puckering the forehead still smooth and white as a girl's, despite the coronet of silvery hair which added a touch of distinction to the erect little figure, looked tentatively up at the portrait which hung just above. Should she?

The portrait stared back in dignified disapproval and Miss Serena hesitated. Invite an artist, a mere painting man to her house? It was against all the traditional early Victorian ideas with which her youth had been imbued. Hitherto, during Miss Serena's narrow, well-ordered life, never had she dreamed of questioning the propriety of those ideas. Yet—Eleanor.

Eleanor, wayward, teasing lovable Eleanor, whose arrival, fluttering the innocent household had brought to it a new element at once disturbing and inspiring, a sense of wider possibilities, of more vivid perceptions, Eleanor cared for this man. Indeed, it was because of her caring that the girl had been sent to Miss Serena now, her people hoping that perhaps a change of scene might effect a cure.

But what complicated matters was that Lyttleton himself was also here. Only yesterday Eleanor had come to her aunt and told her that he had taken a studio up town. "I did not know that Bert was intending to live in New York," the girl had said, loyal gray eyes gazing straight into Miss Serena's blue ones. "It was last summer at the Page's that I met him. His home is in the West. Of course I shall not try to see him. But if I should—," and for a second the clear eyes dropped, then she lifted them again. "I certainly cannot promise that I will not speak," she ended, honestly. Her aunt gave a throb of sympathy.

"Do you—do you care so much, then," she questioned timidly.

"Care!" flashed back the girl. But, meeting Miss Serena's tender, wondering gaze, the brave little mouth quivered. "Yes," she said simply, "I care."

And now in the morning's mail had come a note leaving vacant a man's place for next week's dinner, and Miss Serena, the memory of that wistful quiver still upon her, was thrilled to a daring impulse. Why not ask this Lyttleton and judge for herself? Her opinions carried great weight with the girl's people. Was it not indeed her duty to invite him? And, all the while, under these reasons, with which she thought to convince herself, deep down in the gentle heart glowed, newly stirred, the old primitive, unquenchable flame of desire for romance, color, passion; the instinct which leads all mankind to love a lover and to help him; and, deeper, obscurer yet, the vivid curiosity of the lonely woman to whom the priceless revelation had been denied. Miss Serena, took a sheet of paper, wrote her letter, stampd it and sent it off before she could change her mind.

The deed once accomplished, reaction set in, and for a week Miss Serena shivered at the thought of the awful thing she had done.

But when, on the night of the dinner, Eleanor, straight and slim in her white frock, a green wreath set among the masses of her bronze hair, entered the fragrant, flower-filled drawing-room, Miss Serena all at once felt herself abundantly justified. Manifestly it was but the child's due. Miss Serena clad herself in a dainty brocade, her soft cheeks pink with suppressed eagerness under the girl's quick little kiss, was fairly a-quiver with excitement. What would he be like?

The guests were arriving. They were mostly elderly married couples, friends of Miss Serena's; Eleanor, gracious and smiling moved among them, striving dutifully to be entertaining. Suddenly the sound of a man caused her to start. Could she have heard aright? Miss Serena's voice summoned her.

"Eleanor, my dear, I have just been telling Mr. Lyttleton how good he was to come to us thus informally," her aunt was saying.

The girl, flushed and confused, came forward looking from her aunt to the man. Miss Serena smiled.

"You know Mr Lyttleton, I think," she said, gently. Surprises were odious, was her reflection; she had not realized how hard it would be for the girl. Eleanor, murmuring something inaudible, held out a hand, which the man took awkwardly enough. Miss Serena watching, felt her compunction deepen.

"He is embarrassed, too. And quite natural," she thought, benevolently surveying the long, lean figure clad in ill-fitting evening clothes. A red carnation decorated the lapel of his coat. Miss Serena put down her lorgnette with a sigh.

"Curious-looking person. Dresses like an artist, I suppose. One could this particular appointment?" he added, rather abruptly.

Lady Burningham's lip drooped, and she took a small lace-edged handkerchief out of her muff. "I'm so awfully fond of poor Fred," she said, brokenly. "You don't know what he is to me, Lord Brentwood. He is my only brother, and he says that if he doesn't get this he will go abroad and settle in Australia, or some such awful place, and you can't think what that would mean to me. I simply could not do without him. We see each other nearly every day, and I should be miserable, perfectly miserable, if my favorite brother went—abroad—and—left—me." She lowered her voice, and raised the small handkerchief to her face. "I—I simply couldn't go through a long, dreary winter here if he went away. I should have to go with him. You know how badly Burningham and I get on, and I have only Fred to care for in the world." She leaned back and gave a little sob.

Lord Brentwood crossed the room, and, bending over her, took the handkerchief out of her hand and raised the little gloved hand to his lips. "Dear lady, don't fret; I can't bear to see you fret; pray do not."

"He is my only brother," repeated Lady Burningham, with a clever little catch in her voice.

"I'm afraid I'm very weak, but I think I must see what I can do for you," he said, kindly. "There, don't cry, my dear; please don't distress yourself for that lucky brother of yours." He laid the small handkerchief unconsciously on his writing table, and Lady Burningham smiled divinely up at him.

"How good you are!" she said, gratefully; "how good and kind you are."

He smiled back at her. "I am afraid I am wax in your hands," he said, "and I can only hope he will be worthy of the post."

She rose, and gathered her furs and laces gracefully about her. "How am I to thank you?"

"I require nothing but your gratitude," he said, courteously, "and to be allowed to see you sometimes during the winter, if you you can find time to waste on an old man's society, my dear."

"Of course I can. Please come and see me soon—or, better still, come and dine with me.

. . . .

It was a month later, and a concert was being held at Redford House, by the kind permission of the Duchess of Redford, in aid of one of the hospitals.

The duchess had gently insisted upon Lord Brentwood's attendance. "You know you are such an important war man just now that it is really your duty to come to my function; so do come, there's a dear." And Lord Brentwood promised to go, and, reluctantly sacrificing an afternoon, attended the concert.

Music was no hobby of his, and he would far sooner have been idle at home or busy abroad, than listening to the singer who at this moment was bidding him "Come out, come out"; but he sat there listening patiently, now and again nodding his head with the every-ready appreciation of the skilled diplomatist.

The song was over, the lady who was bidding every one "Come out," had told them for the last time that they were "all the world to her"; and Lord Brentwood, giving a sigh of relief, leaned back more comfortably in his chair. Two women seated behind him had kept up the incessant, low chatter of the fashionable and unmusical concertgoer, and they now slightly raised their voices.

"My dear, it's perfectly true. Lola told me herself; she told me the whole story in her best style—you know what she is—half asleep, but very wideawake, as Evingstone says."

"How did she manage it?"

Lord Brentwood half closed his eyes. He was thinking of Lady Burningham and he was glad that he had been able to help her. The conversation going on behind him was of no interest to him, but he heard it vaguely, without consciously listening to it.

"Yes, she told me exactly how she managed it. She went to him and told him that they were inseparable, and that she couldn't live if he went abroad, and then he gave it to her, and now she's gone to Homburg for the whole winter?"

"Why did she do it? I thought she hated Miriam so."

"Ah my dear, you don't suppose Lola ever did anything from pure philanthropy, did you?"

The other laughed. "Why was it, then?"

"Well, you see, she owed Mrs. Stevenson two thousand pounds, and the debt was not only to be canceled, but she was to have another five hundred pounds from the father if it came off."

"No!"

"Yes, it is quite true; and now she's gone abroad, to spend and enjoy the five hundred pounds. Clever of her, wasn't it?"

"I always thought Lady Burningham perfectly hateful!" said the first woman, decidedly. "Fancy poor Lord Brentwood's being taken in so easily. What a rage he'd be in if he knew!"

"Oh, it doesn't matter about him!" laughed the other. "Every one knows what an old fool he is with a pretty woman! Why, even the king knows it."

Lord Brentwood sat very still and very erect in his chair while they were speaking, but his face paled, and he clinched his hands to stop their trembling. This talk was a terrible revelation of the world's estimate of his inner life.

To think that he was accused of jobbing—that he was, perhaps, even the laughingstock of feminine, fashionable London. "Even the king

HOUSE INVENTORIES.

Convenient Booklets Issued by the Insurance Companies.

Of the simpler schemes of the insurance agents who are always feverishly trying to hold old business and to attract new one of the most successful is the issuing of a blank book for use as a residence inventory.

This is usually a neatly prepared booklet of 12 pages, says System. On the inside of the front cover is a notice of what to do in case of fire, instructions for making an inventory and appraisal and on the opposite page are lines for the dates of the original inventory and three revisions.

On the inside of the back cover are printed general instructions for placing insurance, how to give a notice for additional insurance and what to do in case of removal of property. The twelve pages of the book are each devoted to a room and are ruled to show the number of articles inventoried, and a memorandum of each article itself, date of purchase, cost and description.

These inventories cost from six to seven cents apiece if they are got up in attractive style, and therefore they should not be carelessly mailed.

DIXON SHOOTING CALL TO ACTION

State Department Makes Vigorous Representations.

MEXICO'S ACT CONTEMPTUOUS

Peremptory Demands Made to Military and Civil Authorities for Reparation and Redress—Removal of Dixon to El Paso Granted—Guilty Must Be Punished.

Washington, July 28.—If another scrap of evidence were needed to demonstrate that the Mexican situation is sadly in need of a remedy the administration has it now in the shooting of Charles Dixon, United States immigration inspector by federal solders at Juarez. The Dixon shooting was made the occasion of the most vigorous representations yet ordered by the deaprtment of state. Aside from the gravity of the incident in itself, the wantonness and reckless defiance of the United States which inspired the occurence has proved to Washington that the United States, its authority and its representatives are being regarded with contempt in Mexico.

Representations were made both to the military authorities at Juarez, Mex., opposite El Paso, Tex., and to the responsible authorities of the Huerta government in Mexico City. Through consul Edwards at Juarez and Charge d'Affaires Nelson O'Shaughnessy, at the American embassy in Mexico City, peremptory demands were made for speedy reparation and redress for the offence.

Charde d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy was instructed by Secretary Bryan to call at once on the minister of war in Mexico City and demand that all concerned in the shooting of Dixon be imprisoned at once. He was also directed to demand that the trial of the offenders proceed forthwith. He informed the minister of war of what the American consul at Juarez was doing in the case and insisted that every facility be extended to him to expedite the apprehension and proper punishment of all concerned.

Secretary Bryan has not received any reply from the embassy in Mexico City as to the response made to his representations. It is confidently expected, however, that the Huerta government will not be slow to express its extreme regret at the occurence and to expedite the punishment of the guilty parties.

Out of the tension of the last few days has come unanimity in regard to at least one fact in the Mexican trouble and that is that something must be done and done at once. Even Secretary of State Bryan who has been reluctant to admit the gravity of the Mexican situation now holds this view.

Mexicans Give Up Dixon.

El Paso, Tex., July 28.—United States Consul T. D. Edwards informed the authorities in Juarez that they must arrest the men who caused the shooting of Immigration Inspector Charles B. Dixon. A strong demand was also made upon the Juarez authorities for the release of Dixon so that he might be brought to El Paso for medical treatment. He was released at once and brought to El Paso by his associates. The release was without bond.

Arthur Walker, a negro, was at the bottom of the arrests. He was being investigated by United States immigration men and when he saw Dixon in Juarez he told a number of Mexican soldiers that Dixon was there with a bottle of chloroform to chloroform him and forcibly take him to El Paso. He is said to have bought drinks for the soldiers and then he made a criminal complaint with Juarez authorities against Dixon. The arrest of the immigration man by the Mexican troops followed.

Husband of Prominent Woman Dead.

Chicago, July 28.—Laurence Joergen-Dahl of Springfield, Ill., a well known singer, died suddenly in the evening at 10 east Huron street. The funeral will be held in Springfield. Joergen-Dahl had been married but a short time to Mrs. Susan Lawrence Dana, daughter of the late Rheuna D. Lawrence, a Springfield capitalist and herself prominent in social settlement work.

Buddhist Monks.

In many of the monasteries of Tibet and Siberia the Buddhist monks still print in the manner which has been handed down from generation to generation. Movable type is not used, but each page is carved upon a solid wood block, and thus, whenever a new book is printed, entirely new blocks have to be made.

STATE AIDS DECIDED ON BY GOV. DUNNE

Appointments to Important Illinois Positions Named.

Springfield, Ill., July 28.—Governor Dunne has decided on the following appointments to state offices. It is general comment that none of those who were awarded places are identified with the Hearst-Harrison wing of the party, and that the men known as Lorimer Democrats at the time of William Lorimer's election to United States senate are not on the list:

Superintendent of insurance—Abraham Lincoln Champion, Pekin, Tazewel county. Friends of Rufus M. Potts of Springfield have not abandoned hope entirrely that the latter will land.

Pure food commissioner—W. Scott Matthew, Carbondale, Jackson county.

Good roads commissioners—James Wilson, Woosung, Ogle county; Thomas Sudduth, Springfield, Sagamon county; S. E. Bradt, Dekalb county.

Fish and game commissioners—John B. Vaughn, Carlinville, Macoupin county; C. J. Dittmar, Freeport, Stephenson county. The third commissioner either Ernest Hoover, Taylorville, Christian county, or John M. Caldwell, Chatham, Sangamon county.

Illinois and Michigan commissioners —H. P. Dwyer, Minooka, Grundy county; S. L. Marshall, Ipava, Fulton county; W. L. Sackett, present Republican commissioner, to retain for the time being.

Dental examining board—Dr. A. N. Cox, Cairo, Alexander county, chairman; Dr. Otto Seifert, Springfield, Sangamon county, secretary; Dr. C. F. O'Connor, Chicago.

West park commissioners, Chicago —William F. Grower, Fourteenth ward, chairman; Peter O'Brien, Nineteenth ward; John Anda, Seventeenth ward; Edward Mullen, Thirty-fourth ward; James C. Denvir, Thirteenth ward; Michael Kollassa, Sixteenth ward; secretary, Timothy Cruice, Thirty-fifth ward; attorney, Jacob Lebloskey.

Superintendent Illinois Industrial School for Blind—Former Alderman William F. Schultz, Twelfth ward.

Public administrator Will county—William C. Mooney, Joliet.

WATER BEING PUMPED OUT

Michigan Mines Being Saved Under Military Protection.

Calumet, Mich., July 28. — Under guard of Michigan state troops now in the copper country, the working of the pumps at the Baltic, Tri-Mountain and Champion mines was resumed while pumping will be resumed at the Conglomerate shafts of the Calumet and Hecla Mining company and at all other mines and shafts in the district.

It is also proposed to resume mining at the Tri-Mountain, Baltic and Champion and at the mines about Calumet. The mines in Keweenaw county, the Ahmeek, Allouez and Mohawk, will not resume pumping under guard of troops, although union men may again be put on at these mines.

$50,000 THIEF IS FREED

Negro Sentenced for Stealing Mail Bag Quits Federal Prison.

Leavenworth, Kan., July 28.—Chas. Stevens, alias Chas. Savage, a negro, convicted five years ago for the theft at the Kansas City Union station of a mail pouch containing $50,000, was released from the federal prison here. He was rearrested, however, on the specific charge of cutting open a mail sack. His attorney is arranging for bail.

Stevens was convicted on six counts and sentenced to serve five years on each. The order for his release was issued recently by Judge Sanborn of federal court of appeals on a writ of habeas corpus. No trace of the stolen money ever was found.

CLANCY'S TROUBLES MULTIPLY

Warden Counsels with Rebel Prisoners Instead of His Chief Officers Under Him—Grave Apprehension Felt for Time When 350 Men Are Released from Their Cells.

Ossining, N. Y., July 28.—What will happen when Wadren Clancy lets out of their cells the 350 men who have been imprisoned for five days and nights? That was the guestion everybody in Ossining was putting. For the village knows that unless you deliberately weaken men in long confinement by a diet of bread and water —six slices of bread and a gill of water a day is the Sing Sing formula—the longer locked up the uglier they get.

The men got no freedom all day and their rations which have been steadily lessening came down to the "cooler" diet—bread and water.

A gill of water and six slices of bread representing three meals a day is the fare for them after being locked up from four to five days straight. It is figured that when they are finally released the spirit of revolt will be all gone out of them.

The condition of the imprisoned men is pitiable. Friday morning found many of them in a state of semi-collapse after the fearful yelling of the night before. On men doubled up in cells, the five day confinement has been particularly cruel. Immorality has been thriving since the rebellion began. One of the prison doctors said that certain vices have never had such headway as at present.

Warden Clancy has fallen out with a chief officer under him and in almost every case has taken the counsel of the convict, even of rebels, against the word of this officer, who is supposed to be his adviser. This has greatly delighted certain men in the prison who have been active in fomenting rebellion.

Popular opinion in Ossining credits an official in the prison, an enemy of Sulzer, and, secretly, of Warden Clancy, with being the director of the convicts revolt. This man is a friend of ex-Warden Kennedy, who was indicted and removed. However, this may be, the convicts themselves are terribly in earnest in their revolt. They say they are putting up their fight against a jail that is making them worse men. As one of the fellows freed recently said:

"If the people of the whole state could see what they are doing to the poor guys in there, they would understand the trouble. I've wished to God, they would take me out and shoot me. Not many of the fellows would care about getting out if they could get the outside world to look in."

FEDERAL POST TO ILLINOISAN

Ethelbert Stewart of Decatur Named Chief Statistican.

Washington, July 28. — Ethelbert Stewart of Decatur, Ill., has been appointed chief statistician for the bureau of labor statistics. He succeeds C. W. W. Hanger, appointed assistant commissioner of the new federal mediation board. The change is effective immediately.

Mr. Stewart has been connected with the work of the bureau of labor since 1885, doing both departmental and field work. He was detailed to the tariff board in 1910, and, on the completon of the work of the board, was appointed chief statistician of the newly created children's bureau, of which Miss Julia Lathrop of Chicago is in charge.

Women Outvote the Men.

Shawneetown, Ill., July 28.—A special election was held in the City of Rosi Clare, Hardin county, in which women outvoted the men. The election and the women turned out strong against the wet candidate. One hundred and seven women voted and 106 men, 105 of the women voting for the dry candidate. The dry candidate was elected by a large majority.

FORMER SPEAKER OF INDIANA HOUSE DEAD

Henry C. Pettit Closes Active Career at Wabash, Ind.

Wabash, Ind., July 28.—Henry Corbin Pettit, former member of the legislature, speaker of the Indiana house and later United States marshal, died at his home here shortly before 7 o'clock in the evening. His death followed an illness of many months.

Mr. Pettit was one of the best known members of the bar in northern Indiana. He was a son of Judge and Mrs. John U. Pettit and was born in Wabash Jan. 6, 1864.

On Oct. 3, 1888, Mr. Pettit married Miss Eva Stitt of this city, who, with one daughter, survives.

In May, 1887, Mr. Pettit was elected a member of the Wabash city council and a year later was elected mayor, serving for two years. He was elected representative in the state legislature in November, 1894, for two years and was re-elected in 1896. During his second term he served as speaker of the house.

On March 23, 1901, Mr. Pettit was appointed United States marshal for the District of Indiana by President McKinley and in December, 1901, was reappointed by President Roosevelt.

STATE SUES FOR RECEIVER

Alleges Monarch Life Indemnity Company Is Insolvent.

Evansville, Ind., July 28.—Alleging the Monarch Life Indemnity company is insolvent, the State of Indiana filed suit in circuit court asking that a receiver be appointed. The complaint says the company has disability and indemnity claims amounting to $22,000 and promissory notes amounting to $26,000, upon which interest is due and unpaid.

Its assets are said to be $10,000. The Monarch recently changed managers.

TREE ON TRACK DITCHES ENGINE

Four Killed and Another Is Fatally Injured.

ENGINEER DIES AT HIS POST

Ten-Year-Old Son of Express Messenger Loses Life and Father May Die —Engine, Baggage, Express and Mail Cars Leave Tracks—No Passengers Hurt.

Green Bay, Wis., July 28.—Three men and a ten-year-old boy were killed in the wreck of the Milwaukee Road's Copper Country express, south bound from Calumet, Mich., to Chicago.

The wreck was caused by a tree, blown across the tracks during a severe wind storm just before the train was due to pass. The wreck was at Cataline, two miles west of Pettibone.

The dead are: A. Klinesmith, Green Bay, Wis., fireman; Frank J. O'Connor, Green Bay, engineer; ——— Way, ten-year-old son of express messenger, from Chicago; Unidentified man, stealing ride on "blind baggage."

Way, the express messenger, who had his son as a passenger in the express car, was so badly scalded by escaping steam that it is feared he cannot live.

All Passengers Escape.

Although the train was well filled with passengers, most of them asleep in Pullmans, no one back of the baggage car was injured. The engine, tender, baggage, mail and express cars were derailed and piled in a heap, but none of the passengers got anything worse than a severe shaking up.

An added danger from the wreck was the fact that wires in both directions had been blown down, so that it was impossible to send any news of the disaster to division headquarters here. There was a grave chance that some other train would come along and crash into the debris, and the flagmen were sent out much further than is usual in such cases to prevent the expected second wreck.

Wrecking Crew Delayed.

An hour after the wreck news was sent to Green Bay in a roundabout way and wreckers were sent to clear the track.

Neither the engineer nor the fireman had a chance to jump for safety, as the dark bulk of the tree was not visible to the headlight of the engine until it was only a few yards distant. O'Connor threw in his brake and reversed his engine, but there was so little time that the crash came before the brakes had checked the speed of the train ever a little.

COOK'S FIRST WOMAN VOTER

Mrs. Gertrude B. Blackwelder Cast Ballot at Morgan Park.

Chicago, July 28.—Mrs. Gertrude B. Blackwelder, former president of the Chicago Woman's club, wrote her name down as the first woman to vote in Cook county. Her ballot was cast at Morgan Park at an election to vote upon a proposed bond issue for a $15,000 high school. The proposition carried 262 to 7. Two women and five men voted "no."

Only twenty-two women had voted by 5 o'clock in the afternoon, while ninety-two men had cast their votes in the same time. When the polls closed eighty-six women had voted and 183 men.

There are about 1,200 voters—men and women—in the suburb. A separate ballot box was used for the women on the advice of the city attorney.

DIGGING FOR BODIES

Many Victims of Binghamton Horror Were Consumed.

The search for the bodies of the victims of the Binghamton (N. Y.) clothing factory fire has been a peculiarly sad and grewsome task. Of sixty-eight known to have perished only five corpses have been found in a condition that admits of identification. Many bodies were incinerated, and not even a fragment could be found.

Springfield, Ill., July 28.—The following petitions for nomination for judges of the supreme court for the Fifth district, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Judge John P. Hand of Cambridge and for judge of the Tenth judicial circuit, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Judge Leslie D. Puterbaugh were filed in the office of the secretary of state.

Judge of the supreme court—Leslie D. Puterbaugh of Peoria, Republican; Albert E. Bergland of Galva, Democrat. Circuit judge—Robert H. Lovett of Peoria, Republican; Arthur M. Otman of Peoria, Republican.

KIDNAPING ATTEMPTS FAIL

Daughter of George Mullin, Former Tiger Pitcher, Escapes.

Wabash, Ind., July 28.—Two attempts were made here to kidnap Beatrice Mullin, eleven years old, daughter of George Mullin, formerly on the pitching staff of the Detroit Tigers.

An unidentified man attempted to persuade her to accomapny him, but was frightened away by the approach of pedestrians. Later he entered the Mullin premises, but being seen by the girl before he reached her was frightened away by her screams.

BABY DROWNS IN KANKAKEE

Mother Leaves 18-Months-Old Child on Bank of River.

South Bend, Ind., July 28.—Alfred, eighteen-months-old son of L. Brown of Crumstown, St. Joseph county, was drowned in the Kankakee river.

The boy had been left on the bank of the stream while his mother went into the barn. When she returned he had disappeared. Soon after the body was seen floating in the river.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

DON'T FUMBLE YOUR WORDS.

Or Chew Your Cigar—At Least Not When You Are Dictating.

Before you condemn your stenographer be sure she was not too timid to ask for a repetition of what you said way down in your throat or with a cigar tightly clasped in your mouth.

"I once knew a competent young man who lost his position in a railroad office," says a writer in the Bookkeeper, "because the official who did the dictating gave more attention to his cigar than he did to his articulation.

"Then some men have a habit of pacing back and forth as they dictate. When they make the turns or stand looking out of the window you can imagine the result, especially if they also smoke. Of course the wise stenographer explains that she failed to hear and understand, but many are too timid, or foolishly proud to do this, and they are stigmatized as incompetent."

Makes Elephant Sausage.

Some time ago an enterprising German pork-butcher contracted for the carcass of an elephant belonging to the Ghent Zoological Gardens. The elephant had become unruly and it was necessary to have him killed. The butcher at once proceeded to transform the huge carcass into Frankfort sausages.

According to report he was able to manufacture no less than 3,800 pounds, which found a ready sale, owing to their novel origin. The elephant's heart, which weighed some forty pounds, was also sold in slices. This story is suggestive of the report from Paris that a butcher had used the carcass of a lion for making "Lyons sausages."

Self-Advertisement.

Crankiness and cantankerousness in scientists, according to the British Medical Journal, are due not so much to conceit as to their high appreciation of the greatness of science. This makes the inappreciation of the public—so often the scientist's only reward—very bitter to bear. "The hardest thing for a scientific man to bear is the attribution of his discoveries to men who have come into the vineyard at the eleventh hour and received the reward of his labors. The history of science is full of examples of such injustice; they all point the moral that it is the inevitable fate of the man who has not the gift of self-advertisement to be overlooked."

Friend More Fortunate.

Gen. George H. Harries, commander-in-chief of the militia of the District of Columbia, is the busiest centurion in the land. In addition to being a soldier, he runs an electric light company and manages a traction company that is the wonder of those who know what good car service means. Also, he is a member of all committees of civic organizations.

"I met Mrs. Harries just a few minutes ago," said one of the general's friends by way of making talk when they met.

"Fine. I'm very glad to hear it," returned the general. "I met her myself last week."

Strange Foible.

Some men make a vanity of telling their faults; they are the strangest men in the world; they cannot dissemble: they own it is a folly; they have lost their abundance of advantages by it; but if you would give them the world they cannot help it; there is something in their nature which abhors insincerity and constraint; with many other insufferable topics of the same altitude.—Swift.

High and Low Wages in France.

The highest paid workingwomen in France are said to be the cutters of precious stones. They receive about $1.80 a day. The lowest wage is 60 cents a day, and is paid to dressmakers. There are 14,000,000 women in France, and the majority of them earn their own living.

France is not Singular.

There are persons in France who respect nothing. They spend their lives in trying to prove that Louis XIV. was a poor maniac, Napoleon a degenerate, and Joan of Arc a suspicious person. . . . Perhaps we talk too much of our national pride.—Paris Le Matin.

Advice for Young Ladies.

It is superfluous to decorate women highly for early youth; youth is itself a decoration. We mistakenly adorn most that part of life which least requires it, and neglect to provide for that which will want it most.—Hannah More.

Pollen Travels Far.

The pollen from the pine forests often forms a yellow coating on lakes or on the ocean, as far as 200 miles from the shore, and has been mistaken by peasants for showers of sulphur. The pollen grains of the pine are provided with yellow vesicles, which buoy them up in the air very much on the principle of a box kite.

The World Moves.

There is no country in the world to-day in which you can be very happy if you care about politics and the progress of mankind, while there are many in which you can be very comfortable, if you occupy yourself simply with gardening lawn, tennis and true religion.—The late E. L. Godkin.

An Age of Kindness.

The progress of human sensibility is amazing; we give soldiers better food and lighter acoutrements, and less work to every one. The regime in prisons is milder; charity is ever increasing, and our children have less to do and longer holidays.

Watched Her Plumes.

A woman who was perfectly well, but fancied she was suffering from fever, called on an old and experienced physician to consult him. She described her symptoms at some length, and he listened patiently. At last he said: "I think I understand your case, madam. Sit perfectly still a few moments and let me look at you." She complied and he eyed her attentively for nearly a minute, glancing at his watch once or twice in the meantime. "There is nothing the matter with you, madam," he said. "You haven't the slightest indication of fever. Your heart beat is perfectly normal." "Why, how do you know doctor?" she asked in surprize. "You didn't feel my pulse." "I didn't need to," he answered. "I counted the vibrations of the ostrich feather on your hat." And he bowed her out.—Kansas City Star.

When a man never did any of the things when he was young that boys of to-day do either he was a fool then or he is a liar now.

A HUGE EARTH DAM.

Belle Fourche Project Undertaken by the Government at Cost of $5,000,000.

The big Belle Fourche irrigation dam in South Dakota, is the largest earth embankment in the world. Construction of the project was authorized by Congress on May 10, 1904, at a cost of $5,000,000.

From an engineering standpoint the Belle Fourche project is one of the most interesting which the Government has yet undertaken. Its principal structure is the earthen dam. This wonderful dike, which closes the lowest depressions in the rim of a natural basin, is 6,200 feet long, 20 feet wide on top and 115 feet high in the highest place.

The inside face of this structure, which has a slope of 2 to 1, will be protected from wave and ice action by 2 feet of screened gravel, on which will be placed concrete blocks, each 4 by 6 feet and 8 inches thick. The cubical contents of this dike will be 42,700,000 cubic feet, or about half of the famous pyramid of Cheops. The reservoir created by this dam will cover about 9,000 acres, and will be the largest lake in the State.—Popular Mechanics.

Elk Invade Washington Farms.

The heavy snows in the Olympic Mountains drove herds of elk down to this section and have grown fat on the hay and straw belonging to ranchers. Farmers generally take the invason philosophically and several of them have gone to the length of putting out fodder for the half starved animals. It is unlawful to kill elk in this State until 1915. In the meanwhile the elk may roam at will on the farmers' land. Many of the ranchers figure that by feeding and harboring the elk they may stay on their farms until after the closed season ends in 1915. Elk are more plentiful in the mountain regions than generally supposed and are increasing.

A Watchmaker's Ingenuity.

A despatch in a French newspaper from Berlin recounts the remarkable achievements of a watchmaker, one Carron a Pole. The fame of Carron had reached the ears of the Czar. His Majesty ordered that some brass nails, some wood splinters, a piece of glass and a broken cup and lengths or iron wire should be sent to the craftsman with the command that he should turn this material into a watch. The porcelain cup served as the case and the works were made of the other material. The Czar was surprised to receive the completed work in an incredibly short time.—London Globe.

A 70 Mile Fox Chase.

"I notice a good deal of comment on a sixty mile two day fox hunt in Pennsylvania," remarked a fox hunter, "which reminds me that we covered more than seventy miles here recently in a single day, and what is more, we got the fox. "First of all we rode not less than fifteen miles and back thirty miles. In the workout we covered not less than twelve miles, and in the four hour chase, red hot every minute, surely thirty miles more, a total of not less than seventy-two miles. "Personally I believe it to be one of the most remarkable runs on record."—Raleigh Times.

Wild Turkey in Virgina.

In King George county, Virginia, wild turkeys have been unusually plentiful. In a number of instances they joined flocks of domestic turkeys in barnyards. On the premises of Chapman Price, Belle Isle, a wild turkey joined the flock of fowls in the yard and when Price walked toward it the fowl became entangled in a wire fence and was caught. Alexander Pott, one of the best shots in King George county, frightened some wild fowl away from his flock of turkeys and succeeded in shooting one as it flew away in the direction of the woods.—Washington Star.

War Time Letter Box.

There is an interesting relic of the late civil war in Harrisburg in the post office box used by the soldiers camped at Second and Foster streets as a letter box. It is a wooden box that originally held a thousand cartridges, about 12 by 14 inches in size and 6 inches deep, and in the top is a slot in which letters were dropped. It had a hinged lid with lock, and stood in the headquarters tent, from which all mail was carried once a day. When the camp broke up the present owner of the box got it from the commandant and has kept it ever since, and it is in first class condition.

How a Boy Caught a Carp.

It isn't safe for the carp in the West Branch to take a nap. Clarence Shaffer, a ten-year-old boy of Muncy Dam, caught a 20 pound German carp recently by a unique method. Clarence said that he was walking along the shore when he happened to see the big fish "sitting near the bank asleep." He waded out to the fish and putting both arms around it threw it to the bank, he says, and it "never woke up," though, he had a tussle, but finally got it back in the field and then took it home.—Pennsylvania Record.

Pennsylvanian's Locust Exhibit.

H. Z. Baker of Newville, Cumberland County, has four bottles of seventeen year locusts of dates as follows: 1851, 1868, 1885 and 1902. He was 12 years old the first time he saw them and is now 72 years past. Each bottle is labeled and contains one locust for each of the dates named.—Philadelphia Record.

LUXURIOUS LIVING.

A Feature of American Life that Explains Some Things.

Collier's thinks it has discovered the secret of the "increased cost of living" in this country. "In 1899," it says, "the number of riders on Pullman cars in this country was 6,000,000; and they paid $10,000,000 as the price. In 1908, a year of hard times, there were 18,000,000 riders, at a cost of $30,000,000. A good deal of what is called increased cost of living in this country is really increased demand for luxuries." Somewhat; but there are a few other things in the country besides palace sleeping-cars. The whole energy of the party of Mr. Taft is devoted to the genial task of increasing the cost of living. Those who wish to ride in palace cars may take their chances, but the "ultimate consumer," the man or woman that pays all the taxes levied by the government or exacted by faction, settles all bills. The sooner we realize this very elemental fact, the sooner the country will get upon a basis of common sense and reasonable economy and thrift.

THE KAISER IN PALESTINE.

Traces of His Repeated Visits Everywhere Found by the Tourist.

Wherever red roofs appear in Palestine it betokens European invasion. Red roofs are enroachments of the modern—advance guards of western "civilization."

Many streets in Haifa might almost pass as a part of a German village. The rows of prim red roofed cottages, each in its neat garden, are in no degree Syrian. There were Germans in charge of the carriages to Nazareth; there were German hotels. Even the American Consul was German.

It is impossible not to notice evidences of the Kaiser's interest in Palestine. At each visit, the Kaiser pays to the Holy Land a bit of good road is built, writes Ruth Bryan Owens in the National Monthly, and after taking the drive to Nazareth we hoped for the comfort of later pilgrims that the Kaiser might pass that way.

In one place is a tablet erected by the Kaiser to the Sultan, at others thrifty German colonies; here a road there a fountain presented by him. When on the Mount of Ascension the guide pointed out the legendary footprint of the Master impressed in the rock and also the impress left by the prophet Mohammed one observant traveller asked: "And now where is the footprint of the German Emperor?"

The Conductor's Last Refuge.

Heretofore the wisdom of Solomon was required of all street car conductors many times a day when the question of a child's age arose. This delicate problem has just been solved by the Cincinnati Car Company in a manner that would make the author of the Book of Proverbs look to his laurels as a shrewd judge.

By careful computation it was ascertained that the average height of five-year-olds is 41 inches and accordingly a mark was painted at that height from the floor in their cars. Hereafter there can be no insinuations regarding the veracity of parents who desire to save that nickel. If dispute arises, the youngster is marched up to the fare height mark and the answer is obvious.—Technical World.

Reminder of New York in the Desert.

Travelling recently on donkey back across a trackless portion of the Conchilla desert, in southeastern California, we sighted ahead of us above the sage brush a nondescript object which on nearer approach resolved itself into two dilapidated trolley cars. They formed the equipment of a "horse railway" across the sand ten or twelve years ago to connect a solitary station on the Southern Pacific railway with an agricultural colony several miles distant. The farming enterprise failed utterly and the "horse railway" with it. The incongruous sight of these two abandoned cars in the midst of drifting sands was all that remained to tell the tale of shattered hope.—World Wide Magazine.

Self Sacrifice.

A story is told of a Rangeley Lakes guide who, while working on a log drive, fell into the water.

He struggled for a while, and at last, dizzy and nearly exhausted, managed to grasp a big log and hold on to it.

The current was so strong and swift that it carried his body under the log until his feet stuck out on the other side.

Just as a comrade grasped him by the shoulders he caught sight of his own feet protruding on the other side of the log.

"I can hold on a bit longer!" he gasped. "Save the poor fellow that's in head first, if you can."—Cleveland Leader.

The Earth's Core.

At a meeting of the Seismological Association at The Hague Prof. Weichert asserted that his studies of the varying velocity of earthquake tremors passing through the interior of the globe led to the conclusion that the earth consists of a central core of iron or steel about 5,580 miles in diameter surrounded with a stony shell 930 miles in thickness.

Between the outer solid rind and the inner layer of rock covering the metallic core he thinks there is a layer of liquid or plastic material lying a little less than twenty miles below the surface of the earth.—Scientific American.

Original Armless Wonder.

In the midst of a wintry wood a traveller in a sledge fled before a pack of famished wolves.

As soon as he could feel their hot breath on his cheek he muttered: "It's time!" drew his sword, struck off his left arm and threw it to the howling, hungry beasts.

But only to gain thereby a temporary respite. In a few moments they were upon him once more, whereat he drew his sword a second time, struck off his right arm and threw that out likewise.—Puck.

Fish Too Much for Three Men.

Charles Graybiel "treed" a large catfish in a log near his fishing camp at Sullivan ford. He sent to this city for help and three men chopped the log open. They got hold of the fish, but their combined strength was no match for it, and after splashing water several feet high it gave a terrific swish of its tail and sailed for deep water.—Indianapolis News.

Balzac by the Yard.

A well-known author not long ago stepped into the bookstore, but for some little time could not attract the attention of a clerk, all interest being centered in a stout gentleman who had strolled over in that direction and heard the head clerk remark:

"And now, sir, you have almost completed a library of which you will be proud; but, of course, you will want Balzac?"

"Waal, I don't know, now. You see we're only got two feet and seven inches' space left," the old gentleman replied. "Go ahead and measure him, though, and if he isn't too wide I'll take him too," he added.

Not Always.

Sufferer—Do you extract teeth without pain?

Dentist—Not always. I sprained my wrist on one a couple of days ago, and it hurts yet.—Answers.

Zoological.

"Johnny," said the Sunday school teacher, "can you tell me what animals were the first to enter the ark?" "Car-seat hogs," replied Johnny.

AT SAND LAKE

The Dignified Dozen went to Sand Lake Saturday bag and baggage, hamper and basket in Hayden's truck. They were dignified in name only, as they were out for a week of pleasure. Mrs. Kenrick accompanied them to cater for their fastidious tastes.

The party was made up of the Mesdames O B. Finch, B. Hurrey, A. W. Mills, Charles Kemp, R. J. W, and J F. N. Bowen, F. Bradley and Miss Loana Stacy. One or two were detained at home by illness but hope to join them later.

LIVELY RUNAWAY

You may think the town is quiet with not many people around, but let the sound of a runaway be heard and at once the streets are full of people, shouting and looking up and down the street to see where it started and the final destination.

Saturday afternoon as every one was pursuing the even tenor of their way, a sudden clattering of hoofs and rattling of wheels called every one to the doors and windows, and at once the streets presented a lively appearance as a team belonging to L. I. Bidwell, went down the line with the wheels and reach of a lumber wagon attached to them. They made a fine run down Chicago street to the sheds at the Globe Mill, where they stopped and were caught with but little trouble. They left the box and rack that were on the wagon on the roadside and no other damage has been reported.

FOR THE PUBLIC.

Mr. Highway Commissioner.
Dear Sir:—

At the recent convention of the Federation of Womens Clubs of Lenawee Co., at Hudson, the matter of beautifying the highways was taken up.

While we appreciate the necessity of exterminating the noxious weeds along the highways, we feel that the matter has been rather overdone in a good many localities. Not merely the noxious weeds have been cut down but all the beautiful shrubs and nativ, vines. as well. Such as, Bittersweet Virginia Creeper, wild grape vines, rose bushes etc., leaving a barren, unattractive roadside, where it had been beautiful and picturesque.

We understand how hard it is to eradicate the undesireable growths and leave the lovely and harmless ones also that it is quite hard to discriminate between them: as in the case of poison ivy and Virginia Creeper or woodbine. We know that the farmers claim that the bittersweet and wild grape vines rot even the wire fences: but we believe that the most of them would be willing, if they thought about it, to contribute that much towards beautifying the highways.

Then there is the law relative to planting trees along the highways. Could you not see that something along that line is accomplished?

It is not our desire to dictate to the authorities in these matters of caring for and beautifying the highways, but rather to assist and encourage them and it is entirely in this spirit that we submit the above suggestion.

COUNTY IMPROVEMENT COM.

Notice to Commissioners

If any person, unless duly authorized by the Highway Commissioner of the Township, or Road Overseer, shall put garbage or waste material of any kind into any highway with the intent to permit same to remain, every person so offending shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall pay a sum of not less than ten dollars, together with costs of prosecution.—Compiled Laws of Michigan, 1320 (4162)

Shade trees shall be planted along both sides of the public highway, as near as may be—sixty feet apart, etc. —Com. Laws of Michigan. 1320 (4163.)

In road districts where trees are not growing along highways to the extent required by foregoing section, the commissioner shall require that at least fifty trees per year be so planted in each district, etc., etc.—Com. Laws of Mich., 1321 (4165.)

LOVEMAKING IN SPAIN.

It Is Done Right Out In the Open, and No One Seems to Mind It.

The best of the Alcazar is the Alcazar gardens. But I would not ignore the homelike charm of the vast court by which you enter from the street outside to the palace beyond. It is planted casually about with rather shabby orange trees that children were playing under and was decorated with the week's wash of the low, simple dwellings which may be hired at a rental moderate even for Seville, where a handsome and commodious house in a good quarter rents for $60 a year.

One of those two story cottages, as we should call them, in the antecourt of the Alcazar had for the student of Spanish life the special advantage of a lover close to a ground floor window dropping tender nothings down through the slats of the shutter to some maiden lurking within.

The nothings were so tender that you could not hear them drop, and, besides, they were Spanish nothings, and it would not have served any purpose for the stranger to listen for them. Once afterward we saw the national courtship going on at another casement, but that was at night, and here the precious first sight of it was offered at 10 o'clock in the morning.

Nobody seemed to mind the lover stationed outside the shutter with which the iron bars forbade him the closest contact, and it is only fair to say that he minded nobody. He was there when we went in and there when we came out, and it appears that when it is a question of lovemaking time is no more an object in Spain than in the United States. The scene would have been better by moonlight, but you cannot always have it moonlight, and the sun did very well; at least the lover did not seem to miss the moon.—W. D. Howells in Harper's Magazine.

GOOD ADVICE

We clip the following from the Brooklyn Exponent, by substituting Tecumseh in the place of Brooklyn, it makes fine resolutions for Tecumsehites to adopt.

TAKE EVERY CHANCE TO BRAG ABOUT BROOKLYN

RESOLVE, That you will keep so busy boosting that you won't have time to knock.

That you will vote, talk, and work for a bigger, brighter Brooklyn.

That you will help make Brooklyn a good town so that the town can make good.

That you will invest your money here where you made it and where you can watch it.

That you will say something good about Brooklyn every time you write a letter.

That you will not point out the town's defects to a stranger or fail to point them out to a neighbor.

That you will keep your premises picked up and your buildings repaired as a matter of both pride and profit

That you will never buy a thing outside of Brooklyn until the local merchants have been given a chance to sell it to you.

That you will brag about Brooklyn so much that you will have to work for the town in order to keep from being a liar.

CURIOUS FISHING.

Gathering In Eels With Brushes and Shrimping on Horseback.

In the Hawaiian Islands some of the native fishermen literally go into the water and chase the fish into their nets.

The sea round the shores of the islands is studded with coral reefs, in which are numerous holes and tiny caves in which the fish hide. The natives row out over there reefs, taking with them a brush about three feet in length, with very long bristles, and shallow nets, somewhat resembling a paper bag, as they are closed at one end.

As they row over the surface, seeking a likely spot, they chew a very oily fruit known as the candle nut. When they consider they have reached a good fishing ground they spit out this nut, which forms a thin film on the top of the water, over which the wind passes without leaving a ripple. This enables them to see right down into the clear sea, and if they are satisfied with the outlook they prepare to fish.

Taking the brush in one hand and the net, the mouth of which is propped open by means of a twig or two in the other, they dive noiselessly and quietly overboard. Having arrived at the face of the coral reef, they literally brush the frightened fish out of their dens, endeavoring to catch them in the net as they dart away.

There is one place at least on the coast of Belgium where they go shrimping on horseback. The trawling nets are attached to the sides of saddles carried by horses or big donkeys, and on their back men, and women, too, for that matter, ride into the sea until the animals are almost under water, when they drag the trawls behind them, walking parallel to the shore.—Stray Stories.

ADRIAN IN THE MOVING PICTURE SHOWS

The business houses, parks, public buildings and other places of interest of Adrian, are soon to be shown in the moving picture shows, 1000 foot reel will be shown. The contract has been closed and the films will soon be ready.

While the films will be of interest to the spectators as showing the beauties of Adrian, yet as an advertising medium they will be great. The working of the factories will be of much interest. This will give the city a wide publicity, and the possibility of their appearing in the Michigan building in California in 1915 is almost an assured thing.

Not Hard to Deceive Moslems.

Times have changed since Captain Burton, 60 years ago, made a pilgrimage to Mecca at the peril of his life. A recent account of such a pilgrimage, by A. J. B. Wavell, says that with a passable knowledge of Arabic and of Moslem ceremonial, and with due precautions as to avoiding pilgrims from the country to which one pretends to belong, "the pilgrimage to Mecca may be made in disguise without running any risk worth mentioning."

The residents of Hudson are overjoyed at the prospect of having a free city delivery. The receipts of the postoffice to July 1st, show such a large increase and have reached the mark required by the post office department, so that a free city delivery is assured. The city council has ordered that the houses be numbered, which is one of the requirements and after this is completed. It will be necessary to have a petition signed by the citizens of the city asking for the free city delivery.—Adrian Daily Times.

A special train from Ohio passed through town Monday afternoon, the special feature being that the passengers were everyone of them women. Not a little curiosity was shown to know the why and where. It has developed that it was 150 girls employed by the Dayton Cash Register Co. who were going for an outing to Goguac Lake just out of Battle Creek for a week. They seemed a merry lot of girls and were kept busy, as they passed through town, waving handkerchiefs and exchanging the compliments of the day with those on the street.

Miss Metta Stewart came from Bridgewater Saturday for an over Sunday visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. T. Stewart.

MOTHER-OF-PEARL.

Diffraction Grating Causes Its Beautiful Iridescence.

The apparent color of mother-of-pearl was for a long time somewhat of a puzzle to scientists. Later it was found that the surface of mother-of-pearl consisted of fine striations or ridges, with, of course, little hollows between. This explained everything, for it was then to the scientists nothing more or less than an ordinary diffraction grating. To prove it still further an impression of the surface was taken in black wax, and the wax itself exhibited the beautiful display of color shown in the original mother-of-pearl surface. The color is not due to pigment, but to the cancellation in part of the light falling on the surface.

To understand this better it will be well to explain a diffraction grating. It consists of a piece of plate glass upon which are engraved many parallel lines. Rowland has been able to scratch lines on a glass so that there are 20,000 to the inch and the distances from one to the other do not vary by one-millionth of that distance in the 20,000.

As white light, or sunlight, consists of every color known and as light travels in waves, at certain places if light is coming from several different directions very close to one another some of these waves will meet in what are known as opposite phases and will blot one another out, and the only remaining color will be the white.

It can be easily seen what is meant by opposing phases from a consideration of waves on the seashore. If the top of a big wave meets a trough of another they cancel, and no wave at all is the result. The same takes place in light phenomena. Light consists of an ether wave, similar to wireless waves, only much shorter, and if its wave is destroyed none of that light can be seen by the eye.

REAPING BENEFIT

From the Experience of Tecumseh People.

We are fortunate indeed to be able to profit by the experience of our neighbors. The public utterances of Tecumseh residents on the following subject will interest and benefit many of our readers. Read this statement No better proof can be had.

George D. Chaplin, carpenter, N Ottawa St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I willingly confirm the public statement I gave in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills in December 1905 I have taken this remedy on different occasions since then and have always found that it acts as represented My kidneys were disordered and made me miserable. Knowing of several people in this vicinity who had used Doan's Kidney Pills with success, I obtained a supply at Wright & Son's Drug store and began using them. The results were very satisfactory and I am in hopes that other kidney sufferers will profit by reading of my experience"

Caustic John Bright.

Many stories were told about John Bright's caustic repartees in private life. This story, says the British Weekly, is true:

"I should like to come back to this world in fifty years to see what changes have happened in England," said a gentleman to Mr. Bright.

"My good sir," replied Mr. Bright, "if you don't mend your ways you may be glad of any excuse to come back."

Quite Soothing.

"I suppose, young man, that you realize the cost of supporting two persons?" asked the stern father.

"I am sure that you will find that my income is quite sufficient for my own needs. You will not have an extra burden if I marry your daughter." —Buffalo Express.

Lacerated Feelings.

"Doesn't it humiliate you to have to go through life this way?" asked the sympathetic woman as she purchased a photograph.

"Yes, ma'am," replied the bearded lady. "If it wasn't for the wife and kids I'd throw up the job today."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A HOUSE BOAT COLONY.

Vessels Out in Oregon Have the Conveniences of a City Flat.

Houseboating on the Willamette River is the proper way for the people of Portland, Ore., to spend their summers, according to a writer in "Suburban Life." He says that there is an entire colony of houseboats just above the city. Probably there is no similar houseboat village anywhere.

"They possess almost all the conveniences of a city flat, the houses are lighted with electricity, city water is piped to the door, and in some cases the houses are supplied with it," he says. "Telephones are installed in most of the houses, and an electric street car runs within easy reach, but just far enough away to give the colony the desired seclusion.

"To make it still more citified it is proposed to install gas from the city system during the present year. The finest boat in the colony cost $1,500, and is 18 by 60 feet. The average houseboat, however, is worth about one-half this sum."

A Clockmaker's Discovery.

A grandfather's clock which for many years has stood in the vestry at St. Paul's Cathedral recently broke down and was sent to a clockmaker to be repaired. The clockmaker detected a faint gleam of yellow below the black paint on the case, and commencing to remove the covering he brought to light a specimen of exquisite inlaid marquetry work.

The clock is evidently one which is referred to in the Cathedral accounts for the year October, 1697, to September, 1698, as follows: "For a Pendulum Clock for the South-East Vestrey that goes 8 days in a Wallnut Tree Case, $14:00:00." At this time Langley Bradley, the maker of the celebrated St. Paul's clock, was the Cathedral clockmaker, and there is little doubt that this clock was his work.—Westminster Gazette.

In the Good Old Days.

The lobster was not always the aristocrat of the supper table and the most costly of delicacies. A man who used to live in Maine, but now lives in Ohio has this reminiscence:

"One day here in Cleveland I took a friend out to luncheon, and suddenly the old appetite for lobster came back to both of us, as we were both born on the Maine coast.

We had two full portions and the bill was $2.20. And yet as a boy I've seen my father standing on the wharf bargaining with a fisherman for his lobster catch of the day, and often for $2 I've seen the lobster fisherman turn over to my father the entire catch, and the whole boatload, 250 or 300 big black lobsters, perhaps, would be dumped on the landing and taken back on our old farm as feed for the pigs."—Cleveland Leader.

Wister in Land of "The Virginian."

Owen Wister, whose "Virginian" made this town famous, was the guest of the town, stopping here for a few hours before starting for the Jackson Hole country on a hunt. While here Wister witnessed the dedication of the Virginian Hotel, which stands on the site of the old Elk saloon, in which some of the scenes of his novel were enacted.

Wister will travel from here to the Jackson Hole country over the trail to the Sunk Creek ranch, which figures so prominently in "The Virginian." He is seeking atmosphere for another Wyoming story.—Medicine Bow correspondence Denver Republican.

His Star of Mercy Had Set.

Little Arthur was very proud of his membership in the "band of mercy." He wore the badge, a small star, as if it were a policeman's insignia, and could often be heard reproving the other boys for their cruel treatment of dogs and cats.

But one day a lady of the neighborhood was astonished to find him in the very act of tormenting the cat most cruelly. She protested, "Why, Arthur, what are you doing? I thought you belonged to the 'band of mercy.'"

"I did," he said, "but I lost my star."

Fish in Kansas Irrigating Canals.

In addition to the heavy rains the Arkansas River is furnishing the local irrigating canals with a big supply of water, and an immense lot of eatable fish are pouring into Lake McKinney.

Fully a thousand pounds of fine, fat carp, weighing from three to five pounds, were secured one day. The fishermen simply take a pitchfork and throw them out of the canal as they drift into the lake.—Lakin correspondence Topeka Capital.

Europe's Oldest House.

Count Matuschka-Grieffenklau convoked a conference of archaeologists in his house at Winkel-on-the-Rhine. The conference unanimously expressed the opinion that the Count's is the oldest house still occupied in Europe. It was formerly the dwelling of the Bishop of Mayence, Rabnus Maurus, who died there in 850.—Tit-Bits.

Prehistoric California City.

What is considered to be the most important archaeological find yet made in the state of California took place recently when a man discovered the ruins of a prehistoric city in the San Jacinto mountains, near the edge of the Cochella valley. There are more than 700 well-preserved stone houses, evidences of paved streets and a large amount of earthenware. The discoverer's attention was first attracted to the place by a number of gashes in the mountain side, and on investigation he found a series of heaped up stones. He approached nearer and found the streets of an ancient city, the houses being built on terraces. An old road was found to lead from the city to the top of a near-by peak, on which was found the stone ruin of what seemed to have been a watch tower.—The Pathfinder.

A WOMAN'S WISDOM.

The worried mother wakes up to hear her baby's heavy breathing—a little cough—perhaps the croup or whooping cough. She does not want to send for the doctor when perhaps the trouble does not amount to much. Finally she thinks of that medical book her father gave her, The Common Sense Medical Adviser, by R. V. Pierce, M. D. She says "just the thing to find out what is the matter with the little dear." Two million households in this country own one—and it's to be had for only 31c, in stamps—1,000 pages in splendid cloth binding. A good family adviser in any emergency. It is for either sex. This is what many women write Dr. Pierce—in respect to his "Favorite Prescription," a remedy which has made thousands of melancholy and miserable women cheerful and happy, by curing the painful womanly diseases which undermine a woman's health and strength.

MRS. ZUBERT AND BABE.

"My desire is to write a few lines to let you know what your valuable medicine has done for me," writes MRS. MARGARET ZUBERT, of 334 S. Bentalon Street, Baltimore, Md. "Before the storck came to our house I was a very sick woman. I wrote you for advice which was kindly given and which made me a different woman in a short time. After taking the first bottle of 'Favorite Prescription' I began improving so that I hardly knew I was in such a condition. I did my own housework—washing and ironing, cooking, sewing, and the worst of all nursed three children who had whooping cough. I hardly knew of the advent ten minutes before—so easy was it. The baby is as fat as a butter-ball. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the best medicine for any woman to take when in this condition. I recommend it to all my friends."

FAMOUS PHRASES

Origin of Some of World's Most Popular Quotations.

WORDS THAT WILL ENDURE.

"While There's Life There's Hope" Was Written by Cicero, and Cynical Old Diogenes It Was Who Told the World "Habit Is Second Nature."

It is recorded that an ignorant person, explaining her distaste for Shakespearean performances, said that his plays were too full of quotations. Yet we, too, though we may pride ourselves upon our learning, probably do not know the origin of half the common phrases we use as carelessly as verbs in our daily conversation.

No less a person than Cicero first made use of the expression, "While there's life there's hope," in a letter he wrote to Atticus. "We are in the same boat" is not modern slang, but occurs in a letter written by Clement I., bishop of Rome, to the Church of Corinth in the first century. This letter is extant and is one of the prized documents of the early church.

"I never put off till tomorrow what I can do today," was Lord Chesterfield's explanation of how he managed to do so much work. "Whatever is worth doing at all is worth doing well" he wrote later in the famous letters to his son.

In some of the expressions we use habitually may be crystallized an epoch of history. Such is the motto of the Order of the Garter, "Honi soit qui mal y pense" ("Shamed be he who thinks evil of it"), which was given by Edward III. of England. Wishing to draw the best soldiers in the world to him, he proposed a revival of the round table of King Arthur, holding a tournament at Windsor castle on New Year's day, 1344. After the contest of arms the guests were entertained at his expense at a round table. Philip, king of France, was jealous over the interest this aroused and forbade his subjects to attend, at the same time misrepresenting Edward's motives. Several years later, when Edward founded the Order of the Garter, he chose a motto that seemed to challenge his rival monarch to think wrong of it if he dared.

Later English history has not been laggard in increasing the supply of apt remarks that have grown into everyday sayings. Lord Eldon, lord chancellor of England during the first twenty-six years of the nineteenth century, continually mispronounced the name of Henry Brougham, afterward to be a successor in the chancellor's office. Brougham objected to be called Broffam, and in this regard Eldon was the chief offender. Once, after Brougham had made an excellent speech, Eldon by way of apology pronounced his name correctly and made a proverb, "New brooms sweep clean."

The same expression occurs frequently to different people who could have no knowledge that their thought had been given utterance before. "No man is a hero to his valet" has been paraphrased by scores, from Mme. du Cornuel, a witty Frenchwoman of the seventeenth century, to Dr. Johnson and Napoleon. The first record of it, however, is found in Plutarch, who states that when Hermodotus addressed a poem to Antigonous I., king of Sparta, hailing him as son of the sun and a god, the monarch replied, "My body servant sings me no such song."

It was Diogenes, the cynic, who declared that "habit is second nature." The phrase "circumstances over which he has no control" was used by the Duke of Wellington in a letter concerning some affairs in which his son was mixed up and with which he declined to interfere. Dickens also used the expression a few years later when he had Micawber write to David Copperfield, "Circumstances beyond my individual control," etc.

"Conspicuous by their absence" has been used on many occasions in modern oratory. It was first used by Tacitus in relating that in the funeral procession of Julia, niece of Cato, sister of Brutus, wife of Cassius, many of the images of the most famous families in Rome were seen, but "Cassius and Brutus shone pre-eminent because their images were not displayed."

"Nothing is certain but death and taxes," wrote Benjamin Franklin, stating that the constitution of the United States was in operation and to all appearances would last.

"Those who live in glass houses should not throw stones" was said by James I. of England when his favorite, the Duke of Buckingham, complained that a mob had broken his glass windows, which were at that time a luxury.

"Mind your p's and q's" is said to have been taken from an old French phrase at the time of Louis XIV. A very low bow was in fashion, and the dancing master in instructing his pupils would warn them to look out for the position of the feet and the movement of the head lest their cue wigs be disarranged. The French word for foot is pied. "Mind your pieds and queues" soon came to be transplanted into English and abbreviated.

Wallace Irwin once complained that when he had been invited to be funny at a banquet his real gems of wit were addressed to the back of his chauffeur on the way home. But what's the difference? According to the Latin poet, upheld by modern investigation, everything you could possibly say has been said before.—Anna Bird Stewart in Minneapolis Journal.

A Man Up a Tree

How He Got There and How He Came Down

By F. A. MITCHEL

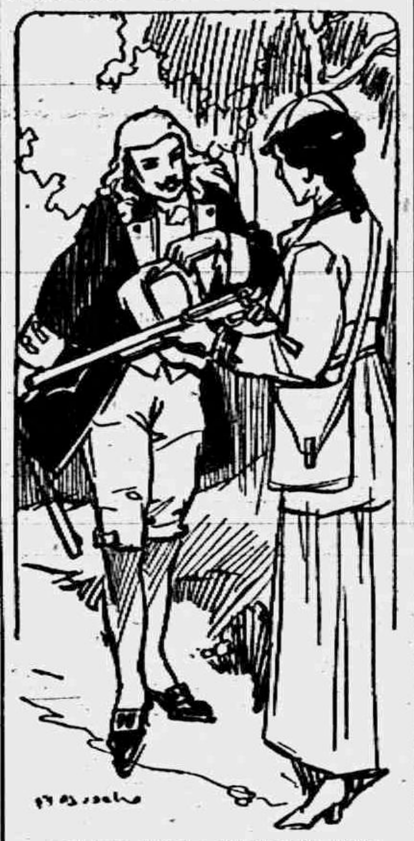
Mlle. Chauvier was an orphan and an heiress. She lived in the chateau of her ancestors on the banks of the river Loire with a widowed aunt, her mother's sister, who fulfilled the part, so far as possible, of mother.

While mademoiselle was a liberal giver to charity and subscribed to all the projects for the benefit of her immediate neighborhood, there was one matter in which she was considered selfish. She would permit no one to shoot on her estate.

Mademoiselle was fond of rising early during the hunting season for a bit of sport before breakfast. One morning she emerged from the chateau in shooting costume as the sun was rising above the horizon. Carrying her own gun and game bag—for she would not have an attendant—she started for some timberland at no great distance. Having gained it, she was aiming at a pheasant on the limb of a tree when she heard an "Ahem!"

Mademoiselle dropped her eyes from the bird and swept them in a semicircle about her. It was then that she received the astonishment of her life. Aiming at the bird she was about to shoot was a young man in a costume which for hunting was marvelous to behold. On his head was a three cornered hat. His coat, which was covered with golden lace, flared in the skirt; from his chest extended a profusion of lace; his legs were incased in knee breeches and silk stockings, while on his shoes were enormous silver buckles. In short, he was a gentleman of the eighteenth century poaching in the twentieth on mademoiselle's estate.

For a moment the lady wondered if this gentleman were not her great-grandfather returned to his former earthly home to shoot his own birds. But he was certainly no ghost. On the contrary, he was flesh and blood and a handsome young man, with a figure and face seen to advantage in a very becoming costume. The most likely explanation of his presence was that he was a lunatic.



THEN HE MADE A PROFOUND BOW.

The man lowered his gun and turned his gaze upon the lady. Then he made a profound bow. She was temporarily relieved. Evidently he was not of the violent kind, and she must handle him in a way to prevent his becoming so.

"Pardon," he said. "I would have asked your kind permission to shoot on your estate had it not been that the hour is unseasonable and I was not willing to arouse you from slumber. I am fond of shooting at this hour and was tempted to break over your rule. I now ask the permission I should otherwise have asked to shoot on your estate."

"Certainly, monsieur. Shoot as much as you wish."

"Thanks, mademoiselle. I am more pleased at your generosity than at any benefit I shall derive from it. I have secured a breakfast and that is all I wish."

He held up a brace of birds.

"You are quite welcome, monsieur."

"A breakfast for you, mademoiselle. I would not think of keeping game I have no right to keep."

"Do so by all means Game is plentiful in my preserves."

"Your kindness would be more acceptable if shown in another way."

"What way?"

"By permitting me to carry your gun and bag."

Mademoiselle hesitated. She feared that the man wished to get her gun from her to render her defenseless, yet she did not wish to refuse him lest she irritate him. She resorted to subterfuge.

"My gun I need to kill birds. You may carry my bag if you like."

"I shall feel honored at being permitted to do so."

Meanwhile the bird both had aimed at had flown away. All desire for sport had left the lady, and her only wish was to get out of the toils of the madman without being murdered. She walked on through the wood, endeavoring to conjure up some plan of escape. Presently an idea was suggested to her by seeing a birds' nest far up on a branch.

"I have never got over my childish desire for birds' nests," she said. "How I would like to go up and get that one! Alas, what is for a little girl is not for a woman!"

Her companion dropped the game bag and rested his gun against the tree. Then, without even doffing his coat, he jumped, caught a lower limb, swung himself upon it, then stepped from one limb to another till he reached the one on which the nest had been built, scrambled out on it, seized the nest and was making his way back when he heard mademoiselle say:

"Stop!"

Looking down, he saw her pointing her gun at him with her finger on the trigger. He could see that she was very much excited.

"Stay where you are!" she said. "If you attempt to come down I'll shoot."

"Why, mademoiselle," said the man, "what means this change in you?"

Mademoiselle was so taken up with her own plans for having the lunatic secured that she did not hear. She was too far from the chateau to call. If she fired her gun it would be supposed that she was simply killing birds, and now that she had antagonized him, she feared she would have to kill him in self defense. What to do she did not know.

"May I ask, mademoiselle," said the man up in the [illegible], "what I have done to offend you?"

"Nothing, I [illegible] you."

There was a [illegible] pause. The man was puzzled, and as [illegible] the lady, how can one explain to a lunatic?

"Would you mind showing that confidence by lowering your gun? I see it is cocked. Your finger is on the trigger and trembling. The gun might go off."

There was a shout of merriment from a thicket near by, and it seemed as if pandemonium had been let loose. A dozen men and women in fantastic costumes emerged from behind trees and came trooping toward the tree. Mademoiselle stood looking at them in amazement. Nevertheless she kept her nerve.

"I was not aware," she said, "that there is a lunatic asylum in the vicinity. I supposed the gentleman up in the tree was alone in his madness."

"You have lost, Le Vergne!" cried one of the men.

"Not at all," replied the man above. "On the contrary, I have won."

"Prove it."

"Mademoiselle," asked Le Vergne, "did you not give me permission to shoot in your grounds?"

"I did. I feared that if I refused you would kill me."

"You have lost, Bertier!" cried the crowd, laughing.

"Mademoiselle," said Le Vergne, "it is time that you were given an explanation of these singular proceedings. If you will permit me to come down I will enlighten you."

"Certainly, monsieur; come down."

Her gun had been already lowered. Le Vergne came down and, standing before her, deferentially said.

"Last night the officers of the Fifty-seventh of the line gave a dance in costume to some friends from Paris. We danced till morning, when, sitting over some champagne and eatables, our conversation turned upon your splendid preserves and your unwillingness to allow any one to shoot therein. I, Captain Le Vergne, bet Major Bertier that I would shoot in your grounds with your permission. I entered the preserves dressed as I am, expecting to be arrested and taken to you. I had no definite plan as to how I should extract your forgiveness and gain your permission to shoot. I intended to rely entirely on my wits.

"I was surprised to meet you so early in the morning and to find you so kindly disposed toward me. I wondered that you did not ask the reason for my strange costume, and it did not occur to me that you mistook me for a lunatic till I saw you pointing your gun at me when I was coming down with your birds' nest. Permit me to apologize for making you the subject of a bet and to offer you the birds' nest as a souvenir of the occasion."

Mlle. Chauvier was much amused at the explanation as well as relieved at the termination of the freak. She accepted the souvenir graciously.

"I would not be satisfied, mademoiselle," said one of the ladies of the party, "if I were you, at such a paltry gift. Captain Le Vergne has won 2,000 francs from Major Bertier and can afford to offer you a much more substantial acknowledgment of your kindness in permitting him to use your preserves and especially for not shooting him for a madman when you had put him up a tree."

"You have omitted to tell me how it happens that you are all here," said mademoiselle.

"We followed Le Vergne from a distance to observe what he would do."

"Now that I understand the matter you must all come home with me to breakfast."

And so it was that mademoiselle entertained at breakfast a number of guests in masquerade costume who had not slept a wink for thirty-six hours. After that she added the words "without permission" to her notices forbidding hunting on her grounds, and the permission was usually granted. She was also a frequent visitor to the military station from whence her breakfast guests had come, and it is reported now, several years after the function, that she is about to enter the army as Mme. Le Colonel Le Vergne.

The Turkish Mangal.

In most of the houses in Constantinople as well as in other cities of Turkey heating in winter is done by means of the so called "mangal." This consists principally of a receptacle for burning charcoal. A mangal may be nothing else than a simple brass or iron receptacle or may be quite an artistic and expensive article of most rare and valuable workmanship. The charcoal is first thoroughly burned through, and when it no longer emits any flame or odor the mangal is brought into the room for purposes of heating. Sometimes it happens that proper attention is not paid to the burning charcoal, with not infrequent fatal results.

The question as to whether work is to be delayed on about 15 Michigan public building projects authorized by last session's appropriation bill will be decided at a caucus of Democratic members to be held Thursday. Among the Michigan buildings that would be affected by the decision of the caucus are: Cadillac, $25,000; Detroit, $70,000; Holland, $20,000; Muskegon, $75,000; Charlotte, $65,000; Dowagiac, $55,000; Houghton, $100,000; Cheboygan, $70,000; Hastings, $81,000; Midland, $60,000; Wyandotte, $75,000; Mount Pleasant, $75,000; Bad Axe, $55,000; Benton Harbor, $25,000; Calumet, $20,000.

George Brokenshaw, an Oxford grocer, his wife and daughter, were seriously injured, two probably fatally, when their machine collided with a Woodward avenue car at Detroit Sunday. Mrs. Brokenshaw and her daughter, Marcelle, were thrown to the pavement, the daughter suffering a fractured skull and other injuries. The mother was badly cut. Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Prince, the other occupants of the machine, were hurt, but not fatally.

A school day romance, which started in Benton Harbor 15 years ago, culminated Saturday in the marriage of Douglas D. Martin, of Lansing, to Miss Cecyl C. Wilcox at her home in Fairmont, W. Va. After they were graduated from the high school at Benton Harbor Mr. Martin entered the newspaper field and is now managing editor of the State Journal. His bride finished a course at the Ypsilanti Normal, and for the last two years has been on the faculty of the West Virginia State Normal. After an extended eastern trip they will return to Lansing.

Weary of caring for his invalid wife, who has been confined to her bed for years following a stroke of paralysis, Charles Greenland, 64 years old, committed suicide early Sunday morning by jumping into the Grand river at Grand Rapids. A few hours later John Stehower, a laborer, noticed the body and dragged it ashore. He then started to notify the police, but met a milkman, who insisted on seeing the corpse. When the milkman turned the body over and caught a glimpse of the distorted features, he screamed, "My God, it's my father!" and fainted. The milkman was John Greenland, only son of the dead man. Later, when the distracted son told the aged mother of the elder Greenland's death, the woman fainted and is now in a serious condition.

GOVERNOR WILL HELP END STRIKE

Miners Send Men to Lansing To Confer With Him.

NO FURTHER TROUBLE OCCURS

All of State Troops Are In the Copper Country. Efforts Being Made to Have the Governor Intercede. No Bloodshed Has Been Reported.

Governor Ferris has offered his services toward securing a settlement of the copper strike.

General Abbey, commanding the state troops now patrolling the copper country, Tuesday afternoon received a message from the governor instructing him to lay before the operators a proposal for a conference in Lansing at any date agreeable to the two parties.

The governor does not offer himself as a mediator, but indicates that he will offer his services in any capacity the two warring forces may agree upon.

The proposal was laid before the two warring factions Wednesday. The operators were asked to come to Calumet to consider the governor's proposition. The proposal went to the miners at the same time.

It is proposed by the governor that each side name a committee of five to meet with him at Lansing. The miners are more than willing to do this, in fact they desire arbitration; but it is a question how the mine owners will look upon the proposition as it is reported that the owners of the Calumet & Hecla said grass would grow upon the streets before they would treat with the miners as a union.

If the mine owners agree to meet the miners in the company of the governor it is thought that the strike will be virtually over, but if the mine owners refuse to meet with them it is expected that trouble willstart again.

A. W. Kerr, a Calumet attorney, and C. E. Mahoney, vice president of the Western Federation of Miners, were at Lansing Tuesday in conference with Gov. Ferris in an effort to have all state troops withdrawn from the mining districts. Claims are made that there is no need of them there as the situation can be handled by the local authorities.

Owing to a report that the Miscowaubik club house was liable to be blown up with dynamite, General Abbey placed guards around the building which is the home of one of the most exclusive clubs in Michigan, composed of Calumet & Hecla officials, stockholders and employes holding executive positions.

Fearing that their loyal employes would be attacked in their homes by strikers or sympathizers, the Calumet & Hecla and all other mining companies in the northern part of the country refused to resume pumping operations pending a decision by General Abbey, commanding the militia, as to whether any effort would be made by troops to protect loyal employes after they leave the mines.

On the South range, however, all the principal mines started the arduous labor of raising millions upon millions of gallons of water from the depths of their workings, in some instances almost a mile deep. Last night fires were built under the boilers and this morning huge clouds of black smoke poured from the many tall chimneys that mark the southern range.

No disturbances marked the resumption of pumping. A parade and mass meeting at Painesdale by more than 2,000 miners from the Baltic, Trimountain, Champion and Isle Royale mines, in the extreme southern part of the copper country, was the only demonstration.

Hundreds of Italian, Russian, Finnish and Servian women mingled with the men, their gay-colored shawls and waists fluttered in the breeze. Their animation and vivacious gestures gave color to the picture, contrasting strongly to the dull clothing of the men.

J. C. Lowney, of Denver, member of the executive committee of the Western Federation of Miners, was the principal speaker. The others all spoke in foreign languages. Lowney, who is regarded as one of the strongest and most conservative of the federation heads, counseled the men against violence, advised against drinking and urged the men to hold out.

Many wild rumors are current from time to time but it is not thought that one-half of them are started in good faith an dthe military authorities are not paying much attention to them.

The Montana miners, Executive Committeeman Miller said, had voted $15,000 a month to the copper workers. Colorado, Arizona, Nevada, California, Utah, Missouri and one or two other states, he declared, would also contribute, assuring sufficient finances to keep the strike going many months, he said. The miners are not yet feeling the loss of earnings and today it was declared that the miners had a high average of savings accounts, especially in the southern district. Mr. Miller also announced his intention of making a canvass of influential political and business men of the district to enlist their aid in influencing Governor Ferris to withdraw the troops.

PERRY'S FLAGSHIP IS GREETED AT MONROE

Extensive Program Rendered in Honor of "Niagara."

MONROE—Commodore Perry's flagship, the Niagara, has arrived at Monroe Piers.

The boat was escorted by the Essex and Wolverine, a little befor 8 o'clock

The Essex, being of draught too deep for the river, remained in the lake and a tug brought in the Niagara and the Wolverine, both of which lay at the north pier.

A reception committee, consisting of a number of leading citizens, the city and county officials and the officers of the Monroe Yacht club extended the welcome from 8:30 to 10:30 o'clock.

At 10:30 o'clock the officers of the Niagara and guests left the Piers on cars and proceeded to the city where automobiles met them for a tour of the various points of interest in the city.

After lunch, at 2:30 o'clock, there were catboat races over the Monroe Yacht club course, in which crews from the government boats, each carrying a captain and a man, participated.

After the preliminary reception, the public was free to visit and inspect the historic vessel. The Detroit, Monroe and Toledo electric railway made arrangements for half hourly service and had enough cars on hand to care for the crowds. The Monroe band furnished the music.

MAKE COUNTY THE GOAT

Charges Police Juggle Warrants In City's Favor.

FLINT — Prosecuting Attorney Bishop has opened the way for an interesting probe, by charging the police department with deliberatly manipulating complaints in justice court cases, so that the city profits by those cases in which the offenders pay fines, and the county is made to bear the burden of expenses in cases involving workhouse sentences.

The allegation of the prosecutor is based on the case of a man and woman arrested for disorderly conduct and brought into court on complaints made against the man under the city ordinance.

The woman was committed in the Detroit house of correction and her male companion was released on the payment of a fine, which goes into the city treasury, together with the fee exacted by the city house of correction as a county prisoner.

WILL INVESTIGATE CROSSING

Deaths Call Attention to Need of Crossing Protection.

KALAMAZOO—Immediately following the grade crossing accident comes the announcement that there will be a thorough investigation of the grade crossing situation in this city.

At the inquest into the death of Mrs. A. B. Cornell, who was killed when a switch engine hit the automobile, in which she was riding with Mr. and Mrs. A. K. Edwards, who were also injured, Coroner Martin Verhage stated that he would find out why the crossing is not protected.

Two years ago a train hit a street sweeper there, causing two deaths and injury to several.

NEW YORK — William Ziegler, Jr., the chief heir under the will of his foster father, William Ziegler, the baking powder manufacturer, won a victory over Mayor Gaynor, William S. Champ and Mrs. Matilda Ziegler, the executors, when Surrogate Cohalan decided that he is entitled to $4,000,000 of accumulated income because he has attained his majority.

GENERAL NEWS.

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Ethelbert Stewart of Decatur, Ill., has been appointed chief statistician for the bureau of labor statistics. He succeeds C. W. W. Hanger, appointed assistant commissioner of the new federal mediation board. The change is effective immediately. Mr. Stewart has been connected with the work of the bureau of labor since 1885, doing both departmental and field work. He was detailed to the tariff board in 1910, and, on the completon of the work of the board, was appointed chief statistician of the newly created children's bureau, of which Miss Julia Lathrop of Chicago is in charge.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.—Nat Goodwin is finishing up the 500,000 word story of his life including the story of his marriage and divorces. Asked who, of all the beautiful women he had met, he had really loved the most, Goodwin replied: Why, my present wife, of course. Who else could it be? She saved my life twice in one day. I could not help loving her, for she is the one true woman and the one woman I have loved. I have told the entire story of my life and have omitted none of the details of my career. I let everyone down lightly and do not hand it out to any one."

BERLIN, GER. — Declaration of a "birth strike" was suggested at a meeting held to discuss the advisability of a general strike as the best means of bringing about electoral reform. The father of the idea is Dr. Alfred Bernstein, who declared that most successful pressure would be exerted on the government if the mothers would announce: "We will bring no children into the world to become citizens of this state unless better rights of citizenship are accorded."

TAFT, CAL. — Drew Caminetti, one of the chief actors in the Diggs-Caminette "white slave" scandal, has been working with a pipeline crew here since June 1. He is known here as "Blackie," a nickname inspired by his dark tanned features since working outside in the hot sun. His identity became known to fellow workers through his constant long-distance telephone messages to his home regarding the court developments over his indictment.

WEBSTER SPRINGS, W. VA.—Dr. H. F. Asbury, a member of the lower branch of the West Virginia legislature, was found guilty by a jury of having accepted a bribe for his vote in recent contest for a United States senator. Dr. Asbury is third of seven legislators to be convicted. State Senator Ben A. Smith and Delegate Rath Duff are awaiting sentence. The trial of Delegate S. U. G. Rhodes is expected to begin at once.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Gifts from enlisted men in the army to wives of officers will not be permitted. The war department held in a recent case that came to its attention that no matter how much the enlisted men may desire to show their appreciation of kindness and service rendered to them it is contrary to the maintenance of military discipline for them to make presents to the wife of any officer.

ATLANTA, GA.—Miss Lola Shaw, twenty-five years old, was arrested in the rooming house of R. T. Venable, at 171½ Piedmont avenue on a charge of being intoxicated and disorderly. At the station, Miss Shaw, a pretty young woman, sair she is the daughter og a Baptist minister, the Rev. L. T. Shaw of Ivy S. C. She said, too, that she never tasted liquor until that night.

CRIMES AND CASUALTIES.

LEAVENWORTH, KAN. — Charles Stevens, alias Chas. Savage, a negro, convicted five years ago for the theft at the Kansas City Union station of a mail pouch containing $50,000, was released from the federal prison here. He was rearrested, however, on the specific charge of cutting open a mail sack. His attorney is arranging for bail. Stevens was convicted on six counts and sentenced to serve five years on each. The order for his release was issued recently by Judge Sanborn of federal court of appeals on a writ of habeas corpus. No trace of the stolen money ever was found.

CANTON, OHIO — Carlton Truman of Cleveland was drowned in Congress lake, near here, and his fiancee, Miss Helen Tilden of Canton, lost her life in an effort to save him. Truman was seized with cramps while swimming out in the lake and called for help. Miss Tilden rowed out toward him in a boat, but he sank before she reached him. She jumped overboard as Truman came to the surface, but, hampered by her clothing, she was unable to keep herself and her companion on the surface.

CHICAGO—Frank Hredek, a chauffeur, who has been on trial with Fred Cordes, an assistant, charged with the umrder of Patrick J. Condon, 1235 West Harrison street, whom they ran down with a heavy automobile truck, was found guilty by a jury in Judge Cooper's court and was given a term of fourteen years in the penitentiary. Cordes was found not guilty.

MIGRATING LEMMINGS.

Animals Lured to Death by the Mystic Call of the Sea.

A Scottish naturalist in Edinburgh has recently given to the world some interesting facts which go to show how animals as well as human beings respond to the lure of the sea and how they will travel sometimes for hundreds of miles to answer its call and then push on into its waters to their own destruction.

The most curious example of this tendency is found in the seaward migration of the small brown, molelike lemmings. These animals will at certain times leave the highlands of Scandinavia and march in vast hordes toward the lowlands, moving only by night and following the general trend of the valleys. They hold tenaciously to the general direction in which they set, but are diverted neither by streams nor by moderately sized lakes.

Eventually, after a march lasting from one to three years, the army, devastated, of course, by many foes, reaches the sea, but not for its own good, for, queerly enough, the end of the journey is not attained, and many of the little animals push on into the waters, following to their own destruction the unaccountable impulse to push forward.

Other creatures likewise are known to fall under the spell of the sea. It is rather commonly known how the European reindeer will spend the hard weather of winter on the highlands of Scandinavia and Russia and feed sparingly on snow covered moss and lichens and then in summer, in spite of the fact that food has become more plentiful inland, will forsake these haunts for the seacoast.—Chicago Tribune.

TURNED THE JOKE.

Romieu's Fun With the Watchmaker Was Spoiled In the Windup.

The French critic, musician and government official, Romieu, was fond of joking. One of his diversions—amusing, but not to be commended—was to go into some shop where he thought he was not known and perplex the shopmen by his questions and remarks.

One evening he had taken a good deal of wine when he went into a little watchmaker's shop and, assuming the accent and air of a countryman, said:

"Sir, what do you call those little machines hanging there?"

"Watches," replied the shopkeeper.

"What are they for?"

"To indicate the time."

"Really? I have heard of them. How much do they cost?"

"Here is one for 200 francs and one for 100 francs, and here are some for 50 and 25 francs."

"Are there printed directions about making them go?"

"No; they have to be wound up every day with a key."

"Will you show me how, sir?"

"This way. You see it is not difficult."

"And must one wind it in the evening or in the morning?"

"You must wind yours in the morning."

"Why in the morning?"

"Because in the evening you are usually drunk, M. Romieu, and might break it."

Working the Mines of the Rand.

That Africa, with its millions of idle negroes, should suffer from scarcity of labor seems to the outsider incredible, but it is a fact that the securing and distribution of labor is the most vital factor in the economic life of the continent south of the equator. It has been estimated that the Rand pays $300,000 a year to recruit the contingent from Portuguese East Africa alone, this sum covering only the expense of getting the "boys" from their homes and back again. A nonsalaried recruiter gets $5 for every boy he persuades to go to the mines. It is by supplying the Rand with 50,000 to 60,000 boys annually that the province of Mozambique draws directly and indirectly by far the larger part of its revenue.

Not In the Song.

All over the house went little Kathleen singing lustily, "There's a Friend For Little Children." Her benevolent old aunt, seeing at last, as she hoped, some signs of grace in one whom she had almost given up at the early age of six as hopeless, called Kathleen to her with great satisfaction.

"And who is the friend for little children, dear?" she asked.

"I don't know," replied Kathleen gayly. "It doesn't come out in the song."—Manchester Guardian.

Grand Rapids & Indiana train, No. 20, south bound, was saved from wreckage by a little girl who flagged it in the midst of a storm three miles south of Reed City Sunday night. A cattle guard had blown across the track. The storm, which was the worst in the history of the city, struck here at 7 o'clock, uprooting trees and unroofing buildings. Lightning struck several houses in the neighborhood.

Allegan has a poisoning mystery. Last May Mrs. John Surtis, 76, died. Many times during her life she made requests that after death a search for traces of poison in her stomach be made. Accordingly, the stomach was sent to State Bacteriologist M. L. Holm, but as the health officer did not have proper authority to order an examination and it was some time before Dr. Holm reported to Prosecutor G. W. Stone, that he found traces of poison in the stomach.

FIGURES OF SPEECH.

Just Suppose For a Moment That They All Turned to Facts.

No situation is more difficult to deal with than that in which a figure of speech becomes a fact. I mean that when we have been using a phrase truly, but in its general and metaphorical sense, we are rather embarrassed than otherwise if we find that it is true, even in its strict and literal sense. There does not seem to be anything more to say. Suppose you heard a family remark casually, "It's madness in papa to go to Norway!" And suppose the next instant papa sprang into the room through a smashed window, with straws in his hair and a carving knife and howled aloud: "Ubbubboo! I'm going to Norway!" The incident would be disconcerting. It would not be easy to pursue the subject.

Or suppose we said to some stately, silver haired woman who was annoyed, "I think it childish of you to take offense so easily." And suppose she sat down suddenly on the floor and began to scream for her doll and her skipping rope. We would be at a loss. Words suited to the situation would not easily suggest themselves.

Or if a wife said to her husband, apropos of a luxurious friend to whom he gave expensive dinners, "He's simply robbing you," her remarks would be cut short rather than further encouraged by the sight of the friend climbing out of the window with the silver teapot under his arm. The wife would have the extremely unpleasant sensation of having said the worst thing she could and having nothing more to say.

Cases, of course, could be multiplied indefinitely, as the case of one who, entering a lodging house, should say "Rats!" in disparagement of its praises and find himself instantly surrounded by those animals, or one who should remark, "Uncle Joseph has lost his head over this," and should find him decapitated in the garden.—Illustrated London News.

LINED WITH GOLD.

Alaska's Enormous Deposits Will Last a Thousand Years.

Like a tale out of the "Arabian Nights" is the opinion given recently by an expert on the future of Alaskan gold mining, only this expert bases his opinion on facts, whereas the oriental story teller specialized in fancy.

But the testimony given by Falcom Joslin is doubly interesting because it exceeds the imagination of the wildest fancy while being based on the facts in the case.

"In my judgment," says Mr. Joslin, "the placer mining industry in Alaska will last a thousand years, the area suitable for placer mining is so enormous. What we are working there now is only the gravels that will carry from $3 to $10 a yard. You cannot work gravels that carry less than that, but once we have transportation there and can work gravels such as they do in California, which carry 7 cents a yard, we have got so nearly an unlimited area of it that no man can foresee the end of that industry in Alaska.

"One great thing is that nearly the whole area of Alaska is gold bearing. There are placers and quartz. It has been said, and I believe the statistics and explorations of the geological survey show it, that you could go from the extreme southeast of Alaska at Ketchikan, where there are important mines, along this route by way of Hains clear out to Nome, a distance of 2,000 miles in a straight line, and that in every twenty mile section along that route you could develop gold mines. It is infinitely greater than any other area of gold country that has ever been found in the world."—Engineering and Mining Journal.

Nice For the Lady.

Quite regularly a certain London school teacher invited two miserable little girls to spend Saturday afternoon at her house. Knowing how overburdened with work the mother was and how much the children's moral education was neglected at home, a settlement worker ventured to congratulate the parent.

"What a great advantage for them!" she said. "How exceedingly kind of her!"

"No doubt she's glad of comp'ny," complacently returned the mother.—London Telegraph.

The Use of English.

Of the 80,000 English words available for conversation purposes only 400 are said to be in common use. If these were carefully selected there would be little cause for complaint, since the combinations they make possible should provide innumerable shades of variation. Careful word selection is something that should be encouraged in and out of the schools.—Christian Science Monitor.

Two months after the second marriage he ran away with Hattie Andrews, going to Canada. Last week he returned to Port Huron and was arrested.

The failure of a paving experiment, tried out two years ago, will cost Muskegon thousands of dollars. The experiment consisted of the filling in of worn out holes in the pavement with concrete. This chips so badly within a short time that all must be replaced with brick. As a result scores of men must be employed to tear out the concrete before the brick can be substituted.

Rattlesnakes.

Some persons believe that, in addition to ejecting venom through their fangs, rattlesnakes have the power to throw off poisonous dust. Some persons, it is claimed, are able even to smell a snake some distance away.

EMOTIONS OF ANGER.

Give Them a Little Play Rather Than Bottle Them Up Tightly.

There are a few universal habits in the human race which have strange primitive origins, and there are some which are universal because they have a physiological stimulus, and one of these latter is in the habit that a little child often has of stamping its feet when angry. Exactly the same thing occurs when a man, while he is angry, brings down his fist on the table. In both cases it is due to lack of nervous control.

The nervous system is a unit, and most of the emotions of anger come from a sudden thwarting of a calculated nervous plan. Thus if we are about to sit down on a chair and a mischievous urchin yanks the chair away just as we have let the muscles of the thighs relax the anger excited is out of all proportion to the actual bruises that have resulted. If a child wants a pot of jam and is denied he is immediately angry unless he has been taught to control himself. The desire for the jam, for example, has set in motion a nerve plan, and when this is suddenly stopped there is a flow of nervous energy which has to spend itself in some way. In the case of the child, he usually works this off by stamping his feet and crying. In the case of the man, he usually goes through exactly the same processes by thumping the table and swearing. In the case of a hysterical woman, she beats upon the floor with her heels and screams. It is all the same thing.

Strange as it may seem, moreover, the outflow of emotion is far better for an angry person than it is to bottle it up. Emotion is going to express itself in action somewhere, and if the muscles are kept still the brain cells will be exhausted instead. Emotional force has got to go somewhere. It can't just stop and disappear. Too great a suppression of the emotions leads to a gradual atrophy of them, and when the emotions begin to die out the person himself or herself is of comparatively little use to the world. It is for this reason that nothing should ever be done to "break" a child's temper, but only to guide it into right channels. You can teach a child not to lose control of his temper, but never, as you value the child's development, try to train him not to be angry.—New York American.

What the Patent Home Will Be.

The number of patents issued last year was greatly in excess of all other years. And yet nobody in all inventive America has patented a home. We must all live. The old home is now a back number. It is bound in time to be succeeded by the patent home. Hasten the day. The patent home will have all its beds made up automatically. It will cook its own meals, keep itself dusted, decorated and disinfected. It will heat the baby's milk at all hours of the night and will be servantless. All the pictures will be changed at regular intervals, and new furniture will automatically replace the old. Family prayers will be provided by phonograph, and births, weddings and funerals will be covered by pressing a button.—Life.

Transmitting Electricity.

When an electric current flows through a conductor it is not sent or pushed through, like a fluid in a pipe, but is rather handed on from particle to particle. In other words, it is a transfer of electrical energy which can be illustrated by setting up a row of rubber balls tangent to each other.

Now, if we strike these balls at one end the energy will be transferred from ball to ball and can be utilized at the other. Here we had no actual flow, and yet the energy was transferred from one end to the other.

The basic units which we use are the unit of the rate of flow, or ampere; the unit of electrical pressure, or volt, and the unit of resistance to flow, or the ohm.—Aera.

Too Soon to Answer.

The young man about town and the clever bachelor girl met on the street at 10 in the morning.

"Glad to see you out so early," cried the girl breezily. "Feeling well?"

"Pretty well," faltered the man.

"That's good. How did you like the lobster a la Newburg I made for you in the chafing dish last night?"

"I can't tell yet, dear lady. I'm just getting acquainted with it."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

No Argument.

The extremely well dressed young man, with but few claims to financial success, was putting forth his best efforts to capture the girl of his choice.

"You say yourself, Marion," he pleaded, "that your father is anxious to get you off his hands."

"That's just it, Claude," she replied tremulously. "That's why I'm afraid he won't listen to you."—Lippincott's.

A Harsh Critic.

"That," said the futurist, pointing proudly to the canvas which he had just finished, "is my attempt to interpret the infinite."

"What did the infinite ever do to you?" asked the innocent bystander.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Didn't Like the Time Limit.

Flint has a new postmaster, but the office does not go out of the family. Dr. Frank D. Baker Saturday took formal charge of the Flint postoffice, succeeding his brother, Fred P. The Great Work of Road Building

In almost every settled community between the Great Lakes and the Pacific the era of good roads is dawning. With the stupendous area of unimproved roads in the Northwest, the danger is rather that too much will be done in a short time than too little, that with the eagerness for quick results quality will often be sacrificed for mileage, that many expenditures will be ineffective through incompetence or graft, and that the economy of employing expert road engineers will be neglected by those who have the administration of the funds. It will take years to finish the task, many mistakes will be made, and much money wasted; but with the agricultural and business interests now thoroughly in earnest, good road associations, automobile clubs and civic and commercial bodies all striving for the same end, aided by advanced road legislation, the work will be closely scrutinized, and the old days of incompetent road control by boards of county commissioners will, in a great measure, no longer be possible.—From "Good Roads Activities in the Northwest," by Walter C. Tiffany, in the American Review of Reviews for August.

RAILROAD BUSINESS FOR MAY

During May the railways of the United States received for their services to the public an average of $8,230,000 a day; it cost to run their trains and for other expenses of operation $5,920,000 a day; their taxes were $341,500 a day; their operating income $1,972,322 a day for the 220,897 miles of line reporting, or at the rate of $8.93 for each mile of line for each day. Thus for every six dollars of their earnings which remained available for rentals, interest on bonds, appropriations for betterments, improvements and new construction, and for dividends, the railways had to pay more than one dollar in taxes.

All of these amounts are substantially greater than the similar returns for May, 1912. They are from the summary of the earnings and expenses compiled by the Bureau of Railway Economics from the monthly reports of the steam railways of the United States to the Interstate Commerce Commission. They include over 95 per cent of the mileage and earnings of all of the railways of the county.

WANTS MORE VESSEL ROOM

Saginaw Will Ask for a Wider Harbor.

SAGINAW — The common council committee has agreed on the harbor lines which the war department will be asked to confirm.

Beginnig at the head of the river the width will be increased from 430 to 500 feet extending down as far as the Mackinaw street bridge. The same width will be maintained to the Bristol bridge. Just below this point the river widens to 1,000 feet. Continuing to the business district 500 feet will be maintained. Below the Johnson street bridge and extending to the city limits, a 600-foot width is desired.

THE PERRY PEACE MONUMENT

A PERMANENT record of the centennial celebration of Perry's victory now in progress in Put-In-Bay on Lake Erie, will be a beautiful new peace monument. The column is second only in height to the Washington Monument at the national capital, its height from base to top being 335 feet. The column is also a memorial of war. It commemorates the one hundredth anniversary of the naval battle on Lake Erie, September 10, 1813, when the valiant young American commander, Oliver Hazard Perry captured the British fleet under Barclay; thus aiding in bringing to a close the warfare between Great Britain and this country in 1812. But more than this, the Perry Memorial is erected to commemorate the signing of the treaty of Ghent, which has kept peace ever since between Great Britain and the United States. The treaty of Ghent has preserved the neutrality of the Great Lakes for one hundred years. It is appropriate, too, that there should rise a peace memorial on Put-In-Bay Island, the site where the dead in the conflict whose centenary is being celebrated, were buried, British and American alike, with funeral rites celebrated by the representatives of both fleets. The chaste granite Doric column is capped by a cluster of one hundred incandescent lights, whose radiance is shed far over the waters. Within the base of this column is the beautiful stone crypt within whose walls the ashes of the honored dead will find their last resting-place on September 10, 1913, with appropriate services. On either side of the column are the museum and colonnade. The museum is a handsome classic stone building, containing a large exhibition hall for the arms, books, paintings, engravings and relics of the War of 1812. This colonnade, emblematic of the century of peace, encircles a statue of heroic size, fifteen feet in height, representing "Peace by Arbitration." The statue and pedestal are placed within the colonnade and reached by a flight of steps from the terrace. When it is completed and dedicated, this noble peace memorial will be conveyed to the United States Government with the excellent suggestion that the solid structure be put to a practical and humane use. The site is an admirable one, it is pointed out, for the location of a life-saving station, a meteorological bureau, and a central wireless telegraph station to link together all the life-savings stations on the Great Lakes. Erected to commemorate the heroic dead who gave their lives in battle, the Perry Memorial will have fulfilled its highest mission in standing as a beacon light of safety to storm tossed mariners, and as a permanent milestone in the great forward movement of everlasting, universal peace, sending out to earth and up to heaven an echo to the chorus:

Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men. (Luke 2:14)—Christian Herald.

McDOO TO FURNISH MILLIONS TO MOVE CROPS

Federal Policy a New One

The disbursing from $25,000,000.00 to $50,000,000.00 of Government funds to be deposited in National Banks in the south and west at once by secretary McAdoo to facilitate movement of crops is a new plan to be adopted by the department.

Federal state and municipal bonds and prime commercial paper will be accepted as security for the money on which the banks will pay 2 per cent interest.

The motive of Secretary McAdoo in in establishing the new policy is to anticipate the money stringency in late summer which invariably accompanies the marketing and movement of crops.

The outlook for the fall is an unusually large crop and the Secretary intends to take time by the fore-lock and prevent or minimize the usual tightness of money.

McADOO CRITICISES BANKS

Sees Concerted Action to Defeat Currency Bill

Washington, July 29.—Secretary McAdoo issued a statement last night flatly charging that the decline of government two per cent bonds to 95½—a new low record—was due "almost wholly to what appears to be a campaign waged with every indication of concerted action on the part of a number of influential New York City banks to cause apprehension and uneasiness about these bonds in order to help them in their efforts to defeat the currency bill."

Banks throughout the country own almost entirely $730,882,130 of the two precents. Their market value yesterday was approximately $30,000,000 less than when the banks bought them. Almost all the entire issue is used as security for national bank notes. At the present price, however, the discrepancy between the market value and the issues of notes against the bonds is covered by what is known as the five per cent redemption fund, deposited by the banks with the treasury to care for retirements of national bank notes.

CAKES, (Continued)

In last week's lesson, I gave full directions and and two simple recipes for cake baking. The great essentials in making cakes, are to use good materials, to measure carefully, and to use care in baking. A cake should look appetizing. A careless cook will seldom make a good cake or one that looks good. It is worth while to use a little extra care and attention in order to have a nice appearing cake.

Nevada Briggs

White Cake

½ cup butter
1 cup granulated sugar
½ cup milk or water
Whites of three eggs
2 cups sifted pastry flour
3 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder
1 teaspoonful vanilla extract.

To mix white cake, measure the flour and sift it at least three times with the baking powder. Next cream the butter and sugar together until creamy and white; then add the water or milk and the flour mixture a little at a time, alternately to this creamed mixture, stirring it all the time. After all moisture and flour are added and the batter is perfectly smooth and glossy, beat the whites of the eggs until they are very stiff, adding these to the batter last. Bake in two medium sized layer pans and put together with chocolate, pineapple or plain icing.

Simple Chocolate Filling

1½ cups of powdered or confectioner's sugar and enough milk or water to dissolve the sugar. Work it into a smooth paste by stirring, then add 2 tablespoonfuls of melted cooking chocolate and when smooth, spread upon the cake. To melt the chocolate break in lumps, place in a cup set in boiling water or over the steam of the tea kettle.

Uncooked Pineapple Icing

½ cup grated pineapple
1 egg white (unbeaten)
2 cups powdered or confectioner's sugar

Put egg white in bowl with the pineapple; take a rotary egg beater and beat the sugar in a very little at a time and continue beating until icing is stiff enough to spread. This icing is improved by long beating and adding sugar gradually, not much at a time. This recipe may be varied by using ½ cup of any kind of crushed fruit, such as grated sour apple, strawberries, peaches, bananas, orange juice, or lemon juice diluted one half with water.

Boiled Icing

½ cup boiling water
White of 1 egg
1 cup granulated sugar.

Stir sugar and boiling water until sugar is dissolved; put over fire and cook without stirring until the syrup will form a soft spongy ball when dropped in cold water, then pour into the white of egg slowly, beating constantly until stiff enough to spread. Flavor to suit and spread upon the cake; a little lemon juice added to the syrup makes the icing spongy. This makes enough for two layers. Instead of ½ cup water use ½ cup of any fruit juice to make different icings. Nuts, raisins or figs can be added if desired.

Eggless Icing

2 cups powdered or confectioner's sugar; juice of ½ lemon and water, cream or milk to soften sugar to consistency to spread. This cannot fail for if one should get it too soft, simply add a little more sugar. This can also be made with any kind of fruit juice to soften sugar instead of water, cream or milk.

Gold Cake

¼ cup butter
Yolks of 4 eggs
½ cup sugar
¼ cup milk or water
1 cup flour, less 2 tablespoonfuls
2 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder
Grated rind of orange

To mix Gold Cake, sift flour and baking powder together three times; cream butter and sugar, beat yolks of eggs, add these to creamed mixture, and lastly add the moisture and flour alternately, beating batter until smooth. Gold Cake can only be made successfully by beating yolks of eggs very, very creamy and light lemon colored, using a rotary beater. The rotary beater is the only beater that will do justice to the yolks of eggs. The beating kills all egg taste and improves the texture of the cake. Gold Cake can be baked in a small tube pan or in layers, using the same directions for heat of the oven as in the white cake above.

Chocolate Cake

½ cup butter
¼ teaspoonful salt
1 cup sugar
1½ cups pastry flour
Yolks of 2 eggs, beaten light
2½ level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder
Whites of 2 eggs, beated dry
2 squares ordinary cooking chocolate, melted
1 teaspoonful vanilla extract
½ cup milk or water

To mix: Sift together three times the flour and baking powder; cream butter and sugar, add beaten yolks of the eggs and add these to the creamed mixture, then the melted chocolate, and alternately the moisture and flour and the well-beaten whites of the eggs last. Bake in layers, or loaf.

Things to Remember

Always have the cake batter so it will drop easily from the spoon, adding more moisture if the amount called for by the recipe doesn't make it soft enough. Cake batter that is reasonably soft will become much lighter.

Always use a double-raise baking powder to guard against cake falling, and to be assured of a light fine-textured cake. K C Baking Powder is a modern double raise baking powder, always giving uniform results. It is a baking powder with two distinct raises, first when moisture is added, and again when heat is applied. This sustains the raising until the batter is cooked, when, of course, it cannot fall.

Yolks and whites of eggs should be beaten separately. Use a rotary beater for the yolks and a flat or spoon whip for the whites.

Never grease the sides of the cake tins. Let the batter stick to the sides and cut it loose with a knife when baked. This keeps the layers even. If the sides of the pan are greased, the cake will pull away, making the top of the layer narrower than the bottom, and making it impossible to stack the layers evenly.

Bear in mind that baked dough cannot rise. Always start baking with a low flame or moderate oven, and allow the cake to double in size before increasing the heat; then bake with a hot oven until the top is brown, and the center responds to the touch.

To cut a cake when still warm or quite fresh, dip the blade of the knife in hot or cold water and cut with the damp blade. This prevents the cake from sticking to the knife.

Dumplings

For Soups, Stews and Fricasseed Chicken

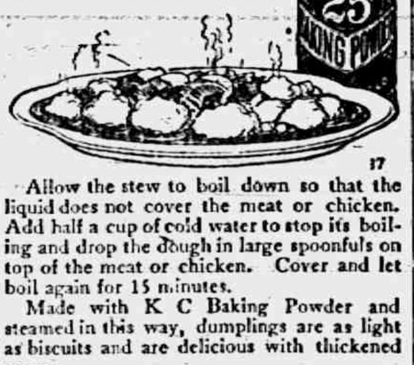
Left overs of roast lamb, veal or beef, the cheaper cuts of fresh meats, and fowls too old for roasting, make delicious and nourishing stews. K C Dumplings make them doubly attractive and the whole dish is most economical—an object to most families while meats are so high and must be made to go as far as possible.

K C Dumplings

By Mrs. Nevada Briggs, the well known baking expert.

2 cups flour; 3 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder; ½ teaspoonful salt; ¼ cup shortening; milk or cream.

Sift together three times, the flour, baking powder and salt; into this work the shortening and use cream or milk to make a dough less stiff than for biscuits.



Allow the stew to boil down so that the liquid does not cover the meat or chicken. Add half a cup of cold water to stop its boiling and drop the dough in large spoonfuls on top of the meat or chicken. Cover and let boil again for 15 minutes.

Made with K C Baking Powder and steamed in this way, dumplings are as light as biscuits and are delicious with thickened gravy.

This recipe is adapted from one for Chicken Pot Pie in "The Cook's Book" by Janet McKenzie Hill, editor of the Boston Cooking School Magazine. The book contains 90 excellent recipes for things that are good to eat and that help reduce the cost of living.

Henry Callens, of New Baltimore, was Saturday afternoon awarded $100 damages against James Fulfer, a neighbor, by Justice Marcero, of Chesterfield township. Callens asked damages in the sum of $300 for the permanent injury of a horse which had strayed onto Fuller's premises. Fuller was charged with having tied a tin pail to the horse's tail and started it on a run in which it was completely exhausted.

After 20 hours' deliberation, the jury in the libel suit of former Congressman Francis H. Dodds against Editor Bert M. Gould, of Mt. Pleasant, brought in a verdict of 6 cents damages. Both sides expressed themselves satisfied and an appeal is unlikely. There is still pending a suit begun by Mr. Dodds against Congressman Lindquist, of Greenville, for $50,000, based on the same statements made during the campaign last year.

Shooting Accident

Marie Kelly the Victim of an Air Gun, Bullet Lodged in Corner of left Eye next to Nose

SECOND CASE OF SHOOTING IN BROWNVILLE BY CHILDREN IN SHORT TIME

As little Marie Kelly living in Brownville, was on her way to town Thursday at 5 o'clock p. m., a young lad named Monroe Cummins pointed an air gun at her and threatened to shoot her, she begged him not to do it but he persisted, and the ball entered the corner of the left eye next the nose. Mrs Karcher near whose home the shooting occurred carried her into her home Her grandmother, Mrs. Mingus carried her to her own home and Dr. Briegel was called and dressed the wound, probing for the bullet but did not locate it, the little girl being in to nervous a condition to do more at the time. It is hoped that the eye will not by injured permanently.

It would seem that something should be done with the youth of the present day to prevent their reckless shooting, this one might have cost the life of the child, and may cost the sight of her eye.

AUSTIN, TEX. — Something of a stir was caused in Democratic circles by the statement of close friends of former Senator J. W. Bailey that he has decided to make his race for governor next year and that formal announcement of this candidacy will probably be made by him in a public address that he will deliver at Pilot Point on August sixth.

DULUTH, MINN. — Two men were killed and four injured in a head-on collision near Colby, Minn., between a southbound train loaded with iron ore and a north-bound train of empty ore cars on the Duluth and Iron Range railroad. The dead are Gust Carlson and Albert Happlebach, firemen.

DON'T EXPERIMENT

You Will Make No Mistake if You Follow This Tecumseh Citizens Advice.

Never neglect your kidneys.

If you have pain in the back, urinary disorders, dizziness and nervousness, its time to act and no time to experiment. These are frequently symptoms of kidney trouble, and a remedy which is recommended for the kidneys should be taken in time.

Doan's Kidney Pills is a good remedy to use. No need to experiment. It has acted effectively in many cases in Tecumseh. Follow the advice of a Tecumseh citizen.

E. C. Brisbine, farmer, N. Democrat St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I began to suffer from kidney complaint twenty years ago and the medicine I took brought me only temporary relief. Often my back ached intensely and the secretions from my kidneys were irregular in passage and highly colored. Doan's Kidney Pills went to the seat of my trouble and did me so much good that I am seldom without a supply on hand." (Statement given December 5, 1918.)

A WILLING CONFIRMATION

When Mr. Brisbine was interviewed at a later date, he said: "You may continue to use my name as a reference for the merits of Doan's Kidney Pills. Whenever I feel in need of a kidney medicine, I take this preparation and effectively."

Riches.

He is rich or poor according to what he is, not according to what he has.—H. W. Beecher.

Sometimes the symptoms of kidney and bladder trouble are so plain no one can mistake them. Backache, weak and lame back with soreness over the kidneys, sharp pains, rheumatism, dull headache, and disturbed sleep, are all indications of a trouble that Foley Kidney Pills will relieve quickly and permanently. Try them. For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

Wisdom.

A wise wife soon learns to manage her husband, while a wise husband never tries to manage his wife.

Mothers! Have Your Children Worms?

Are they feverish, restless, nervous, irritable, dizzy or constipated? Do they continually pick their nose or grind their teeth? Have they cramping pains, irregular and ravenous appetite? These are all signs of worms. Worms not only cause your child suffering, but stunt its mind and growth. Give "Kickapoo Worm Killer" at once. It kills and removes the worms improves your child's appetite, regulates stomach, liver and bowels. The symptoms disappear and your child is made happy and healthy, as nature intended. All druggists or by mail 25c.

If the strike in the copper country does not delay him, Governor Ferris will soon name a commission to investigate the wages paid to the women workers of this state, in compliance with a resolution passed at the last session of the legislature. Governor Ferris asked Attorney General Fellows whether the resolution was mandatory, and whether it was absolutely necessary that he name the commission. Fellows declared that there was nothing for the governor to do but follow out the provisions of the resolution. The chief executive believes that this work can better be accomplished through the state labor commission. The special commission that he will appoint must serve without compensation and it is his contention that the paid and trained workers of the labor department are better able to perform this work.

EGGS FRIED ON ICE.

By the Use of a Peculiar but Simple Principle of Electricity.

Frying eggs on ice is entirely feasible, as was demonstrated at a recent electrical exhibition given by the University of Illinois. The eggs were placed in an ordinary frying pan, and the frying pan was placed on a pile of cracked ice on a kitchen table. Eggs were fried nicely, though it took longer than when a stove is used. No wires were in sight. The frying pan had no electrical connections and could be taken up and replaced at will.

Under the table was the secret, an electromagnet. Even with the secret divulged, the trick was wonderful enough, for between the frying pan and the magnet was a pile of ice and the board table top, neither of which was affected excepting by the heat sent down from the frying pan.

A peculiar but simple principle of electricity was used. An electromagnet, as is generally known, is a horseshoe shaped bar of iron, with coils of wire wound round each arm of the horseshoe.

When a current of electricity is sent through the coils of wire the horseshoe becomes a magnet and will attract and firmly grip any bit of iron placed near the ends of the arms or poles. This applies to a direct current of electricity. If, however, an alternating current of electricity is sent through the coils any iron near the magnet poles is heated by what are called "eddy currents."

In the egg frying trick the magnet was placed under the table, and an alternating current was sent through the coils.—Saturday Evening Post.

Advice to a Husband.

Don't kick because you have to button your wife's waist. Be glad your wife has a waist and doubly glad you have a wife to button a waist for. Some men's wives have no waists to button. Some men's wives' waists have no buttons on to button. Some men's wives' waists which have buttons on to button don't care a button whether they are buttoned or not. Some men don't have any wives with buttons on to button.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Don't Worry.

Doctor—Now, don't worry, whatever you do. A man with heart disease can't afford to worry. Avoid all company of any kind, drink nothing whatsoever and on no account touch meat and vegetables. By the bye, I won't be able to call till Wednesday, as I have to attend the funerals of three patients.—Exchange.

Tail Wagging Muscles.

The wearing of tails is no longer considered fashionable, but that we did once have tails and are prepared to grow them again should the fashion change is shown by remains in our pelvis of tail wagging muscles, now rudimentary and degenerate from lack of use. Wiedersheim calls attention to the remains of arteries and veins which formerly nourished the tail. Gould and Pyle's "Anomalies and Curiosities of Medicine" gives a picture of a child born with a tail. These modern tails, however, are too short for any use, unless it is to make the father stop drinking.—New York Medical Record.

The right hand doubtless owes something of its prominence to the Bible. The Hebrews singled it out for special honor, and the Scriptures contain quite a hundred references in which "the right hand" is made the type and symbol of everything noble, praiseworthy and desirable. It is worth noting, however, that the tribe of Benjamin once boasted 700 left handed slingers who "could sling stones to a hair's breadth and not miss" and that among the "mighty men and helpers" of King David were many who "could use both the right hand and the left in hurling stones and shooting arrows with the bow."—London Standard.

Plain and Painful Talk.

During a senatorial investigation one time Senator Clapp experienced great difficulty in getting some information from a nervous witness.

"Now," said the senator somewhat sharply, "out with it, my man; out with it!"

"If the committee will excuse me," said the lawyer representing the witness, "I do not like the term 'Out with it!' This is not the office of a dentist."—Popular Magazine.

Merely a Matter of Spelling.

"Yes," said the very severe maiden lady, "the word 'mule' is only 'male' spelled wrongly."

"I suppose so," responded the crusty bachelor, "but according to the Latin dictionary a woman is 'muller.'"—Ladies' Home Journal.

Human Incredulity.

Tell a man that there are 270,169,825,481 stars and he will believe you. But if a sign says "fresh paint" he will have to make a personal investigation.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Modest.

"So you want to become my son-in-law, eh?"

"Y-yes, sir—that is, if you can afford it."—Boston Transcript.

Wonderful Cures Reported in Germany.

The use of simple herbs as remedies instead of the more concentrated and usually more dangerous inorganic substances, has been revived very widely of late. In Germany a new school of physicians has arisen which throws out almost a whole of the pharmacopeia and relies on an adaptation of the method of wild animals in curing themselves. . . . N. Y. World.

It was Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute of Buffalo, N. Y., who first advocated the extended use of some of our native roots, such as: Golden seal and Oregon grape root, mandrake and queen's root, black cherrybark. These are the chief ingredients in Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which has been so well and favorably known for nearly half a century. A harmless cleanser and stomach tonic that nature has provided.

J. D. MATHESON, Esq.

J. DONALD MATHESON of Ossining, N. Y. says: "I suffered for over five years with what the doctors told me was dilated condition of the stomach, associated with a catarrhal condition of same, and nervous heart. I had tried enough nux, bismuth, gentian, rhubarb, etc., to float a ship and naturally thought there was no cure for me, but after reading what eminent doctors said of the curative qualities of the ingredients of 'Golden Medical Discovery' I gave it a fair trial. Took the 'Discovery' and also the 'Pleasant Pellets,' and can truthfully say I am feeling better now than I have in years. I cheerfully give permission to print this testimonial, and if any 'doubting Thomas' writes me I will 'put him wise' to the best all-around medicine in the country to-day."

STUDY YOUR NOSE

It Is a Most Wonderful Organ and a Really Fine Furnace.

ACTS AS A PERFECT FILTER.

This Facial Ornament Strains, Heats and Moistens All Air Drawn Through It Into the Lungs—Its Delicate Nerves and Microbe Catching Mucus.

Ordinarily we regard our own or another person's nose from the standpoint of personal beauty. If the organ is a becoming one it wins our admiration, and unless occasion arises we give it no further thought. A delicious or a repugnant odor reminds us at times that we possess a sense of smell, and a cold in the head is apt to make us wish that there was no such thing as a nose.

Beyond these points, however, we really penetrate, and as a rule we fail to fully realize what an important part of the human anatomy is this most prominent feature of the face.

No stove or furnace that ever was made by man can equal in efficiency the human nose, for the nose, in the space of three inches and in two seconds of time, can raise the temperature of the air it draws in nearly fifty degrees and at the same time saturate it with moisture and thoroughly purify it.

The nose is really one of the most extraordinary organs of the body. Its nerves are more sensitive than those of fingers or ears or eyes, for they can perceive distinctly an almost incredibly minute amount of a gas so subtle that its presence can be detected in no other way. It is also a perfect filter and thus the most important guardian of the body against disease.

All air that is breathed into the lungs should be at a temperature of nearly 90 degrees F. It should also be moist, even wet. Cold, dry air is fine for the outside of the body, but has no place in its interior. In heating the air the nose works on the principle of a steam coil. It is not merely two tubes leading up into the head and so down to the throat, but from the bones on either side three twisted bones curl out into the passage, one above the other, each coated with elastic cushions of blood vessels and tiny glands. These form coils with a great, hot, damp surface, over which the air spreads as it is drawn up. Thus is the air warmed for its entrance to the lungs.

A furnace maker told the present writer that any man who could invent an efficient apparatus for mixing moisture with air in its passage through a hot air furnace could make a fortune, as every device now in use is only a makeshift and of very little real value. The Almighty Maker of the human—and the animal—nose solved the problem. The entire surface of the inside of the nose is composed of a membrane that pours forth a fluid called mucus. This is composed largely of salt water, which is taken up by the passing air until this is saturated before it reaches the throat.

This mucus is also a microbe catcher and a dust catcher. Almost all the dirt and germs of disease that enter with the air through the nostrils are trapped by the mucus. The living enemies are killed, for the mucus is antiseptic and germicidal. Thus the air is heated, moistened and purified before it reaches the lungs.

Air breathed in through the mouth is not warmed, moistened or purified except to a very slight extent. Consequently it reaches the lungs cold, dry and laden with dust and disease. Bronchitis, tonsilitis, diphtheria and consumption are the result.

The mucous membrane of the nose is subject to diseases such as catarrh, "cold in the head" and hay fever. Adenoids grow in the back of the nose and stop up its tubes. A simple and easy operation will remove the latter, while the former if taken when they first show themselves can be cured without difficulty. If neglected they may become incurable. Thus not only do they prevent the necessary warming, moistening and filtering of the air, but they spread and cause many diseases of the throat and lungs and are the commonest cause of serious and intensely painful trouble with the ears.—New York World.

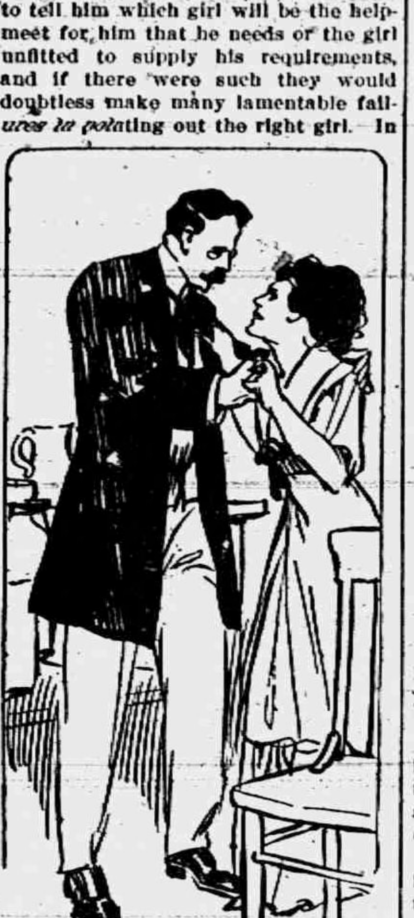
The Tossing of Fate

Now We Go Up and Now We Go Down

By MILLARD MALTBIE

When Fred Hartley was graduated from the scientific department of his college at the head of his class, though he did not know it, he was at the apex of that eminence which is measured by the plaudits of one's fellows. Every one predicted that he would have a brilliant career, though no one seemed to have any well defined idea as to how it was to be brought about. He had astonished his classmates and instructors by his mechanical ingenuity, and had invented several contrivances which, though of no especial value, indicated his ability in that direction.

The next most important feature to a man's career is the wife he gets. At the mating age there are no instructors to tell him which girl will be the helpmeet for him that he needs or the girl unfitted to supply his requirements, and if there were such they would doubtless make many lamentable failures in pointing out the right girl. In this most important matter Hartley made a mistake, but no greater mistake than the girl who married him.



NOT A WORD DID SHE UTTER, BUT SANK INTO HIS ARMS.

Anna Blanchard was as prominent among girls as Fred Hartley was among men. She was a co-ed with Hartley and stood well in her classes. She was one to look up rather than down. Her girl friends remarked that she would take a prominent place among women. But a woman is likely to be more dependent on her husband for her opportunities than the husband is on the wife for that steadfast backing which he is at times sure to need. When, therefore, the attachment between Anna and Fred was noticed all said: "That's just the kind of man Anna needs for a husband. She is fitted to be the wife of a brilliant man."

It was a love match anyway. Every one said when the couple were married that whatever happened they would be devoted to each other. But who can predict when a class of young men or young women go forth from the alma mater on to the stage of actual life to act the parts for which they have been rehearsing which shall become "stars" and which shall continue to the end as "villagers," to clap their hands when the hero and heroine enter or exit?

Hartley on leaving college accepted a position with a large manufacturing company, where his scientific knowledge was likely to be useful. He married his fiancee soon after this, and all was going well with the pair when the establishment by which Fred was employed failed. The failure came while Fred was at work on a machine needed in the business which would work wonders if successful. So the young inventor determined to keep on with his work independently.

Ten years passed, and the Hartleys found themselves in a position exactly the reverse from what had been expected. Instead of taking a high stand they had taken a low one.

Meanwhile his wife was yearning for that sphere for which nature had intended her. When she was married every one had envied her her future. Now the few who had kept in touch with her pitied her. "It's too bad," they said, "that Anna should be tied to so impracticable a man. She should have married one of prominence—one who could give her a sphere to show what there is in her."

No one realized this more than her husband. One day he went away, leaving a note for her in which he said he would no longer stand in the way of her taking the position in the world to which she was entitled. "Apply for a divorce on account of desertion," he said, "and I will not oppose it. If you prefer to act independently of me without breaking the marriage tie, do so. I will never trouble you."

Which of these two alternatives this wife had in mind when she went forth to take her affairs into her own hands she did not say, but she sent a note to her husband saying that she agreed with him that the time had come when they had better act independently of each other, for a time at least. If she found it possible to acquire an income she would write him and they could come together again. This did not interest him, for he was too much of a man to accept the earnings of a woman.

How Mrs. Hartley managed it her husband did not know, but he soon heard of her as a prominent woman. She not only became notable in women's associations of various kinds, but took a stand socially that other women could not achieve without being backed by a fortune. In a few years the name of Mrs. Hartley was one of the best known of any woman in the city where she lived, and her fame extended to other localities.

But fortune—pecuniary fortune—did not come. Yet even this was easy of achievement if she chose to put off one husband and take another. This she found hard to do. She wrote Hartley, to know if he was in condition to support her. If so she would return to him. If not she would apply for a divorce to marry one of several rich men who wanted her. Hartley wrote back that he was still in the position of one who was about to make a large fortune. This decided her. She applied for a divorce, secured it and married a wealthy banker, becoming Mrs. Eldridge.

For ten years Mrs. Eldridge led the social world of her city and was at the head of numerous women's associations. No woman's enterprise was launched without her approval; no new family was admitted to the chief social circle without her consent. She was the most envied woman in her sphere, though no one wished to depose her, for there was no one who could hope to take her place.

But her contract with the world was like Faust's agreement with Mephistopheles. At the end came the infernal pit. One morning the social and business world was shocked at the announcement that the great banking house of Eldridge & Co. had failed. The doors of the office were closed, and there was tanbark before the palatial residence of the head of the firm. He was an old man, and his physique was crushed under the ruin of his fortunes.

During the decade of Mrs. Eldridge's supremacy Fate, who is never content to let affairs alone, but must needs be tossing them up just for the fun of seeing them come down again, having left Hartley on the ground for twenty years, instead of catching the Eldridge ball on its descent for another toss, let it roll away in the dirt and, picking up Hartley, threw him so far up in the air that he must have got entirely away from gravity, for he never came down again as long as he lived.

Hartley, after years of experimenting, evolved a process in metallurgy that halved the cost of manufacture. Experience had taught him how to reap the benefit of an invention, and he forced a large manufacturing concern to pay him half the saving for a term of years. One year's royalty made him rich, and every year after that his fortune increased by arithmetical progression.

Mrs. Eldridge retired from the limelight more rapidly than she had entered it. After the failure of the banking house she found herself with an invalid husband and no income. She had no talent for money making and could not compete in any of the fields open to her sex with younger women. With her husband she sank into oblivion. How they managed to live no one knew, and of all those who had angled for an approving smile from the wife during the period of her glory not one cared.

One day Hartley, sitting in the rear seat of his $10,000 auto car, coming at a crossing upon a hearse followed by two or three carriages, directed his chauffeur to stop till the funeral had passed. In the chief mourner's carriage he saw a face so pale, so thin, so sad, that at first he did not recognize it, nor could he realize that it was the same face that had looked up lovingly at him on his wedding day nearly thirty years before.

Her eyes met his and saw in them the same affection, to which was added a world of sympathy that she had seen in them on that memorable day.

There was no other evidence of recognition between them. In a moment the little cortege had passed. Hartley's car crossed the street and sped away, not a person of those who waited to pass on recognizing the sad culmination of ambition they had witnessed.

That same evening when the widow was lighting the lamps in her tumbledown cottage there came a knock at the door. She opened it, and there stood the husband of her youth. Not a word did she utter, but sank into his arms.

Later, when having dismissed the past they were looking to the future, the husband said:

"I dreaded, sweetheart, when we were married lest I should fail to do all for you that was expected of me. I knew the sphere for which you were fitted and felt that your not being able to enter it would be a crying injustice. Thank heaven, I am now able to do far more for you than the wildest hopes might have suggested. You are still young enough"—

"For heaven's sake, don't!"

"Do you mean that you are tired of leadership?"

"I hate leadership. I hate the world, and I regret that you are rich and I am deprived of an opportunity to atone for my past error."

NEW YORK. — The proposed deal between Managers Frank Chance and Birmingham for an exchange of players remains at a standstill. The New York and Cleveland leaders did not come together so that anybody could see them. At the hotel Hargrave, where the Naps are staying, it was said that Birmingham had made his final proposition—Liebold and Kahler for Cree and McConnell. It is believed that if Birmingham will substitute Graney for Leibold, Chance will close the deal.

BOSTON, MASS.—In Boston, where the White Sox lost two games to the Red Sox last week it is openly stated that Larry Chappell, for whom Comiskey paid the equivalent of $18,500 to the Milwaukee club, is greatly overrated. Chappell has been benched by Callahan for various reasons and Ping Bodie has supplanted him in center field. It is said that Chappell is not only weak at the bat, but is green and slow on the bases.

LONDON, ENG. — Arthur Newton, the London solicitor who defended Dr. Crippen, the American dentist who was hanged for the murder of his wife, was sentenced to three years' imprisonment on charges of defrauding Dr. Hans Torsch of Vienna.

WHITMAN TO ACCEPT

Believed He Will Become Republican Candidate for Re-Election.

New York, Aug. 4.—District attorney Whitman is expected to accept the Republican nomination for re-election to the position he now holds. That was the firm conviction of many of his closest friends who have undertaken in the past to speak for him and who feel that they can guage him fairly accurately.

When Mr. Whitman was questioned at Brettonwoods, N. H., he declined to tell what his intentions were. He said that he could not say at the present time whether he would accept the nomination of the Republicans for mayor as his name has been raised only as a possibility.

LAW BREAKING PUT TO GOV. RALSTON

Local Officers of Indiana Refuse to Do Their Duty.

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 4.—With appeals coming to him almost daily to compel mayors, sheriffs and prosecutors to do their sworn duty, Governor Ralston is beginning to wonder if he will be called upon to take charge of all Indiana cities and enforce the laws, notwithstanding his belief that such situations should be dealt with locally.

Appeals to him to use the "big stick" on the prosecutor and sheriff of Vigo county have been made twice within the last ten days, and he was told that the law is being disregarded in Clinton, a mining town near Terre Haute, and that even in Indianapolis it would be possible to find a poker game and a saloon doing a back-door business after hours and on Sundays.

The mayor of Clinton is held responsible by citizens for the wide-open conditions said to be existing there. The governor's informants told him that there is an utter disregard for law in the mining town and that the mayor is doing nothing to improve conditions. There is said to be a laxiety of law enforcement there that the governor is said to be considerably exercised, and it would not be surprising, if he took radical steps to compel the mayor to do his duty, because he has been told that citizens, before appealing to him, did all they could to persuade the authorities to act.

THREE SUFFER INJURIES

Automobile Turns Turtle on Narrow Country Pike.

Elgin, Ill., Aug. 4.—Pinned beneath his automobile which turned turtle on a narrow country pike near Huntley, Ill., twelve miles north of here, L. Judd Morgan, twenty-two years old, owner of a garage at Hampshire, Ill., incurred a fractured spine and is believed to be fatally injured.

His nineteen year-old wife has a badly wrenched leg, and Bernice Nicholson, who is thirteen years old, has a dislocated shoulder. All three are at St. Joseph's hospital, Elgin.

HOP FIELD WORKERS START FATAL RIOT

District Attorney and Two Deputy Sheriffs Slain.

Sacramento, Cal., Aug. 4.—District Attorney E. T. Manwell and two deputy sheriffs were killed and six were shot, including two women, in a riot in Wheatland hop fields. The militia has been called from here to restore order.

The hop pickers, who are recruited from the rough element, were holding a picnic in a big hop field near Woodland when the manager tried to quiet them.

They were ugly from drink and a fight began which ended in the shooting, when the deputy sheriffs and the district attorney interfered.

Members of Company E of the national guard will leave for the scene of the trouble.

MOTOR RIDER KILLED IN RACE

Smashes Into Fence and Dies in an Ambulance.

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 4.—Unconscious that Johnny Carroll of Fort Wayne, Ind., one of his racing competitors, lay dead in the City hospital as the result of an accident on the twentieth lap of the race, Leslie Allen crossed the tape winner of the 100-mile motorcycle race at the fair grounds, having completed the distance in the fast time of 98:35.

Carroll met death on the twentieth lap of the race before the horrified eyes of his wife, sister and father. He had just passed the grand stand at a speed in excess of sixty-five miles an hour, and smashed into the fence on the first curve while attempting to take the turn too closely. Carroll was thrown high into the air and fell in the middle of the track.

He died a short time later in the ambulance on the way to the hospital.

GERARD PLANS UPKEEP MOVE

To Tax Europe Loving Americans to Maintain Embassy.

ENVOY TO GERMANY PEEVED

United States Provides for Its Ambassadors No Better Than Third-Class Power—Obliged to Dig Into Own Pocket—Cost One $128,000 in Less Than One Year.

Berlin, Aug. 4.—Justice James W. Gerard, the new ambassador to Germany, is so disappointed at the state of the American diplomatic service, due he says to the entirely inadequate salary paid to the envoys, that he intends to have a bill introduced in congress providing that Americans residing abroad should be forced to contribute to the upkeep of the embassies and legation by paying a fee of $10 for registration after they have lived a year in a foreign country.

American Disgusted.

After looking over the field and failing to find a suitable house for the embassy, realizing that he would have to dip into his own pockets, dive into them as he expressed it, to establish an embassy on the semblance of those of a third-rate power, Justice Gerard said he was discouraged and disappointed and questioned his own wisdom in having accepted the post.

"Yes," he said, "I shall even wear the diplomatic uniform. It's a rule of the court and I'm not going to commence by offending the prejudices of the people I am sent to, although my leg are not built for knee breeches and silk stockings. It is all very well to talk about democracy at home, but we can't impose our views upon people who do not understand them. To try to do so simply belittles our country and makes ourselves ridiculous.

Can't Be Fool and Useful.

"An ambassador is supposed to get things for his country and to do things for his people and promote friendly relations. He can't do this if he is looked on as a fool or if the United States maintains a representative on the scale of a third-rate power."

In reply to a question as to what he thought an ambassador representing the United States as it should be represented would be obliged to spend, Justice Gerard said:

"Well one American ambassador told me he spent $128,000 in less than the year he has been at his post."

The new envoy said the embassy here is too small and most of it is takn up by offices. He couldn't invite his mother-in-law and said he thought President Wilson must have had the size of the embassy in mind when he selected a childless ambassador, who, nevertheless, might want to adopt a child.

MILITANTS DISTURB SERVICE

Twenty of Them Interrupt Litany at St. Paul's Cathedral.

London, Aug. 4.—The suffragettes have adopted a new plan to bring their demands before the public. The militants are indulging in organized interruption of the morning services at St. Paul's cathedral. When the officiating clergyman reciting the litany, reached the passage "Show thy pity to all prisoners and captives," about twenty suffragettes seated below the pulpit, rose and sang:

"Save Emmeline Pankhurst; Spare her, spare her, give her light and set her free.

"Save her, save her, hear us while we pray to thee."

The congregation remained quiet. Vergers approached the women and urged them to withdraw. The militants protested but went out quietly.

PROTEST NAMING OF VOPICA

Winona Assembly Will Fight Brewer as Envoy.

Winona Lake, Ind., Aug. 4.—Three thousand members of the Winona assembly adopted unanimously by a rising vote a resolution of protest against the proposed appointment by President Wilson of Charles J. Vopicka, the Chicago brewer, as minister to the Balkan states.

Dr. S. C. Dickey, secretary and general manager of the assembly, was instructed to send letters to President Wilson and Secretary Bryan. The meeting also urged a campaign of personal letters to these officials in protest against the appointment. In view of the fact that Secretary of State Bryan is president of the board of directors of the reorganized Winona assembly the action is particularly notable.

Bees Cause Fatal Runaway.

Mason City, Ia., Aug. 4.—Mrs. S. S. Strand, thirty years old, wife of a farmer living near Thompson, was thrown from a hay wagon and instantly killed when a swarm of bees attacked the horses and caused them to plunge. A wheel of the wagon passed over the woman's head, crushing it.

NEW STORY OF CREATION TOLD

Tablet Deciphered Puts Age at Over 500,000 Years.

STORY OF GENESIS SUPPORTED

Goddess with Black Hair Caused the Deluge—Gods Became Angry at World—Interesting Deciphering at Pennsylvania University of Tablet from Babylon—Flood Seven Days.

Philadelphia, Aug. 4.—A newly discovered tablet brought to the museum of the University of Pennsylvania from Babylonia gives what is believed to be the first story of the creation as well as one of the most wonderful accounts of civilization in 2500 B. C.

According to this story, which was written centuries before the Christian era, the world was created by a Goddess whose hair was black. When the world became so wicked that it had to be destroyed, the Gods became angry at the Goddess and put an end to everything with a flood. The only beings saved were a man and his family, with animals which he put in an arc.

Partly Corroborates Genesis.

The tablet also says that woman in those days had equal authority with man.

It contains all the essentials of the story of the creation and the flood as told in Genesis. If the missing fragments are found either at the museum or in Constantinople, where many of the tablets from Nappur were deposited, the complete story will be revealed. The university is trying to find them.

The creation of man is related, then things for his life and pleasure and finally, a paradise, from which he is not ejected. There is a flood lasting only seven days instead of forty, or more than a year, in the two accounts in Genesis, and man is mentioned who was rewarded after the escape from total destruction.

If, as it is supposed, the tablet is of about the time of Abraham, it gives an idea of how the Jews got the first idea of the creation and the flood.

Creation Over 500,000 Years.

Other tablets have indicated that there were about 460,000 years from the creation to the flood. A new chronology found in the latest tablet gives the period from the flood to a date about 230 years before Hamurabi as 32,223 years, some months (exact number undecipherable) and eighteen days. This, it will be noted, gives a much longer period from the creation of man to the present than any other account on record. Bishop Ussher's date of 4,004 years from the creation to the birth of Christ was based on the genealogies found in the bible.

MOSQUITO IS CALLED A KING

Leads All Creation in Carrying Disease—Knat Second.

Washington, Aug. 4.—Mosquitoes were branded the "king disease carriers" of the insect world by Dr. Nelson Du Val Breicht, formerly of the Public Health service. Besides their implement of torture, these insects carry about with them germs of leprosy, yellow fever, malaria, breakbone fever, typhoid and five other brands of malady.

Dr. Breicht awarded the knat second honors as a disease carrier.

Man Drinks Disinfectant.

Noblesville, Ind., Aug. 4.—Thomas West, a resident of Atlanta, made an unsuccessful attempt at suicide here by drinking a disinfectant.

SOCIALISTS ARE LOSING GROUND

Report of German Party Says Growth Is Stagnant.

DISINTEGRATION SEEMS NEAR Small Increase in Membership Confined Mostly to Women—Circulation of Socialist Papers Also Shows Falling Off—Wet Blanket Thrown on General Strike.

Berlin, Aug. 4.—"We report the smallest increase in membership in the history of our party. It is so small that it verges on stagnation," the official annual report of the executive committee of the Social Democratic party published this week says.

It confirms reports current for some time that the Socialist movement reached the crest of the wave a year ago when 110 Socialists were elected to the reichstag and indicates that the party is threatened with disintegration.

Internecine Warfare Fatal.

The falling off is attributed to internecine warfare and dissatisfaction at the lack of practical results.

According to the report the increase in membership was only 12,748, of which 10,744 were women.

A falling off is shown in the number of subscribers to Socialist papers, which on March 31 last were 1,465,212, compared with 1,478,042 on June 30, 1912. The Vorwaerts, the main party organ, with a circulation of 165,000, lost 8,000 subscribers.

Differences in the party are shown by the fact that ninety-six members have been ejected and motions to eject 287 were considered.

Convention to Hear Report.

The report will be submitted to the convention of the party to be held soon at Jena.

Referring to the agitation for a general political strike the report throws a wet blanket on the plan, with the remark that "until a feasible way is shown by which it will actually lead us to the goal it is necessary to continue working as in the past."

TWENTY-TWO KNIGHT TRAINS

Nineteen Illinois Commanderies To Go To Denver.

Chicago, Aug. 4. — Twenty-two special trains will carry 2,000 Knights Templar and families, representing nineteen Illinois commanderies, to Denver on next Saturday and Sunday for the thirty-second conclave of the order. Of this total Chicago will send 1,000. Prior to their departure on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday Chicago commanderies will be hosts to Templars from the east and elaborate entertainment has been prepared for their brief visits.

Among the Illinois commanderies that will send a representative to Denver are: Apolo, No. 1; Englewood, No. 59; Chicago, No. 19; St. Bernard, No. 35; Mount Joie, No. 53; Chevalier Bayard, No. 52; Salome, No. 54 St. Elmo, No. 65; Illinois, No. 72; Woodlawn, No. 78; Columbia, No. 63; Joliet, No. 4; Hospitaller; No. 31; De Molay, No. 24; Elwood, No. 6; Hugh de Paynes, No. 29; Cairo, No. 13; Morris, No. 5; Peoria, No. 3; and Beaumanoir, No. 9.

Five Illinois commanderies have been entered in the competitive drills —St. Bernard, No. 35; Chicago, No. 19; Mount Joie, No. 53; Columbia, No. 63; and Englewood, No. 59. St. Bernard is expected to be a strong contender by reason of its many victories at previous conclaves.

DIES AFTER DENTAL VISIT

Coroner Inquires Into Death of Druggist at Springfield, Ill.

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 4.—Searching inquiry is being made by Coroner Rhodes to determine the cause of the mysterious death of A. T. Kammerer, a prominent young druggist of this city, who was in good health the day before, it is said, when he went to the office of Dr. R. G. Hunn to have a tooth pulled.

Dr. Hunn insisted that Mr. Kamberer drank a quart of whisky before the tooth was extracted. He admits he pulled the tooth while the druggist was lying upon the floor.

The druggist's presence in the dentist's office was discovered by Mrs. Kammerer. When the dentist told her that her husband was not there, she caught a glimpse of his hat and immediately demanded that she be admitted to the office.

On the floor of a back room she found her husband unconscious. He was taken home, given immediate medical treatment, but died late at night.

Examination of the stomach failed to reveal the presence of whisky.

DISPELS FEAR OF FOUL PLAY

Runaway Portland Boy, Missing Two Months, Sends Word to Father.

Portland, Ind., Aug. 4.—After a mysterious absence of two months, Raymond Bickel, fifteen years old, advised his father by a postcard that he expected to remain away from home, that he was well and was leaving Peoria, Ill., at the time, so no effort need be made to find him.

The Bickel boy disappeared from his home in Pike township May 28, dressed in overalls, work shirt and a cap. The police within a radius of 200 miles were notified and failure to elicit information led to the fear that he had met foul play. Two weeks ago his father, William J. Bickel, virtually gave up the search. In the light of the communication, no further effort will be made to trace the lad.

TIRED OF COMMISSION FORM

Wichita Citizens Will Petition Return to Old Government.

Wichita, Kan., Aug. 4.—After trying the commission form of government for more than four years there are many citizens of Wichita who desire to return to a mayor and council.

Petitions calling for a special election to do away with the commission have been prepared and will be circulated this summer.

Suffered Eczema Fifty Years—Now Well.

Seems a long time to endure the awful burning, itching, smarting, skin-disease known as "tetter"—another name for Eczema. Seems good to realize, also, that DR. HOBSON'S ECZEMA OINTMENT has proven a perfect cure.

Mrs. D. L. Kenney writes:—"I cannot sufficiently express my thanks to you for your Dr. Hobson's Eczema Ointment. It has cured my tetter, which has troubled me over fifty years. All druggists, or by mail 50c."

MY PATIENT

She Didn't Like Doctors, but Confided In Me

By EDNA B. SMITH

When I began to practice medicine I resolved that when I went into a household to see an invalid I would put on a cheerful exterior.

One morning on opening my mail I received a letter written in a feminine hand as follows:

> I have heard that you are so genial when you make your visits that one not knowing you are a doctor would not take you for one. My sister is ailing and I can't persuade her to consult a physician. Please call and I will introduce you as a friend. You may be able to elicit a knowledge of her case and treat her without letting her know your purpose. I will get the prescription and put it in her food. Come tomorrow when you are making your morning calls before 11 o'clock.

I happened at the time to have a very important case which required my constant attention and was prevented from responding to the call till the next day, then I drove up to the address given and rang the bell. My ring was answered by a lady about forty years old. I didn't know whether she was the person who had written me, and I felt it necessary to be cautious.

"Is this Miss Pendleton?" I asked, giving the name of my correspondent.

"Yes?" was the reply in a querying tone.

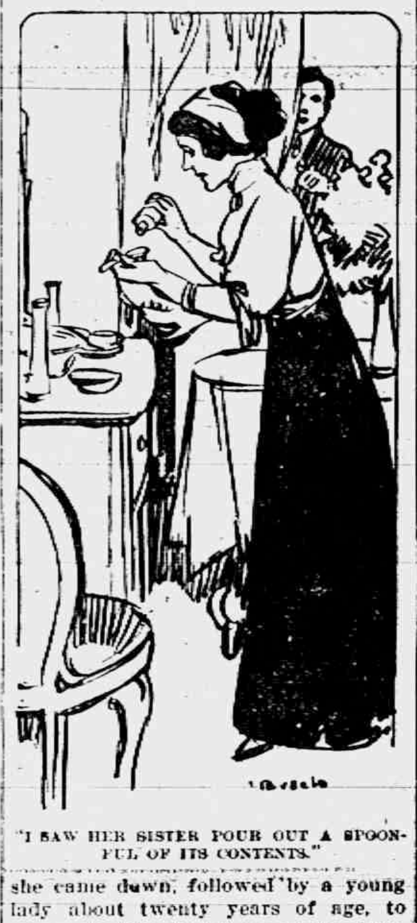
"I received your note, but was unable to call yesterday, being engaged."

"What note?"

It occurred to me that the lady might have written other notes besides mine and I needed to make myself known, so I told her that I was Dr. MacKnight, whom she had asked to come to see her sister as a friend. She gave me a blank stare for a few moments, then said:

"Oh, yes. Now I remember. Your not having called yesterday quite put the matter out of my mind. Come in."

She led me into a reception room, where she left me and went upstairs. She was gone some ten minutes, when she came down, followed by a young lady about twenty years of age, to whom she introduced me as Mr. MacKnight.



"I SAW HER SISTER POUR OUT A SPOONFUL OF ITS CONTENTS."

"Mr. MacKnight," said the older woman, "is a friend of Aunt Marian. He has called to see her and, not finding her at home, needs, as I have told you, to be entertained for awhile. I dare say you will be quite willing to take Marian's place?"

"Certainly," said the girl, advancing and offering me her hand. "Any friend of Aunt Marian's is surely welcome."

We were left together by our introducer and began to chat on ordinary topics.

"Where did you meet my aunt?" she asked. "I am sure I've often heard her speak of you, but I can't exactly place you."

"Oh, I've known your aunt a long while. I've met her so often that I couldn't specialize any particular time or place."

How many more lies I perpetrated during the call I can't now remember, but whenever I told one like the above I switched off on to some other matter. Miss Pendleton now and again would return to the charge, firing more such questions at me, but did not force me to the wall. Presently I said:

"You're not looking very well. Aren't you a little under the weather?"

"I don't mind admitting to you that I am, but I wouldn't have you say anything about it. They're always worrying about me and bothering me to take medicine. I won't do it."

"You're right," I replied; "there's more harm than good done with drugs, and, as for doctors, most of them are humbugs. I don't take any of their medicines. I am my own doctor."

"Are you? Then you shall be mine. I'll tell you my symptoms. I wake up in the morning with a headache, which passes off after breakfast and a cup of coffee. I also have a good deal of trouble with my back. What do you suppose is the matter with me?"

"You need something to bolster you up. You're below par. I was affected that way last spring, and I went to a druggist and said, 'I want some kind of phosphates—one of those made up prescriptions.' He showed me a lot of them, with what they were printed on the label. I selected one and took the whole bottle. It brought me right up."

"Do tell me what it is."

"I can't exactly remember the name, but I'll look at the bottle, which I have at home, and bring you some of it."

"I'm ever so much obliged. When will you bring it?"

"Will you be at home this evening?"

"Certainly."

"I'll try to get in about 8 o'clock."

Since I was making my visits and several patients waiting for me, I didn't remain very long, making the engagement for the evening, when I might have more time, for there was something about the girl that pleased me greatly. I was a young man then and unmarried. The only thing that retarded me in my practice was my bachelorhood. It's a great disadvantage to a doctor, and I was looking for a wife. Before I had been ten minutes with Miss Pendleton it occurred to me that if I could get a girl like that I'd marry instanter.

I had a bottle of the tonic I proposed to give my patient on my shelves and in the evening after my office hours gave my housekeeper the street and number to which I was going with instructions if I was wanted to call for Mr., not Dr., MacKnight, then went around to visit Miss Pendleton. She insisted on taking a dose of the tonic at once.

I spent a very enjoyable evening, fortunately not being interrupted by a call from any of my patients. I found Miss Pendleton very entertaining, and we were at home in each other's company, for we both had a keen sense of humor, and that faculty draws persons possessing it together.

It required a month for Miss Pendleton to go through the bottle I had given her, during which time I made her semiweekly visits. I laughingly claimed the right to make them, since I was her doctor, whereupon she threatened to report me for practicing without a diploma or a license. She fell to calling me Dr. instead of Mr. MacKnight, and I scolded her for doing so, saying she might as well call me "humbug" and have done with it. It was all very funny and delightful. I wished I might play doctor with some of my more troublesome patients in the same way.

One evening when I called I was admitted by a maid and shown into the living room, which was but dimly lighted. I sat down to wait for my "patient," as I jocularly called her. The dining room was next the living room, and I saw the elder Miss Pendleton enter it, go to a sideboard, take up a bottle the exact size and appearance of the one I had brought her sister, pour out a spoonful of its contents and swallow it. She went out without having seen me, and as soon as she had gone I went to the sideboard and examined the label on the bottle. It was the article I had brought. She was taking my prescription as well as her sister.

Was she not taking it instead of her sister? I began to suspect something. When my patient came down I said to her:

"Have you taken nearly all the tonic?"

"Nearly all."

"I saw it on the sideboard and noticed that it was nearly all gone. You must have got another bottle, didn't you?"

"No. Why do you ask?"

"Because I saw your sister taking a dose just now. If you have both been taking it it must be like the widow's cruse of oil mentioned in the Bible."

She looked me in the face intently for a few moments, then burst into a laugh.

"Why so merry?" I asked.

"I have wished to keep the secret till Aunt Marian returns, which will be tomorrow. I was expecting lots of fun seeing you meet her. But Aunt Martha's taking that dose in your presence gives it all away."

"Gives what away?"

"I will explain. Aunt Martha has been ailing for some time. Aunt Marian couldn't induce her to call in a doctor, so she wrote you to call as a friend. Aunt Marian left the city at 1 o'clock the day she expected you, and you fell into the hands of the person you were to deceive. Aunt Martha came up to me much displeased at what her sister had done and wondering what she should do in the premises. I was much amused, and it occurred to me that it would be very funny for me to play the sick sister. I persuaded Aunt Martha to introduce me as such, and now you know it all except that I gave you the real patient's symptoms, and she has been taking your tonic. I am happy to say that it has done wonders for her. Her headache and her backache and all her other aches have departed. Aunt Marian will be ever so much obliged to you. She returns tomorrow afternoon. You must come and give her an opportunity to thank you."

"Not if I know myself. I have been so badly fooled that I can dispense with her acknowledgments. I'll make you pay for this."

I surely did make her pay for her fun, for I made her the wife of a physician. That means that she can never rely on her husband to take her anywhere, not even to church, for he is liable always to be called. He is not safe even in the middle of the night. She gains comfort, however, whenever we have friends in to dinner by telling how she played sick while the other person took my medicine.

TESTED HIS LOVE.

Unfortunately, Though, the Test Did Not Work Out Right.

She had merely wished to put his love to the test. It had not occurred to her that he might impulsively say goodby and go out of her life forever, but apparently she had misjudged him, and now he was gone, gone, alas, and she was left alone to nurse a vain regret.

Half swooning, she sank into a chair and covered her face with her hands.

Tears trickled between her fingers, and bitterly she reproached herself.

"Why," she sobbed, "did I let him go? I have lost him! Oh, foolish girl that I was, not to have put my arms around his neck before it was too late and asked him to forgive me!"

But hist!

Suddenly she raised her head and listened.

Yes; there was some one at the door.

It is he!

Hastily dashing the tears from her eyes, she assumed an uncompromising look. He had returned to sue for peace. She must compel him to humbly admit that he had been wrong. It was her duty to herself to insist that he must surrender unconditionally.

He rang the bell, but she did not rush to let him in. Not until he rang again did she go to the door.

For a moment they stood facing each other. Proudly she waited for him to begin his plea for mercy.

At last he spoke.

"I'm sorry to trouble you," he said, "but I forgot my rubbers."—Chicago Record-Herald.

First Civilization.

It was in Egypt in all probability that the condition we call civilization had its rise at a time when the very idea of writing was unknown to other nations. An attempt is now being made to show that the idea of the settled and more or less orderly and peaceful social state to which we give the name of civilization came from Chaldea or Babylonia, when that sort of thing existed long before it was brought to Egypt. But not as yet is the theory clearly proved, though its advocates are making some pretty strong points in its favor. So far, however, the land of Egypt holds the title.—New York American.

TECUMSEH BOY WINNING AT STATE TENNIS TOURNEY

Dale Hodges won two rounds at the State Tennis Tourney held at the Detroit Tennis Club in Detroit Monday morning and afternoon.

Defeating A. B. Laing in the first round 6-2 and 8-6

Defeating L. A. Taylor in the second round 6-0 and 6-1.

Mr. Hodges holds a position with the Lilley State Bank and his many friends will rejoice with us over his good work.

FIRE

Fire broke out a little after noon Saturday at the Hailey carriage factory. Ernest Pangburn had just returned from his dinner and started a fire in his forge. Soon after he noticed smoke and on investigating found the roof of the blacksmith shop afire.

Men were called and carried water, working hard for some time, throwing water from the inside. The alarm was given and in a short time the fire department was on the scene and began throwing water on the blaze. The fire was soon extinguished and aside from a small hole burned in the roof, no farther damage was done.

Mr. Hailey was much pleased with the work of the men and the fire department in putting out the fire so quickly. The factory being a frame building, it would soon have been destroyed but for their prompt action.

Mr. Hailey reports a very good business year and is now making an assembly of buggies to exhibit at the Adrian Fair and possibly some of the others. This factory puts out about 200 jobs in the year and gives employment to a number of men.

Pleasant Hypocrites.

In a school I once attended the most popular girl was the most tactful one. As far as I know, only one girl disliked her. That girl was spiteful, cross and therefore not very well liked. Do you know what she used to call our idol? A hypocrite. The words bothered me not a little, and I spoke to my chum about it, but she answered me in her thoughtful little way:

"Well, I guess that may be. Betty is a hypocrite if being a hypocrite means saying little kind things based on small pretexts and leaving unsaid the unkind things, no matter how good a reason there is for saying them. But she's a mighty comfortable person to have around. I wish that the world was full of such hypocrites!"—Christian Herald.

Cheese.

The British are the greatest cheese eaters in the world. England also heads the list for diversity of cheeses, seventeen different varieties being produced there. France comes next and then Italy, Holland, Norway and Sweden. British cheeses are all made from cows' milk and without any admixture save in the case of "loaf" cheddar, which is sometimes flavored with sage leaves. Foreign cheese makers show less exclusiveness. Roquefort is made from sheep's milk and Gruyere from goats' milk.

A Habit of Thought.

"The equator is an imaginary line running around the earth," said the boy who likes to tell what he has learned at school.

"An imaginary line," repeated the great railway financier absentmindedly. "Who's promoting it?"—Washington Star.

Large Crowd Witness the Laying of the Corner Stone

St. Elizabeth Catholic Church Scene of Impressive Ceremonies

SUNDAY, AUGUST 3,

Between 600 and 700 people gathered at the site of the new Catholic church Sunday afternoon to witness the laying of the corner Stone.

Right Reverend Bishop Kelly of Detroit Diocese, assisted by Father Sullivan of Adrian and Father Heidenrich of Detroit performing the impressive ceremonies. Father Fisher of Clinton and his assistant Father Griffin were also present.

Those acting as acolytes during the services were George Deery and Charles Stevenson of Tecumseh. At the close of the ceremony attending the laying of the stone, Bishop Kelley delivered a very fine address on the church as a school not as a state institution but as a divine institution with Christ a leader and teacher.

Peter Uirich of Adrian sang "Rock of Ages" in a very effective manner, Father Vincint sang "O Salutarius" and was followed by St. Josephs choir who sang "The Star Spangled Banner" in a spirited manner.

The frame work of the church was decorated with the national colors with several American Flags and presented a fine appearance.

The building when completed will be a handsome stone edifice and an ornament to Tecumseh. There were over 200 passengers on the train from Adrian and many others came over by auto, many were also present from adjoining towns.

CHANGE OF DATE

The Union Farmers Club and Grange Picnic, which was to have been held Saturday, will be held Friday August 8, in Minor Davidsons Grove.

LET US PERSPIRE

The late spell of weather has had a peculiar effect on the editor of the Hudson Post, as is shown by the following spell which we will clip from the last issue of that paper.

"On Greenland's Icy Mountains," please join us while we sing; a freezing theme in this hot town would be a pleasant thing; for everything that's not too tough will sure evaporate, unless a cold wave to us comes at no far distant date.

The ice man has a happy smile, things are coming his way; and as he makes his daily rounds these words he's heard to say: "I sure am gathering in the wealth, and if hot weather stays, in luxury my family will spend its latter days."

A hot night has no charms for him who seeketh sleep; his dreams are not of heaven, as the sweat doth o'er him creep; he rolls upon his downy couch and groans in agony; we would not care to print the words which he is apt to say.

On Sunday morning to the lake great crowds go for the day; 'tis cooler there than in town, so all the people say; the older ones sit in the shade at morning, noon or night; while boys and girls wander around and find a place to spoon.

Oh for the blessed winter with zero or below; oh for a skating season and ten feet deep of snow; but when the winter cometh this this theme will be forgot, and we will yearn for summer and wish that it was hot.

BLUE RIBBON MEET

Since the inauguration at the old Hamtramck track in 1885 the Blue Ribbon trotting and pacing meeting at Detroit each midsummer has ranked with later racing in the matter of speed. Always have there been sensationally fast performers on the Detroit track in spite of the fact that the meeting generally has taken place in July. Now that this carnival of speed has been moved back to the week of August 11 it is certain that all records made in the Michigan metropolis will be tumbled over by the fleet trotters and pacers headed for this annual event, which is incomparable in the sporting world.

Never in the history of trotting have so many horses beaten 2:10 in races in the month of July, and in view of the fact that they are improving it is expected that they will about reach their limit when they turn for the word at the Detroit races.

The Blue Ribbon program this year is one of unusual excellence. It is so balanced that the people living outside of Detroit who may be able to spare only a day or two will be able to see just of good an attraction no matter what afternoon they pick.

On Monday, August 11, the Matron stake for three-year old trotters and pacers will introduce the best colts in the world. The Board of Commerce stake is a novelty in that it is for pacers who do not wear hobbles. The Chamber of Commerce stake for 2:13 pacers, $5,000, is the headliner for Tuesday, when the big field of 2:16 trotters will perform.

The Merchants' & Manufacturers' stake of $10,000 for 2:24 trotters is set pace will be raced. The free-for-all pace and the 2:08 trot are the big things for Thursday and the free-for-all trot and 2:08 pace on Friday.

In all there will be 20 races, four each afternoon, and the horses will be started by Frank B. Walker acknowledged to be the master of his profession. Daily band concerts will help to make Blue Ribbon Week one of the most enjoyable of the year.

FOR HER BIRTHDAY.

Waunita Goheen was hostess to a party of young friends Friday, August 1st, to celebrate her ninth birthday. Those who were present were Welma Nye, Geraldine and Helen Westcott, Elizabeth Ruthruff, Rena Kempf and Alice Hooten.

Light refreshments were served and every one declared they had a most delightful time. Waunita had a number of pretty gifts from her friends.

HOUSE PARTY

Wilfred Waldron entertained for the week end at the Waldron cottage Wamplers Lake with his father and mother Mr. and Mrs Will Waldron as chaperones, the following party of his young friends: Miss Clara Waldron and guests Miss Hazel Warren and Mr. Bemus of Grand Rapids, Helen Payne of Watkins Glen, N. Y., Miss Lulu Brown of Deerfield, Misses Zilla Mills, Ruth Keeney, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Dickenson, James Waldron and Earl Rector.

That they had a good time goes without saying for when did such a crowd get together, and have it otherwise.

RETURN OF THE "DOZEN"

The Dignified Dozen returned from their outing at Sand Lake Saturday afternoon and report a most delightful time. This is the eleventh year that these ladies have taken their annual trip to the lakes and each year seems just a little better than the last.

AMUSEMENTS

READ—WHAT THE PITTSBURG DISPATCH SAYS:

Vogel's Minstrels drew big houses, Lyceum Theatre Crowded with Enthusiastic Audiences Matinee and Night.

Reputation is everything. Keeping your promise is more. John W. Vogel's Big City Minstrels have the reputation and they keep their promises. Yesterday at matinee and evening performances they drew the largest houses at the Lyceum that we have seen this season. There has been nothing at the Lyceum this season that has approached Vogel's Minstrels in delighting the audiences, clean; harmonious, without even the suggestion of vulgarity, all that was excellent and delightful in modern minstrelsy his inimitable and incomparable performers presented. John W. Vogel is certainly the Cid Campeador, the incomparable king of minstrelsy. The first part was glittering and without comparison in minstrel performances. The stage setting is the finest we have yet been favored with seeing. The Silver Electric Velour Palace is a scene of magnificence. The costumes are brilliant and striking, and the music and singing unquestionably the best. The jokes and repartee are new, crisp and brimful of fun. The company which Mr. Vogel has brought to Pittsburg is unquestionably the best he has ever had here. His selection of performers is born of skill founded on long experiences. The best is none too good for him. We can safely say that the show was a great one, and we have the word of of the large audiences that we have made no mistake.

The above organization will appear at the Bradley Opera House next Monday, August 11, as an opening attraction of the coming theatrical season in Tecumseh.

PANAMA CANAL READY WITHIN TWO MONTHS.

Confidential dispatches received at Washington predict the opening of the Panama canal, should occasion demand it, late in September. This information was in reply to instructions from the administration to rush work with all possible speed.

Col. Goethals in answer stated that progress had been rapid and that the reduction of the Panama construction forces would begin by the end of August. Maj James P Jarvey and Maj. George M. Hoffman, army engineers in charge of the Gatun dam and spillway, will be relieved from duty this month.

"Enuff's Enuff."

A few days ago a north side physician received a telephone call at his downtown office asking him to hurry home as speedily as possible. On arrival he was told that his small boy, age three, had found a box of belladonna pellets and had eaten some of them, the wife didn't know how many. The pupils of the youngster's eyes were dilated, which was proof that he had eaten some of the poison.

The father decided on an emetic and mixed a generous dose of mustard in some warm water. The youngster gulped it down. A minute or so later the father said, "Here, Ernest; here's another dose." The boy rebelled. "If you don't take it I'll lick you. You hear me?" "Yes, papa; I—I hear you. Please give me the lickin'."—Indianapolis News.

Panama Canal.

It is more than probable that the building of the Panama canal would never have been possible but for the discovery by Dr. Jesse Lazear of the United States army, who, by the way, sacrificed his life while making the experiments leading to the discovery, that yellow fever was transmitted by the bite of the deadly stegomia mosquito. But for that wonderful and timely discovery the mortality and attendant misery of the fever would have been a handicap too great to have been borne.—New York American

DON'T EXPERIMENT

You Will Make No Mistake if You Follow This Tecumseh Citizens Advice.

Never neglect your kidneys.

If you have pain in the back, urinary disorders, dizziness and nervousness, it's time to act and no time to experiment. These are frequently symptoms of kidney trouble, and a remedy which is recommended for the kidneys should be taken in time.

Doan's Kidney Pills is a good remedy to use. No need to experiment. It has acted effectively in many cases. Tecumseh. Follow the advice of a Tecumseh citizen.

E. C. Brisbine, farmer, N. Democrat St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I began to suffer from kidney complaint twenty years ago and the medicine I took brought me only temporary relief. Often my back ached intensely and the secretions from my kidneys were irregular in passage and highly colored. Doan's Kidney Pills went to the seat of my trouble and did me so much good that I am seldom without a supply on hand." (Statement given December 6, 1910.)

A WILLING CONFIRMATION

When Mr. Brisbine was interviewed at a later date, he said: "You may continue to use my name as a reference for the merits of Doan's Kidney Pills. Whenever I feel in need of a kidney medicine, I take this preparations and effectively."

Riches.

He is rich or poor according to what he is, not according to what he has.—H. W. Beecher.

Sometimes the symptoms of kidney and bladder trouble are so plain no one can mistake them. Backache, weak and lame back with soreness over the kidneys, shorp pains, rheumatism, dull headache, and disturbed sleep, are all indications of a trouble that Foley Kidney Pills will relieve quickly and permanently. Try them. For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

Wisdom.

Mothers! Have Your Children Worms?

Are they feverish, restless, nervous, irritable, dizzy or constipated? Do they continually pick their nose or grind their teeth? Have they cramping pains, irregular and ravenous appetite? These are all signs of worms. Worms not only cause your child suffering, but stunt its mind and growth. Give "Kickapoo Worm Killer" at once. It kills and removes the worms improves your child's appetite, regulates stomach, liver and bowels. The symptoms disappear and your child is made happy and healthy, as nature intended. Commissioner's Notice

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee ss.

In the matter of the Estate of ALFRED JAMES, Deceased.

The undersigned having been appointed by the Probate Court of said County, Commissioners to receive, examine and adjust all claims and demands of all persons against the estate of said deceased, do hereby give notice that we will meet for that purpose at the Tecumseh State Savings Bank in the village of Tecumseh, Lenawee County, Michigan, on the 2nd day of August 1913 and on the 17th day of January 1914, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of each of said days.

And that six months from the 17th day of July, 1913, are allowed by said Probate Court for the creditors of said estate to present their claims to us for examination and allowance.

Dated July 17th 1913

Joseph H. Smith
Sylvester P. Hosmer
Commissioners

STATE OF MICHIGAN.
Probate Court for the County of Lenawee.

At a session of said court, held at the probate office, in the City of Adrian, in said county, on the 28th day of July, A. D. 1913.

Present, Hon. HARRY L. LARWILL, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of ADELINE TILTON, deceased.

[illegible] H. Hyde, nephew and heir at law of deceased, having filed in said court his petition, praying that said court adjudicate and determine who were at the time of her death the legal heirs of said deceased and entitled to inherit the real estate of which said deceased died seized.

It is Ordered, that the 25th day of August, A. D. 1913 at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at said probate office, be and is hereby appointed for hearing said petition;

It is further Ordered, that public notice thereof be given by publication of a copy of this order, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing, in the Tecumseh Herald, a newspaper printed and circulated in said County.

HARRY L. LARWILL,
(A true copy) Judge of Probate

MAGIC IN A BATON.

The Music Was Different When Wagner Conducted the Performance.

How Wagner astonished an audience in Berlin is related by Otto Lessmann in a German magazine. It was in 1871. He had lectured at the Royal academy on the opera, and in his honor the Verein der Berliner Musiker arranged a performance of his "Faust Overture" under the direction of Professor Julius Sturm.

When it was over Wagner seemed to hesitate for a moment as to what he should do. Then he got up, thanked the musicians and remarked that as he had not been connected with an orchestra for twenty years he felt impelled to further show his gratitude by an artistic deed. "You will understand my request," he added, "that you repeat 'Faust Overture' under my personal direction."

What then happened made an indelible impression on all who were so fortunate as to be present. The spiritual revelation he made of the various moods of that tone poem stirred the hearers as they had never before been stirred. The difference between a genius and a mere professional conductor was made manifest. The musicians themselves were stunned by what they had done. "We looked at him, and we knew and did what he wanted," they remarked.

BUMPS ON THE SHOES.

That's Because Our Footwear Is Not Polished Properly.

"Do you know why it is that American men's feet always look ugly?" said a bootmaker. "No? Well, then, I'll tell you.

"American men's feet look ugly because they have their shoes polished while wearing them, an iniquitous practice that is followed nowhere else in the world.

"Everywhere else men on retiring slip trees into their shoes and set the shoes outside their bedroom doors. A servant takes them and polishes them, and after the dampness of their polishing they rest for some hours in the trees, and this does to them what a hot iron does to a suit of clothes—it presses them, so to speak, taking out all the ugly bumps and wrinkles, making them like new.

"But we Americans drop into an armchair on a high brass stand. Our shoes are polished on our feet. The ugly lines of wear, instead of being removed or brushed out by the process, are confirmed, rubbed in. And that is why our feet always look ugly—as ugly as our clothes would look if we never sent them to the tailor to be pressed."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Energetic Frenchwomen.

Essentially a home maker and home keeper, a mother and a devoted wife, the Frenchwoman has nevertheless always enjoyed a certain economic independence which her Anglo-Saxon sisters have not known. A large proportion of French girls are self supporting and remain so after marriage. When they do not earn a living they have their dot and pay their personal expenses from it. This has made them peculiarly self reliant, says "France From Within."

It is rarely indeed that one sees in France the helpless, incompetent woman who can turn her hand to nothing, having never learned to do one single thing well. Adaptable and energetic, the Frenchwoman can do most things in the most efficient manner possible. Her knowledge is never scrappy, and what she knows she knows consummately.

One Way to Make a Living.

In the vicinity of the London docks there is a man who makes money whenever he wants it by a crafty ruse. He fills an old port wine bottle nearly up to the neck with water, then he pushes an old cork down the neck until it meets the water. The small space above is filled with good port wine at a cost of about sixpence, and a cork is gently placed in the top. He soon finds a flat on the streets who after sampling the wine is willing to forfeit a few shillings for the bottle, whereupon the sharper speedily vanishes before the deception is discovered.—Sheffield Telegraph.

A Weird Race.

A theatrical man happened to strike a small town in the northern part of the state of New York lately.

"So you're in the theater business?" said the proprietor of the little hotel where Kingsley stopped. "Well, all I've got to say is that you troupers certainly are a funny lot. Thirty-two of them minstrel fellows stopped over with me last week, and all of them was named Cull but one, and his name was Props."—Saturday Evening Post.

Wonderful Cures Reported In Germany.

The use of simple herbs as remedies instead of the more concentrated and usually more dangerous inorganic substances, has been revived very widely of late. In Germany a new school of physicians has arisen which throws out almost a whole of the pharmacopeia and relies on an adaptation of the method of wild animals in curing themselves. . . . . N. Y. World.

It was Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute of Buffalo, N. Y., who first advocated the extended use of some of our native roots, such as: Golden seal and Oregon grape root, mandrake and queen's root, black cherrybark. These are the chief ingredients in Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which has been so well and favorably known for nearly half a century. A harmless cleanser and stomach tonic that nature has provided.

J. D. MATHESON, ESQ.

J. DONALD MATHESON of Ossining, N. Y. says: "I suffered for over five years with what the doctors told me was dilated condition of the stomach, associated with a catarrhal condition of same, and nervous heart. I had tried enough nux, bismuth, gentian, rhubarb, etc., to float a ship and naturally thought there was no cure for me, but after reading what eminent doctors said of the curative qualities of the ingredients of 'Golden Medical Discovery' I gave it a fair trial. I took the 'Discovery' and also the 'Pleasant Pellets,' and can truthfully say I am feeling better now than I have in years. I cheerfully give permission to print this testimonial, and if any 'doubting Thomas' writes me I will 'put him wise' to the best all-around medicine in the country to-day."

FACE TO FACE WITH A LION.

It Took All This Woman's Nerve to Pass the Ordeal In Safety.

Few women can be so familiar with the king of the wilderness as Mrs. Fred Maturin (Edith Cecil Porch), whose "Adventures Beyond the Zambesi" contain many thrilling lion tales.

One evening she met a lion in a forest of impenetrable brass. She was quite alone—her gun bearer, Lang Wan, having disappeared—two miles from camp.

"Through the long, dry grass a large male lion stood gazing at me. * * * I stood as still as he. All my blood appeared to rush to my head. I could not have stirred had I wished to. I stood still. I don't think I even breathed or that my heart gave one faint beat for some seconds. * * * I must stand quite, quite still, and stare back. * * * It was perhaps my only chance."

In all her terror she was conscious of the animal's great beauty. She watched him draw a step or two back: "I thought he was about to spring, but I took care not to move, mastering my terrible but fatal instinct to turn and run. Then he dropped his head * * * and with obvious fear slunk quickly away." That was at Dam river.

GERMAN "KURS."

They Are Not "Cures," Though Sometimes Translated as Such.

Many newspapers are hasty in announcing the discovery in Germany of some method of treatment more or less new, and not infrequently information is given the public through the failure to keep in mind the actual meaning of one little word. The German word "kur" does not mean "cure," although it is not an uncommon thing to find it so translated into English.

"To cure" in English means "to restore to health, to effect a cure," but in other languages it means merely to apply "a method of remedial treatment of disease, medical or hygienic care, method of medical treatment." The German word for "restoration to health" is "heilung," not "kur."

The Latin word "cura" means merely "care," a shade of meaning which is preserved in the derived term "curator." An Italian physician was recently made to say, when his article was translated into English, "I cured ten typhoid patients last month, and six of them died." What he really said was that he had treated ten patients.—From the Journal of the American Medical Association.

The Nervous Laugh—A Theatrical Test

In "The Spirit of Paris" Mr. Frankfort Summerville has an interesting chapter on the theater in Paris, including that curiosity of Paris, the Grand Guignol—a theater that was originally a church—and the "creepiness" of its art. The little, highly dramatic Grand Guignol plays "are chosen for their power of acting upon the nerves, and the acting usually being superb, they never fail in their effect. A perceptible wave of nervousness communicates itself through the audience; some people begin to gigle in a perturbed manner, there is a tense silence broken by a scream or two or an exclamation, and then an 'Ouf!' of relief." "When I hear one or two nervous laughs," M. Brizard, one of the cleverest of the Grand Guignol actors, told me, "I know I have succeeded. I work up my effects to get that nervous laughter."

PLUCK THE FOREIGNER.

That Appears to Be the Patriotic Motto In Switzerland.

A foreign resident in Switzerland was fined 10 francs because his little girl had plucked three buttercups growing on a piece of land on which she and some half dozen children had for years been accustomed to play. The land had recently changed hands, and its new owner had put up a notice forbidding the plucking of flowers. A passing gendarme had found the children fragante delicto and had forthwith instituted proceedings against the little foreigner while letting the natives go scot free.

The child's father appealed against the sentence and by dint of hard fighting, which entailed, of course, expense, forced the higher court to reduce the fine from 10 francs to 3—i. e., one franc for each buttercup.

When I tried to learn the ways and wherefores of this case I was told by a Swiss that one-half of every fine levied goes to the gendarme who reports the offense for which it is levied, and also the Swiss gendarmes cannot fairly be expected to be quite as alert in taking proceedings against natives as against foreigners.

Further, I was told by an American that in Switzerland all foreigners rank as Egyptians and that the one Scriptural injunction that is faithfully obeyed there is that which ordains that Egyptians shall be spoiled.—From "The Latter Day Swiss" in Cornhill Magazine.

Her Own Town

She Found It by Chance

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Settled in her chair in the Pullman car, Angela Long studied the time table with knitted brows. Finally she flung it aside and drew out a small railway guide. Now her actions became quite mysterious.

She closed her blue eyes and ruffled the leaves of the booklet with pink finger tips. Suddenly she slipped in a finger and opened the book. At the same time her eyes popped open and she looked eagerly at the schedule on the printed page.

"The X. L. S. and R.!" she crowed. "I just knew if I left my destination to fate it would take me to some new and interesting region. Now my finger shall run up and down the columns and whatever station it pauses at, even though it be a watering tank, there will I alight and seek my adventure."

Again she closed her eyes, while her finger wandered uncertainly over the page. At last it paused, and Angela opened her eyes to scan her fate.

"Angela!" she gasped. "The very idea of my finger choosing a town of my own name! Well, Angela Long Angela station it is. I'm glad my ticket is a through one. I can branch off up into Wyoming and come to my own town."

She studied the time table carefully, consulted the attached map, made a few memorandums in her little book and then sank back in her chair with closed eyes to dream of the past and the future.

The motherless daughter of a rich manufacturer, Angela Long had spent many years in expensive private schools, for her father was a very busy man. At the death of her father Angela found herself singularly alone in the world.

"I'M VERY GLAD TO SEE YOU, MY DEAR."

Then came the terrible moment when Angela learned that her father's fortune had been a mere gilded shell which hid an immense burden of debt, and when matters were cleared up Angela pocketed the $2,000 that represented her patrimony and set forth to make a place for herself in the world.

Because of her youth and inexperience and ignorance she had happily left her destination to mere chance, and that is why she was speeding westward toward a little cattle town in the northwest with a vague idea of opening a school or a millinery parlor or a candy shop, whatever seemed to be the crying need of that particular town.

When Angela and her three trunks were left on the station platform, while the little train snailed away through a rift in the hills, she felt a sudden panic at the loneliness. There were the hills, the railroad tracks, the neat little station and a dusty white trail winding away into the blue haze of distance.

In front of the platform was a buckboard to which were harnessed a pair of calico ponies. A tall man dressed in flannel shirt with corduroy trousers tucked into leather boots turned and looked at her from under a wide brimmed hat.

"I beg your pardon," he said courteously. "Perhaps you are looking for some one to take your trunks?"

"I don't know. I guess so," faltered Angela, turning pink with sudden embarrassment at the absurdity of her wild plan. "I should like to go to the best hotel, if you please."

The man hesitated.

"The best hotel isn't very good," he admitted. "You see, there have been so many changes in the management that"—

"Perhaps you can recommend a good boarding place," interrupted Angela.

"There is Mrs. Benson, but the laundry people all board there, and I believe her house is quite full. You better come over to the ranch with me. My mother will look out for you until you are settled—that is, if you are going to remain."

"I will see Mrs. Benson first," agreed Angela. And she watched the man while he easily lifted her heavy trunks and deposited them on the buckboard.

In five minutes they were flying down the trail, leaving a white cloud of dust behind them. Both of them were very quiet during the drive. Finally they entered the town, a straggling street of little houses that promised some day to grow up into a real city. The ponies stopped before a two story house, on the porch of which sat several men smoking. They looked with interest at Angela and her companion. A strong odor of frying onions was wafted from the open front door.

Angela looked appealingly at her companion, and he smiled down at her and nodded. "Awful, isn't it?" he asked. "I reckon you better come out and see my mother, eh?"

"Thank you; I will," said Angela gratefully, and she was surprised at the feeling of relief that followed her decision.

The beauty and virtue of women are superior to the virtue and beauty of men, but no one can be beautiful when in the throes of a deep-seated hacking cough or cold. Nothing will bring greater relief than Allen's Cough Balsam. Sold for over half a century. Endorsed by those who use it. 25c., 50c. and $1.00 bottles.

A Few Words about Painkiller

The Rev. James H. Dixon, Rector St. Judes and Hon. Canon of Christ Church Cathedral, Montreal, writes:—"Permit me to send you a few lines to strongly recommend PERRY DAVIS' PAINKILLER. I have used it with satisfaction for thirty-five years. It is a preparation which deserves full public confidence."

Painkiller Cramps Diarrhoea Bowel Complaints

Just at sunset the ponies turned in at a wide gate and went rollicking toward a low, comfortable ranch house perched on a knoll and surrounded by beech trees. To Angela's delight a beautiful white haired old lady, exquisitely neat in a lavender cotton gown and white apron, came out to meet them.

"Well, Gray, I see you've brought the company," she smiled, scanning the newcomer with nearsighted eyes.

"I am afraid you will consider me an intruder," cried Angela nervously as she gave her hand to her driver and jumped to the ground. "Your son was very kind and"—

"I'm very glad to see you, my dear," interrupted Mrs. Dexter, kissing the girl gently. "After Gray has sent the horses away he will explain all about it. Come up to your room; you must be very tired."

"You speak as though you had been expecting me," murmured Angela, as they entered the cool house and mounted the stairs.

"We who live in the loneliness are always on the lookout for visitors," laughed Mrs. Dexter, patting her hand. "Here you are; now make yourself comfortable and I will bring you a cup of tea."

"Wait, please," cried Angela, tossing aside her hat and veil and, turning her flushed face toward her hostess, added, "Please let me tell you how I happened to come to this town before you go any further."

"Very well, dear," and Mrs. Dexter folded her hands and sat down while Angela told the story of her life and of its rude awakening to poverty and the necessity for starting anew. She faltered when she related how she had foolishly left the point of her destination to chance, and here a flood of homesick tears drowned her speech.

Mrs. Dexter gathered her into motherly arms and kissed and crooned over her, with now and then a murmured chuckle of delight.

"I thought of opening a millinery shop," said Angela, smiling through her tears. "I really am clever at hats. But I suppose there are not many women to wear them here."

"Not very many, my dear, but we will see what we can do. Wait until Gray comes and"—

A masculine voice sang up the stairway and announced that supper was ready.

"Come, Angela," said Mrs. Dexter, giving the girl her hand. And, strangely happy in this new found friend, Angela Long went down to the dining room.

Gray Dexter gave her a pleasant greeting, and Angela marveled at the ill concealed delight in her presence that mother and son revealed in look and word.

"I am afraid you will think I am a sort of impostor," she said after she had related her story for Gray's benefit.

"Tell her, mother," laughed Gray, with tender eyes on the girl's lovely face.

"My dear, it was a wonder working Providence that caused you to choose to come to Angela, for it is your own town. Listen. Five years ago Gray was working as bookkeeper in your father's factory. His health was very poor, and the doctor ordered him to adopt an open air life. It was that or death. Gray could not afford to come, for he had me to care for, but your father interested himself in the case and advanced the money to enable Gray to come out here and buy the ranch. We have been very successful, and Gray has repaid all the money to your father.

"We have been most grateful to your father and, although unknown to you, much interested in his daughter, whose picture we saw once in a society paper. So, when the name of the town was changed from Green Snake, Gray was asked to rename it, and he called it Angela, after you, the daughter of the man who had given him life and happiness and success.

"Now, don't you think this is your own town?"

Angela smiled at them through tears. "It is wonderful, wonderful," she murmured.

"So you had better remain with me until you decide what to do," went on Mrs. Dexter, helping Angela to the fluffy biscuits.

"Thank you; I will!" cried Angela happily.

Gray Dexter looked at her rather shyly. He was thinking in his great heart that he might be able to persuade Angela that her vocation lay there at the ranch, being a real daughter to his mother and—his wife.

And that's the way it turned out after all.

Why She Can't Spend It.

"A successful man earns more than his wife can spend."

"My husband does that."

"Why, your husband doesn't earn much, Mrs. Titewaddo."

"I know it, but he hangs on to all of it."—Houston Post.

Proved Himself Competent.

An English nobleman engaged a tall and powerful highlander to act as gamekeeper on his estate. Having been a considerable time at his post and not having caught any poachers, the nobleman suspected his gamekeeper of carelessness. So one dark night he disguised himself and went out with a gun to poach on his own grounds. He had fired only one or two shots when he was suddenly pounced upon from behind and his gun wrenched away. Then kicks and blows were showered upon him until he fell down half insensible. The highlander then walked away quietly, and when the nobleman recovered sufficiently he crawled home and took to his bed for two weeks. He has now no doubts whether the man can perform his duty or not.

YOUNG BANDITS ARE CAUGHT

Police Break Up Alleged Band of Boy Robbers.

JACKSON, MICH. — Four boys whose ages range from eight to fourteen years have been arrested charged with forming a combine in robbing stores and dwellings in this city in the last few months of several hundred dollars in cash and much jewelry.

The youngsters, who are being held to the juvenile court, are Clarence Mitchell, fourteen years old; his brother, Clifton, twelve years old, and Harry Allison and Fred Noble.

Clarence, who is said to have admitted being the ringleader, has confessed to having robbed the home of C. H. Higdon of $500 in money and valuables. Of this amount, the police recovered $225 in his home.

A suit for divorce begun by Mrs. Lillie Kovach of Kalamazoo involves the equity of wedding presents, among which is a gift of $60 in cash. The question of who shall have possession of both the money and several pieces of silver, worth $100, is being considered by Municipal Judge Faling, who is sitting in the case.

The state board of health and state dairy and food exhibit train left Lansing Saturday over the Grand Trunk for a month's tour of the state. The train consisted of a Pullman car for the men in charge of the train, one car containing the exhibits of the state health department and one car containing the exhibits of the dairy and food department.

The Saginaw County Humane Society has adopted resolutions asking the State Live Stock commission to rescind its proclamation, issued July 1, ordering all dogs in the county to be muzzled or chained, inserting the provision that if canines were found unmuzzled citizens could shoot them. The resolutions have been forwarded to the governor and members of the commission. The society claims the order is not being rigidly enforced, and that it is unlawful.

Through the game warden department 68 convictions were secured last month for violation of the fish and game laws of the state. The department collected $784.62 in fines.

The state railway commission has served notice on the Pere Marquette Railroad Co. to build a new depot at Port Huron to take the place of the one destroyed by fire in 1912. Since that time a box car has been used. The notice says the new depot must be completed by Nov. 30.

WASHINGTON—The investigation of the activities of Martin M. Mulhall for the National Association of Manufacturers occupied the attention of committees on both sides of the capitol for the first time since the "lobbyist" made his charges a month ago. The house committee first examined Louis Seibold of the New York World, who had much to do with turning over the Mulhall correspondence to that newspaper.

Bert Dunn, driver of the automobile wrecked at Okemos last Wednesday, killing Albert Dunn and Bert Newman, after pleading not guilty in the justice court in the morning, reappeared in the afternoon and pleaded guilty to speeding, upon the advice of his attorney. Judge Haigh fined him $25 and costs. Dunn says he will never drive an automobile again.

A warrant is out here for the arrest of M. E. Levitte, of Detroit, who while at Alma two weeks visiting his father-in-law is alleged to have cashed two bogus drafts on the Colonial Savings bank of New York.

GUN GANG CONTINUES TO TERRIFY RESORT

Newspaper Is Shot up for Stories on the Situation.

PETOSKEY, MICH. — Mistaking the shadow of a linotype machine for the form of an editor at work, some one fired a shot through a window of the Daily Resorter and Petoskey Evening News office. The flattened bullet, evidently from a 22 rifle, was found near a type case the next morning. It is supposed that the bullet was intended for a correspondent who had been handling the stories concerning the Ramonia park shooting affair. No one was in the office at the time.

Harbor Springs, Mich., Aug. 4.—Unless the four gunmen, who have been terrorizing Ramonia Park for a week despite guards, are captured soon the management of the Ramona hotel will appeal to the county authorities for additional guards.

Three arrests have been made but the depredations continue.

Ramona hotel is owned by Mrs. E. O. Bingham, of Cleveland, and is located at a lonesome spot at the head of Little Traverse bay.

A couple of weeks ago two of the employes were discharged and it is thought that these men are in the gang that is making life miserable for the resorters.

HOLINESS MEETING CLOSES

15,000 Persons Visit Ground Last Day of Services.

EATON RAPIDS, MICH. — The twenty-eighth annual meeting of the State Holiness Camp Meeting association closed here with one of the largest attendances a final service has had in Eaton Rapids.

Unfavorable weather, with rain early in the forenoon, kept some people away, but there were upward of 15,000 at the park through the greater portion of the day.

The evening service was the close of a ten day's session. Rev. Beverly Carradine, of St. Louis, Mo., preached in the forenoon. Rev. Joseph Smith, of Meridan, Miss., in the afternoon, and Rev. C. H. Babcock, the Portsmouth, Virginia, evangelist, in the evening.

The general attendance at the camp meeting this year has been greater than for a number of years.

SWITCHMAN MEETS DEATH

Is Brushed from Car and Crushed Under Wheels.

JACKSON, MICH. — Harry Golden, Michigan Central switchman, was thrown beneath a train on the Milwaukee street crossing, near the Union depot and killed.

Golden was in the act of boarding a moving train when it is said he was brushed from the car by the crossing gates.

He fell beneath the wheels, his left arm being torn off at the shoulder and his body crushed. Golden came to Jackson from Chicago a few weeks ago. An inquest will be held.

HE IS NOT A DANNY DREAMER

Youth Swims Lake with Telegram; Keeps It Dry.

HILLSDALE, MICH.—Herbyn Maynard, messenger boy for the Western Union, has a new method of delivering telegrams.

A message came for parties across Bay Beese lake, so he swam across with the message between his teeth, and did not get it wet.

NEW YORK — William W. Atterbury, vice president of the Pennsylvania Railroad company, and A. H. Smith, vice president of the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad company, were appointed by forty-two eastern railroads as arbitrators to represent them in proceedings to settle the trainmen's demands under the Newlands amendments to the Erdman law.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The worst storm damage in years followed the many rainfalls and cloudbursts in this state. At the water gap, the most terrific electrical and rain storm in the history of the mountain regions surrounding the Delaware watter gap began after 11:30 in the morning and damage to the extent of $50,000 was wrought.

HER LEG IS BROKEN

Woman Is Flung from Car Against a Tree.

JACKSON, MICH. — Pitched from an automobile when it plunged over an embankment near Vandercook, Mrs. Frederick Paddock sustained a broken leg and a number of other injuries.

Her husband was driving the machine at the time, but he was uninjured. Mrs. Paddock was thrown against a tree. The automobile collided with a fence before finally coming to a stop.

TABOO BRIGHT RED STEAK

Michigan Food Head Warns Against Ptomaine Poisoning.

LANSING, MICH. — "When you see hamburger of a very bright and unnatural red, the probabilities are that it has been enbalmed," declared James W. Helme.

"Use of preservations containing sulphites is forbidden by the laws of this state, and every case in which sulphites are found to have been used will be vigorously prosecuted.

"Ptomaine poison is formed in decaying animal products. It is a chemical poison that no amount of heat will destroy. The reason it occurs more frequently in hamburger and sausage meats is because of the tendency of some butchers to retain the meat on the block until it is no longer salable in its original form—then it goes to the grinder for hamburger or sausage."

WANTED TO ACT IN "MOVIES"

Jackson Society Girls Are Duped by Stage Faker.

Jackson, Mich., Aug. 2.—According to advices from Milwaukee three local society girls are among several hundred who have been duped by a fake advertising campaign, conducted by Frank Arnold, in which he guaranteed to make popular moving picture actresses out of any number of good looking girls, for a cash consideration.

Visions of wealth and fame induced the Misses Alive and Ida Lapage and Anna Conrad, to go to Milwaukee in answer to Arnold's ad.

Arnold has just been sent to the workhouse for three months and the girls returned home.

HAS A MURDER MYSTERY

Hillsdale, Mich., Worked Up Over Finding of Corpse.

HILLSDALE, MICH. — The finding of an unknown man, thirty-five years old, dead with two stab wounds under the heart, and his heart partially severed, on the Ypsilanti division of the Lake Shore railroad near North Adams, is believed to have furnished Hillsdale county with a murder mystery.

The body, which is apparently that of a foreigner, was discovered in the morning by section men. There was nothing of value in his clothes which bore the mark of a Detroit store.

GENERAL NEWS.

AUSTIN, TEX.—It has been planned by Democrats of Texas to raise a large fund by popular subscription for the benefit of Secretary of State W. J. Bryan. The money will be paid over to him on the contingency that he agrees to abandon the lecture platform and devote his entire time to the duties of the state department. The movement was started a few days ago in Orange, Texas, and Democrats in that town have already pledged in writing contributions amounting to more than $4,600 to the fund. Subscriptions will be taken in towns of the state and John McKinney, chief promoter of the idea, says he is confident as much as $50,000, or whatever sum Mr. Bryan may need as a supplement to his salary can easily be raised.

WASHINGTON—Germany has followed the lead of Great Britian in declining to participate in the Panama canal exposition at San Francisco in 1915. Announcement to this effect was made at the state department. According to the statement of department officials, the reason assigned for non-participation in both instances was that there are so many calls for participation in expositions. It is understood that this vague reason is really a cloak for more positive convictions on the part of both Great Britain and Germany.

WASHINGTON — Carrying out his plan to popularize still further the parcel post system, Postmaster General Burleson announced that after Aug. 15 the weight limit on packages would be placed at twenty pounds (it now is eleven pounds) and that a sharp reduction in charges for the transportation of packages would be made. He announced also that on the same date the "banking by mail" feature would be introduced into the postal system.

NEW YORK—James J. Hill, the veteran bulder of the northwest, told a newspaper correspondent that he saw no red lights on the business of the northwest. He added that trade was good in that section of the country. "We will have a good average crop in the northwest," said Mr. Hill. "Corn is doing well and for the first time Minnesota has gone in for that grain. The banking situation in the north west is fairly comfortable

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Senator J. Hamilton Lewis has come to the conclusion that the "old man" of the family has not received proper recognition from a grateful country, although the nation has honored the other members of the American household. As a result he announced his intention to introduce a bill setting aside July 29 as "Fathers' Day." Already there is a "Mothers' Day" and "Children's Day."

CHICAGO — Mrs. Esther Detchon has been awarded a decree of divorce from Seymour G. Detchon, wealthy real estate dealer, by Judge Petit in the circuit court, after having effected a private alimony arrangement by which she received about $150,000 of real estate and other property. Detchon entered no contest of his wife's suit after jurisdictional questions had been decided against him.

VIENNA — The Austrian Hungarian government will await a report from a commission of Austrian chamber of commerce which will visit San Francisco before deciding whether to participate in the Panama-Pacific exposition.

BOSTON — Not in some years has the meeting of the National Committee of the United Irish Leagues of America been so largely attended as was that in the grape arbor of the hotel Lenox with President Michael J. Ryan of Philadelphia in the chair.

CRIMES AND CASUALTIES.

PRINCETON, IND. — Brakeman Wilbur Pinnick of New Albany was instantly killed and other trainmen had narrow escapes when fast freight train No. 679 on the Southern railway was ditched four miles east of this city. It is believed to have been due to a split switch. The engine and five cars passed across, but the sixth jumped the switch. Fifteen other heavily loaded cars followed, piling up in an enormous mass along the tracks, seven of the cars being practically demolished.

MOBILE, ALA.—Being partially denuded and physicially exhausted, William F. Kennedy, seventy years old, the wealthy life convict who escaped two weeks ago from the Watumpka penitentiary, has been captured in Calhoun county, near his old home. The theory was that he had committed suicide or lost his life in the Coosa river, and it developed that upon leaving the penitentiary Kennedy wandered around for days until he reached home. He was sent up for implication in the nortorious Kennedy-Pearce feud in which twelve people were killed.

FLINT, MICH.—A double drowning occurred at Long Lake a few hours apart. The victims were H. Upton, eighteen years old, of Holly, who went down when seized with cramps, and Earl Dunton, twenty-one years old, of Fenton, who sank in sight of his parents, who were unable to aid him. Upton was swimming with several companions when he suddenly sank from view.

GREENVILLE, ILL. — An entire family was wiped out when a Pennsylvania railroad train struck George O. Morris' automobile. Mrs. Morris and Miss Georgia Morris, aged eight, were killed in the crash, while Mr Morris and his seventeen-year-old daughter Vera died from their injuries. Jacob Heckman, an employe, was uninjured.

ELGIN, ILL. — Two wealthy DeKalk county farmers, George Upstone, forty, and Andrew L Matthews, twenty-eight, were instantly killed at Fairdale, Ill., thirty miles west of here, when the carriage in which they were riding was struck by the Colorado special on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railway.

SPORTING AFFAIRS.

MADISON—Governor McGovern is slow in naming his boxing commission. It is quite likely that Manning Vaughan of Milwaukss will be made secretary of the commission. The secretary will receive a salary of $1,500 a year.

CHICAGO—Pitcher Edward Marvin Rulbach, who has been wishing the Chicago Cub baseball team would let him go or trade him, finally has obtained his wish. He was traded to the Brooklyn baseball club for Pitcher Eddie Stack.

WASHINGTON — R. O. Pollock, section director of the weather bureau at Trenton, N. J.; Professor H. L. Heiskell of the office of meteorology and Daniel J. Carroll, chief clerk of the weather bureau, implicated in the alleged political activity of former Chief Willis L. Moore, which resulted in his dismissal, were removed from office.

LONDON—Edward Hamilton McCormick, second son of Mr. and Mrs. L. Hamilton McCormick of 11 Hartford street, Mayfair, and Chicago, was married in John the Baptist church, Kirby-Wiske, Yorkshire, to Phyllis Mary, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Samuelson, of Breckenbrough Hall, Thirsk.

TAMED THE OLD SOLDIER.

He Was Not "a Beggar," but Carmen Sylva Became One.

One day, walking in a hospital ward, the queen of Roumania came upon an old soldier suffering from a compound fracture of the leg and threatened with gangrene. He would not give consent to the surgeons to amputate. He feared that should he do so he would be classed among the beggars.

"I am not a beggar," said the stout old soldier proudly. "I'll lose my life, but not my honor."

"'Tis true," said Carmen Sylva, "you are not a beggar, but I am." She threw herself on her knees at the bedside. "I have never prayed but to God," and, taking his hand, she added: "But I now supplicate you to listen to his wish and mine. Let your leg be taken off and spare your life to your family, your country and to me, and"—

"And, if I consent, what then?"

"What then," she exclaimed joyfully. "Why, I shall give you the most beautiful artificial leg that can be made in Europe, and when the war is over, you shall come and dance at the palace with your sons."

"I consent," he said softly, "but you must hold my hand during the operation."—T. P.'s London Weekly.

"JUMP, JUDY, JUMP!"

Dancing In London In the Early Part of the Last Century.

Lady Bell, writing in the London Times regarding the modern dance, quotes extracts from "The Letter Bag of Lady Elizabeth Spencer Stanhope." The following passages are taken from a letter written in 1812:

"Lady Elizabeth gave a very successful ball, where, for the first time in London, the polka was danced in public and people stood upon the chairs and rout seats to watch it * * * Mr. Theodore Hook declared that 'the obnoxious dance was calculated to lead to the most licentious consequences. * * * Subsequently the Sporting Magazine * * * denounced the dance which, to the disgrace of sense and taste, has obtruded itself into the whole circle of the fashionable world, * * * a will corrupting dance, * * * a compound of immodest gesture and infectious poison.'"

On the other hand, I must also quote from the same work the admonition of an Irish lady of that period at a ball to her daughter, who was not displaying enough spirit in her dancing:

"Jump, Judy, jump! The guardsmen are looking on!"

Intellectual Humor.

The region of intellectual humor, which may be roughly illustrated by such sayings as that of George Sand that nothing is such a restorative as rhetoric or the claim advanced by a patriot that Shakespeare was undoubtedly a Scotchman on the ground that his talents would justify the supposition. The humor of George Sand's epigram depends upon the perception that rhetoric, which ought to be based upon a profound conviction, an overwhelming passion, an intense enthusiasm, is often little more than the abandonment of a personality to a mood of intoxicating ebullience, while the humor of the Shakespeare story lies in a sense of the way in which a national predilection will override all reasonable evidence.—A. C. Benson in "At Large."

The Scotch Invaders.

One of the most valiant defenders of the Scots parliament was Lord Belhaven, who delivered an eloquent oration in which a vision of Scotland undone by English invaders filled the bill. He saw poor Caledonia overrun by English traders, English attorneys, English judges—the whole nation, in fact, looking in vain for work because England had sent her aliens into every town to fill the fat places. The alarming speech produced a profound effect until Lord Marchmont suggested that Belhaven should add, "I awoke, and behold it was a dream!" And a dream it has proved, if we interpret dreams in the usual way, by contraries.—London Chronicle.

Getting Round It.

A young lady was critically examining a pair of shoes which the clerk had just fitted on. She carefully scrutinized first one foot, then the other. Finally she said slowly:

"Don't you think one of my feet is larger than the other?"

"No, indeed, madam!" replied the would be diplomatic clerk. "On the contrary, I think one is smaller than the other."—Lippincott's.

What the Trouble Was.

A man was fixing his automobile.

"Trouble?" asked a bystander.

"Some," was the laconic answer.

"What power car is it?"

"Forty horse," came the answer.

"What seems to be the matter with it?"

"Well, from the way she acts I should say that thirty-nine of the horses were dead."

Lost His Rudder.

"Dinkle says he doesn't know what to do with himself when his wife's out of town."

"I'm not surprised. However, he knows what to do with himself when she's in town, because she tells him."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Putting Them to Sleep.

She—Her husband puts the babies to sleep. He—That's easy. He was a prizefighter before he married her.—Town Topics.

One bad example spoils many good precepts.

The Whole Show.

When Rubinstein was traveling through the United States upon a concert tour it chanced that Barnum's circus followed exactly the same route chosen by the great Russian. On one occasion, when the train was filled with snake charmers, acrobats, clowns and the like, the guard, noticing perhaps Rubinstein's remarkable appearance, asked him, "Do you belong to the show?" Turning his leonine head with a savage shake, Rubinstein fiercely growled out, "Sir, I am the show!"

Classifying the Baby.

Anna, aged six, had been taught to look after her baby sister, aged two. One morning when the two children were at play a woman passed.

"Good morning," she said, smiling. "How are the ladies today?"

"Good morning," replied Anna.

The woman stooped over to get a better look at the baby, which was nearly as large as Anna herself.

"Well, I declare," observed the woman, "which is which?"

"I'm Anna," replied the six-year-old, "and that's which."—New York Post.

AMUSEMENTS

VOGEL'S MINISTRAL

John W. Vogel's handsome and spacious minstrel car "John Wesley" will arrive in this city next Sunday morning at 9.00 o'clock. It is said there is not another car in the world so constructed, roomy and comfortable in every respect, not an inch of space being wasted. Opening off the hallway, and so arranged that it may be thrown into a large room together with the observation end, are Manager Vogel's private state rooms. Aside from the Commingler steam heating equipment, the hot and cold water plumbing, the private wardrobe and the portable center table with toilet combined, is the handsome folding bed and combination dresser, which was at one time the property of the late Edwin Booth, the famous tragedian, and presented to Mr. Vogel by J. Monteith Jackson, the junior member of the firm of Jackson & Sharp, ship and car builders of Wilmington, Delaware. Next comes the grand saloon which is 21 feet in length and is used during the day by the members of the company as a parlor; and at night is converted into a sleeping compartment. This is fitted with easy chairs, cozy corners, cushions and all other comforts. Then comes the gent's lavatory with hot and cold running water, gun and fishing tackle racks and wardrobe lockers. The entire interior of the car is finished in cherry, mahogany and teek wood, is hand carved throughout, has beveled edge mirrors throughout and is a picture of comfort which is hard to realize by one who has never visited the minstrel man as he travels at the present time.

John W. Vogel's Big City Minstrels will appear at the Bradley Opera House next Monday night, August 11 and will present one of the most novel and pleasing entertainments ever offered the amusement loving public. The program is overflowing with rapid-fire fun and genuine surprises; pretty music and dazzling scenic and electrical effects form an important part of the entertainment. The entire mamonth program is everywhere presented in absolute perfection, never curtailed in any detail a fact that makes this organization still more successful each successive season. The management's motto has been, "Perfection Makes Perpetual Popularity.

A BIG HOLIDAY

Spark's World Famous Shows—Circus, Hippodrome and Menagerie—To be Here.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 23

All day Tuesday the busiest man in town was Mr. F. M. Heaton, Advance Agent of Spark's Worlds Famous Shows. He was like a will-o-the-wisp, now here, now there, making contracts and arranging for the coming of the great circus.

The grounds known as the Circus Grounds were leased from their owners and he was several times heard to make the complaint that the grounds were hardly large enough to accomodate the show properly.

The Sparks shows as they will appear here this year rank among the leading circuses of the country. It is claimed to have a solid train of twenty monster railway cars, almost four hundred people and over two hundred animals, both foreign and domestic.

The show employs over fifty people in the department of publicity alone and from now on until circus day the country for twenty miles around will be given a thorough billing and if the weather is at all favorable August 28 will have to entertain an immense throng on that day.

Freaks of Memory.

As to freaks of memory, Mark Twain has told us of the pilot who knew every bend, creek, current and shallow in the Mississippi river throughout its whole mighty length, but could not remember what he had had for breakfast. Probably most memories are like that. One man I know has a memory that apparently collects only figures. He can always remember your age, even if he forgets your name. He will memorize easily the times of all the trains to a given place, but he generally forgets the platforms from which they start. Reel off to him a column of statistics, and he will recite them again to you a month later without a mistake, having in the meantime forgotten everything else about you. But then he is a born mathematician. Evidently memory is largely a question of sympathy. We remember the things we are really interested in.—London Chronicle.

Tenderness of Tenors.

No principal singer could sing every night in one week. Star tenors seldom sing more than twice in one week, and at rehearsals they sing for the most part in a falsetto, says the Manchester Guardian.

It is said that the great Tamango used to take such care of his voice that he never even spoke during the day when he was singing at night. He carried on a conversation by means of a slate hung around his neck.

Some baritones, on the other hand, have been habitually careless about their voices, and Berlioz speaks of a splendid bass singer who tramped about the mountains in the snow all day with his throat exposed and sang magnificently the same night.

But in the wings at Covent Garden you may see Siegfried in shining armor with a woolen muffler round his throat.

Bismarck's "Mot."

As might be expected of a man of iron, Bismarck's wit was of the sledge hammer sort. In 1862, according to "Intimate Memoirs of Napoleon III.," by Baron d'Ambes, he went to Paris as Prussian ambassador.

"I have never heard a German speak French as you do," complimented the emperor on the occasion of their first meeting.

"Thanks, sire," returned Bismarck. "I have never heard a Frenchman speak French as you do."

The emperor spoke with a perceptible German accent.

EASY MONEY.

BY SAM JAY.

At large in Texas, July 28, 1913.

DEAR EDITOR:

A prosperous appearing man of forty summers, more or less, dropped off the Santa Fe train one fine May day (the word "fine" is superfluous; all days are fine) and after a few turns for observation through the principal business streets, remarked to one of our village Jaspers who was holding up a banana tree near the R. R. station:

"Good looking town. And the people are fairly dripping with prosperity. What's the main crop around here?"

"Homesuckers," replied Jasper with a wide grin.

"Oh, Oh, Delphine! You don't tell me!" chuckled the visitor with a still wider grin. "But," he continued, "speaking seriously now, isn't there some other crop that brings home the kale? Some sweet, luscious edible that grows close to the ground and makes the people wear that 'easy money' smile?"

"I get you now," said Jasper. "Strawberries, yes sir, strawberries is the first paying crop in the spring tra la. Then follows in rotation gardenias, cucumbers, canteloupes, watermelons, figs, oranges and 'homesuckers.' The first named crop is made possible and profitable by the latter, for, failing in their first attempt to pick up 'easy money' by growing oranges—the original bait which attracted them—they turn to the never failing strawberry."

"Does it pay out well?" asked the stranger.

"Does it pay out well? Huh!" Jasper snorted and gulped a few times before he could resume.

"Does one hundred and seventy thousand dollars ($170,000) worth of produce shipped in four months sound good to you? Does it? Who gets this coin? Why, you and I and the other fellow. Everybody gets a nibble at it. A new automobile is bought every week and we have one hundred and sixty-five licenses issued up to date. And as for silk socks, we eat—no, we don't eat 'em, but we buy 'em by the carload. See these streets all graded, curbed and shelled? And all those drainage canals and laterals put through last spring? Notice that large, commodious express building? Biggest express business of any town in Texas. And there's the most luxurious park landscaped grounds surrounding our magnificent station that you ever laid eyes on. Yes sir, strictly white population. Run the niggers back to the tall timbers some twelve years ago.

"Any of Paddy's eye water?" No, NO! No sir ee, Bob! Nothing doing in that line. Ain't even a 'blind pig' here and we have no use for a jail. When a person becomes obstreperous and looks on his playmates with jaundiced eyes and melancholy mien, we present him with a train schedule. If he lacks the wherewithal we give him a pair of shoes. No sob squads can flourish here. The only man who is allowed to be a facial contortionist is Jimmy, our town marshall, and he does that from force of habit having nothing more strenuous on hand. And there's—"

"But say!" interrupted the stranger. "What in Sam Hill do you do for excitement? How do you pass the time when you ain't working?"

"Oh," said Jasper. "We don't all work all the time. The Sons of Rest have a strong organization here and we joy-ride and look-see all around the country just to remind other towns that we are still on the map.

"When the people grow apathetic or peevish we issue a few bulletins or extra editions of our thriving newspapers showing tonnage and carlot shipments, bank statements and building statistics.

"Stick around for awhile, at least until the next north-bound train arrives and you'll see us load up three or four express cars with cantaloupes. And we'll have oranges this fall—slathers of 'em—Oh, I can't begin to tell—"

"You're puttin' it pretty strong, son," said the visitor. "If what you say is true—"

"What! You don't believe me! Another doubting Thomas!" shouted Jasper in a deprecatory tone. And then, seeking to impress and influence the stranger by his oratorical powers, he inflated his chest, extended his long arms and began to spout in much the same manner as a Shakespearian actorine: "Avaunt! Thou baleful breeder of pessimistic prattlings! Away with your melancholy mouthings and blatant barkings of hard times! Get thee hence to the tall and uncut sticks where there are no autos, strawberries or silk socks! Go back to the primitive and live in a cave! Follow the lines of least resistance instead of shouldering your way through the bunch and demanding your rights! Get the H—"

At this period of Jasper's peroration the stranger departed smiling to himself and, as he approached a lemon faced citizen, who happened to be Jimmy the marshal, spoke thusly.—"Who is that noisy little man standing under the banana?"

"That?" said Jimmy, "Oh, that's Jasper—J. Jasper—Jabbering Jasper. He's a permanent fixture here and we've PLANTED him right where he stands."

"Planted him? And what," asked the stranger with a sly smile, as if he expected to land a joke. "What do you expect to harvest?"

"Homesuckers," said Jimmy.

Their Expression.

Nothing is to me more distasteful than that entire complacency and satisfaction which beam in the countenances of a newly-married couple—in that of the lady particularly; it tells you that her lot is disposed of in this world; that you can have no hopes of her. It is true I have none, nor wishes either, perhaps; but this is one of those truths which ought, as I said before, to be taken for granted, not expressed.—Charles Lamb.

WM. P. STOCKING.

One by one they are passing away, the dear old friends of the long ago, and we who are left drop a tear and a flower, and waite for the call that hall summon us to join them in the great hereafter.

Wm. P. Stocking passed away at his home in Long Beach, California, Thursday July 31, 1913, after a brief illness being stricken with paralysis on the day before.

His funeral was held Saturday August 2nd. He was laid to rest in Sunside Cemetery.

Mr. Stocking was born in Tecumseh in 1840 and for many years made this his home and has never lost interest in the home of his birth.

For years he has kept in touch with his old friends through his letters to the Tecumseh Herald, which have been read with deep interest.

For the last twenty years he has made his home in California, where he revelled in its fruits and flowers and its lively scenery. His great wish was, that his friends might come and enjoy with him, but the fell destroyer has laid his hand upon him, and he is not, for God has taken him. Another name has been stricken from the roll, and a solitary woman in the sunset of life in the lonely home mourns over her great loss, for he was tender and true, and she leaned upon him for strength and guidance.

And now he sleeps where the roses bloom
And the birds chant their morning song
And the sun overhead dispels the gloom,
And the parting will not be long,
Till they meet again on the other shore
In the home of the loved and the blest
Where tears and parting come no more,
Where God giveth his loved ones rest.

Beginning Early.

"Yes, sir," said the proud young father, "that baby of ours is going to be a successful politician. He'll be a great vote getter before he's of age."

"Why, he can't talk yet!"

"No, but he has started right in, trying to kick and shake hands at the same time."—Washington Star.

Positively Uncanny.

"There's something very queer about that woman," said the clerk. "I don't know what to make of her."

"Why?" the floorwalker asked.

"She was satisfied with the first piece of goods I showed her."—Chicago Record-Herald.

His Long Suit.

Bacon—How long have we been married, dear?

Mrs. Bacon—Three years, love.

"Is that all? I thought I'd been wearing this suit longer than that, dear."—Yonkers Statesman.

Red Fire.

In making fireworks the substance used to produce red fire is strontium salts.

One Way to Have Lace.

Benjamin Franklin was a wit as well as a philosopher. His daughter once wrote him to send her from Paris some lace and feathers, which extravagance on her part, he says, "disgusted me as much as if you had put salt into my strawberries." And he adds:

"As you say you should have great pride in wearing anything I send and showing it as your father's taste, I must avoid the opportunity of doing that with either lace or feathers. If you wear your cambric ruffles as I do and take care not to mend the holes, they will come in time to be lace; and feathers, my dear girl, may be had in America from every cock's tail."

German Coffee Cake

Made Without Yeast

By Mrs. Janet McKenzie Hill, Editor of the Boston Cooking School Magazine.

There is no warm bread quite as appropriate for Sunday morning breakfast as German Coffee Cake, yet it is seldom made by housewives who do not bake their own bread. If K C double raise Baking Powder is used it will be just as good as if raised with yeast and it will have the further advantage of being fresh and warm. Save this recipe and try it next Sunday.

K C German Coffee Cake

Two and one-fourth cups sifted flour; 3 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder; 1 level teaspoonful salt; 2 tablespoonfuls melted butter; 2 tablespoonfuls sugar; 1 egg; milk.

Sift dry ingredients together, beat the egg, add milk and butter to the egg to make one and one-quarter cups; stir all together with inverted spoon to a stiff batter. Turn into biscuit pan and spread even. Brush top lightly with melted butter. Sprinkle sugar and ground cinnamon over the top. Bake in moderate oven.

Dutch Apple Cake or Prune Kuchen can be made with this same batter by covering the top with pared and sliced apples, or cooked prunes with the pits removed, skin sides down. Dredge with sugar and cinnamon the same as for Coffee Cake.

"The Cook's Book" contains 90 just such delicious recipes. You can secure a copy free by sending the colored certificate packed in 25-cent cans of K C Baking Powder to the Jaques Mfg. Co., Chicago, being sure to write your name and address plainly.

THE EAGLES

In Convention at Baltimore, Md.

A GREAT CROWD AND A FINE TIME REPORTED.

The convention of Eagles at Baltimore, Md., was a most notable meeting and one long to be remembered with pardonable pride by Eagles all over the country.

Over a thousand men and women were in attendance and rose with one accord and made the welkin ring when the Grand Worthy President of the Fraternal Order of Eagles read a message from President Woodrow Wilson. The message had been sent by relay over the 40 miles from the White House by eight runners, and, as the last one bounded on the stage, it was with a great shout that he announced the message that he bore:

Executive Mansion,
Washington, D. C., Aug 4, 1913.
Hon. Wm. J. Brennen, Grand Worthy President, F. O. E., Kernan Hotel, Baltimore. Md.

My heartfelt wishes for a successful meeting May your future efforts be crowned with unbounded success, such as is due to the noble work your great American order is doing for the men and women of our nation.

Kindly convey to your representatives felicitations, congratulations and best wishes Yours respectfully,
Woodrow Wilson.

The Mayor of the city in his welcome, expressed the feeling of the city for its guests. The city was in gala array and every one had welcome ready.

Many fine addresses were given among the speakers were Theodore A. Bell and Franklin K. Herring of Ind.

The Fraternal Order of Eagles is steadily increading in numbers and it is claimed that during the past year seventy-five thousands men, have pledged their sacred honor, "too add in so far as they are able to the sum of human happiness and to help men and woman to lead better lives."

Patriotism love of justice devotion to the truth, liberty and the banding together of all men in a common brotherhood seems to be the dominant note of the order.

THE CITY OF DETROIT WINS FROM THE D. U. R.

After a long fight the City of Detroit and the D. U. R. have come to a settlement.

President Hutchins sends in offer to the mayor and council Tuesday afternoon which gives the people seven tickets for 25c on all lines day and night.

Universal transfer R. R. Co. to do paving as now. Working men's tickets to continue as now.

Co. to pay its back taxes of $439,000 with interest and penalties as fixed by law to Aug. 15th together with $75,000 back rental on Fort St. line.

The company will build extentions as follows; west crossline, line connecting Myrtle and Mack St. Kercheose line and make necessary extension to new Michigan Central Terminal Station.

It is claimed that this will in no way interfere with municipal ownership of plans.

The City records the resolution which calls for $300.00 a day rental on expired lines.

This is considered a great victory for the city of Detroit and it is roughly estimated will save car riders $1,000,000 a year without any right given the company by the city.

GARDEN PARTY

Given for the Benefit of the Baptist Church.

ON THE LAWN OF R. S. MOORE.

The fifth annual Garden Party given for the benefit of the Baptist church on the lawn of R. S. Moore Tuesday evening was most successful and enjoyable.

Canvas was stretched across the front and around the side of the lawn making and enclosure. The canvas was decorated with the American flags and vines. Electric lights and Japanese lanterns were hung so as to give the garden plenty of light.

About 400 chairs were arranged across the front and around the sides of the house. The porch was used as a stage, was provided with plenty of light and beautifully decorated with lenterns, baskets of flowers and vines.

The large front window was removed so Mrs. Moore's new Grand piano could be used during the program.

On the East side of the house was an arch which made an entrance to the garden in the rear. The arch was statily trimmed with oak leaves and flowers

A delightful surprise greeted the eye on entering. Across the back was stretched a painted canvass representing mountain scenery, flowers and foliage being everywhere seen.

Tables were distributed about the garden where fine refreshments were served. There as in front electric lights and Japanese lanterns gave an abundance of light.

Mrs. Chas. Ruthruff was in charge of the refreshments. Much credit is due Lester Heesen for the beautiful decorations.

About 20 young ladies dressed in white trimmed with various colored crepe paper acted as ushers and served the refreshments.

Mrs Moore was in charge of the program which was given as printed in the last issue of the Herald.

The program was unusually good and met with the hearty approval of those present while encores were abundant.

The attendance numbered about 400, many coming from Adrian, the lakes and nearby towns. It is understood that the ladies cleared between $50.00 and $60.00.

BRADLEY REUNION

Quite a large party assembled at Putmans Grove Sand Lake on Wednesday Aug. 6 for the Bradley reunron and and a very fine timd was enjoyed by all. A picnic dinner was served and a business meeting for organizatin and election of officers followed.

The following are the officers for the coming year

President—Frank Bradley, Tecumseh

Vice President—Walter Wimple, Onsted

Sec.—Arthur Bradley, Tecumseh

Treas.—Ernest German, Onsted

Among the out of town guests were Mrs. Vern Roberts and her mother Mrs. Oscar Alexander of Chicago, Miss Mary Cochrane of Newport News Va. Wm. McNamara of Lansing, Mrs. Frank Osborn and datghter, Margeret of Columbus O., Clinton Tipton, Adrian and Onsted were fully represented.

Tecumseh gave her quote with the following Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Bradley Athur and Alice and others.

SURPRISE PARTY

Wednesday evening the pleasant home of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Daisher on west Chicago St. was the gathering place of about twenty five of the young people of the German Luthern church honoring one of their members Miss Helen Smith whose marriage to Alvin Brazee occurs next week The evening was passed in a verp social manner and the bride-elect was lovingly remembered with some fine table linen.

Refreshments were served during the evening by Mrs. Daisher. As the hour drew nigh for the guests to depart they one and all expressed their regret at losing their friend from their midst but grve their best wishes for her future happiness in her home with the man of her choice and though distance may separate yet the love and good willl of the company would be with them.

MORNING PARTY

Mrs. A. D. Lawrence was hostess to a number of yovng girlies Thursday to meet Miss Marion Cummins of Chicago who with her parents Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Cummins are spending a few days with relatives in town. The invitations were for 10 o'clock a. m. and the home was soon a scene of merriment and pleasure. A dainty luncheon was served and the hour of departure came all to soon.

LITTLE GIRLS HONORED

A merry party of 12 little girls met at the home of Dr. and Mrs. H. R. Conklin Wednesday afternoon honoring the Misses Gladys and Olive Martin of Kansas City Mo. The afternoon was very pleasantly spent with games and social chat.

Dainty refreshments were served and each one was sure they had the best time ever.

Fertilizer

It is time right now to think about fertilizer for fall crops. If you have ever used fertilizer of course you expect to use again, but if you have never tried fertilizer we advise you to start this year as it will surely increase your yield and produce more straw. Ask some one who has seen the benefit and then come and get a supply of "Union Brand" pure animal matter fertilizer of us. We are making some special prices on some kinds to reduce stock.

Clover Bunchers

We sell the American Clover Buncher, the kind that leaves the seed up in the best shape to cure and handle. We bought right and can make attractive prices.

DON'T EXPERIMENT

You Will Make No Mistake if You Follow This Tecumseh Citizens Advice.

Never neglect your kidneys.

If you have pain in the back, urinary disorders, dizziness and nervousness, it's time to act and no time to experiment. These are frequently symptoms of kidney trouble, and a remedy which is recommended for the kidneys should be taken in time.

Doan's Kidney Pills is a good remedy to use. No need to experiment. It has acted effectively in many cases, Tecumseh. Follow the advice of a Tecumseh citizen.

E. C. Brisbine, farmer, N. Democrat St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I began to suffer from kidney complaint twenty years ago and the medicine I took brought me only temporary relief. Often my back ached intensely and the secretions from my kidneys were irregular in passage and highly colored. Doan's Kidney Pills went to the seat of my trouble and did me so much good that I am seldom without a supply on hand." (Statement given December 5, 1913.)

A WILLING CONFIRMATION

When Mr. Brisbine was interviewed at a later date, he said: "You may continue to use my name as a reference for the merits of Doan's Kidney Pills. Whenever I feel in need of a kidney medicine, I take this preparation and effectively."

Mothers! Have Your Children Worms?

Are they feverish, restless, nervous, irritable, dizzy or constipated? Do they continually pick their nose or grind their teeth? Have they cramping pains, irregular and ravenous appetite? These are all signs of worms. Worms not only cause your child suffering, but stunt its mind and growth. Give "Kickapoo Worm Killer" at once. It kills and removes the worms improves your child's appetite, regulates stomach, liver and bowels. The symptoms disappear and your child is made happy and healthy, as nature intended. STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee ss.

In the matter of the Estate of ALFRED JAMES, Deceased.

The undersigned having been appointed by the Probate Court of said County, Commissioners to receive, examine and adjust all claims and demands of all persons against the estate of said deceased, do hereby give notice that we will meet for that purpose at the Tecumseh State Savings Bank in the village of Tecumseh, Lenawee County, Michigan, on the 2nd day of August 1913 and on the 17th day of January 1914, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of each of said days.

And that six months from the 17th day of July, 1913, are allowed by said Probate Court for the creditors of said estate to present their claims to us for examination and allowance.

Dated July 17th 1913

Joseph H. Smith
Sylvester P. Hosmer
Commissioners

STATE OF MICHIGAN, Probate Court for the County of Lenawee.

At a session of said court, held at the probate office, in the City of Adrian, in said county, on the 28th day of July, A. D. 1913.

Present: Hon. HARRY L. LARWILL, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of ADELINE TILTON, deceased.

ELDRIDGE H. HYDE, nephew and heir at law of deceased, having filed in said court his petition, praying that said court adjudicate and determine who were at the time of her death the legal heirs of said deceased and entitled to inherit the real estate of which said deceased died seized.

It is Ordered, that the 25th day of August, A. D. 1913 at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at said probate office, be and is hereby appointed for hearing said petition.

It is further Ordered that public notice thereof be given by publication of a copy of this order, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing, in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulated in said County.

MICHIGAN NEWS BRIEFS

Fire caused $18,000 damage in the village of Forest Grove. Seven houses were on fire and two were destroyed. Farmers saved the town by forming a bucket brigade.

The new city directory, now on the press, gives Albion a population of 8,300, approximately 2,500 more than was given in the 1910 census and 1,000 more than the recent postoffice census.

Ezra L. Ingersoll of Perry, Saturday sued the Consumers' Power Company at Owosso for $15,000 damages for injuries alleged to have been sustained when a limb of a tree which linemen were trimming fell on him as he passed beneath.

After many months of patient waiting, the Monroe public is finally able to get its mail in the new $60,000 postoffice. The building has been completed for some time, but for the failure of some of the furniture to arrive, the opening had to be postponed repeatedly.

Clay H. Hollister and R. D. Graham of the Michigan State Bankers' Association both approve the plan of Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo to deposit between $25,000,000 and $50,000,000 in southern and western banks, accepting commercial paper as security. Both bankers believe the plan is perfectly safe.

Mrs. Fred Paddock was thrown against a tree when an automobile in which she was riding ran off a steep embankment south of Jackson. She sustained a fractured leg and was removed to the hospital. Her husband stayed in the machine while it crashed through a fence and into a cornfield. He was uninjured.

The twenty-third annual reunion of the Calhoun Veteran battalion will be held in Battle Creek August 14. This is the first time in several years it has been transferred from Marshall, which is the headquarters of the battalion. Addresses will be made by Mayor John W. Bailey of Battle Creek, Congressman J. M. C. Smith and Col. C. H. Browning.

Charles Hodge, an ex-convict, shot Edward Merritt, a contractor of Jackson, in the saloon of Lou Schneider Saturday, in mistake for W. Hosinger, with whom he had a quarrel early in the afternoon. Hodges made his escape. The officers of the police and sheriff's office scoured the city and vicinity. Officers in surrounding villages were notified.

The Central Fruit Growers' association and the Battle Creek chamber of commerce have decided that there will be no dynamiting for rain this year, as there was last, as enough rain has fallen. It is the plan to make arrangements, however, to have farmers in the surrounding country subscribe money to buy dynamite to be used next year if necessary.

The twenty-eighth annual meeting of the State Holiness Camp Meeting Association closed at Eaton Rapids Sunday night with one of the largest attendances a final service has had in Eaton Rapids. Unfavorable weather, with rain early in the forenoon, kept some people away, but there were upward of 15,000 at the park through the greater portion of the day. The general attendance at the camp meeting this year has been greater than for a number of years.

It is reported that Hugh Chalmers of Detroit will be asked to assume charge of the automobile plant of the Michigan Buggy Company at Kalamazoo and place the affairs of that concern on a paying basis. Creditors declare the reason for the financial difficulties of the company lie in the high salaries drawn by several officers of the concern. Mr. Chalmers is in Kalamazoo and at a meeting to be held Wednesday it is possible that some decision will be reached whereby the 650 men turned off Friday will be replaced at work.

Louis F. Post of Washington, assistant secretary of labor, is in Grand Rapids investigating the Pere Marquette strike to get first hand information. Complaints have been made to Washington that locomotives unfit for service have been sent out. In company with U. S. Marshal Whelan, Mr. Post visited the Wyoming yards shops and met a committee of the strikers.

In the automobile he is alleged to have stolen, Jack Shriver was driven back to Grand Rapids Sunday, a prisoner. He was caught in South Bend, where it is claimed he attempted to sell the machine for a ridiculously low price.

"September Morn" has been banished from the show windows of several Flint art stores, following the issuing of an edict by the police. Complaint was made by a W. C. T. U. woman, who says she was severely shocked when she saw a cluster of highly colored prints in a store window.

Housework Drudgery!

Housework is drudgery for the weak woman. She brushes, dusts and scrubs, or is on her feet all day attending to the many details of the household, her back aching, her temples throbbing, nerves quivering under the stress of pain, possibly dizzy feelings. Sometimes rest in bed is not refreshing, because the poor tired nerves do not permit of refreshing sleep. The need of weak, nervous women is satisfied by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and as Mrs. Briggs and others testify:

It Makes Weak Women Strong and Sick Women Well.

This "Prescription" removes the cause of women's weaknesses, heals inflammation and ulceration. It tranquillizes the nerves, encourages the appetite and induces restful sleep.

MRS. BRIGGS.

Dr. Pierce is perfectly willing to let every one know what his "Favorite Prescription" contains, a complete list of ingredients on the bottle-wrapper. Do not let any druggist persuade you that his unknown composition is "just as good" in order that he may make a bigger profit.

MRS. BRAZIL BRIGGS, of 529 N. Washington St., Delphos, Ohio, writes: "Having taken your 'Favorite Prescription,' for a bad case of intestinal disease and constipation with woman's ills, for which I was almost unable to do anything, I think I am safe in saying that there are no remedies in the world like Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Purifying Lotion Tablets.' I am now enjoying the best of health, and thank Dr. Pierce for his wonderful medicines which have done me a world of good."

Borrowing a Match.

Weedon Grossmith in "From Studio to Stage" tells of his friend Heather Bigg, who annoyed him frequently by asking him for a match while angling during intensely cold weather. To supply the request meant pulling in his line, unfastening his mackintosh, then the overcoat and finally the undercoat. But, then, who can grudge so small a thing as a match?

The second day we fished it was positively colder. Heather Bigg's pipe had gone out as usual. "Weedon, got a match?"

It suddenly occurred to me he must have brought matches with him or how did he light his pipe, so I answered, "No."

"What a nuisance!" he replied and drew in his line, undid his mackintosh, then the overcoat and undercoat and at last took out a box of matches.

"Why," I said, "you've got your matches with you."

"Yes," he replied, "but I didn't want to catch cold getting them."

Ships That Kick.

Ask a sailor if his ship is a kicker, and he knows well what you mean, for it is about the first question he asks when he takes the helm.

Up there on the bridge in rough weather the man at the wheel has many a tough tussle if his ship, owing to her constructive lines or ballasting, is inclined to be skittish. Sometimes when rearing at the onslaught of a big roller the vessel may throw her heels in the air, the rudder swinging clear and her propeller racing.

The next moment, sinking into a watery hollow, the enormous side pressure causes a violent drag on the rudder chains. Then, unless stoutly held or secured by kicking straps, round whizzes the wheel. Many a seaman, unable to let go in time, has been thrown, bruised and battered, to the deck or, caught by the spokes, has even been tossed overboard into the boiling surf.—Pearson's Weekly.

The C. I. Backus & Co. bank at Potterville did not open Saturday and a committee is now going over the books. C. I. Backus of Chicago is president of the concern and Dewight Backus of Potterville treasurer. Dewight Backus says he did not open Saturday because he did not have any surplus cash, claiming that the withdrawal of several hundred dollars school money and the action of several of the depositors in withdrawing money for the purchase of automobiles reduced the surplus. He says that if he is given a few days he can straighten out the affairs of the concern. The depositors are not disposed to follow this plan, but if the committee finds the books all right, he will be permitted to open.

Her Strong Hint.

"Miss Plukle, how do you like my new hat?"

"I like it ever so much better, Mr. Staykins, when you are holding it in your hand."—Chicago Tribune.

The Yellow Sampan

Narrow Escape of an American Girl

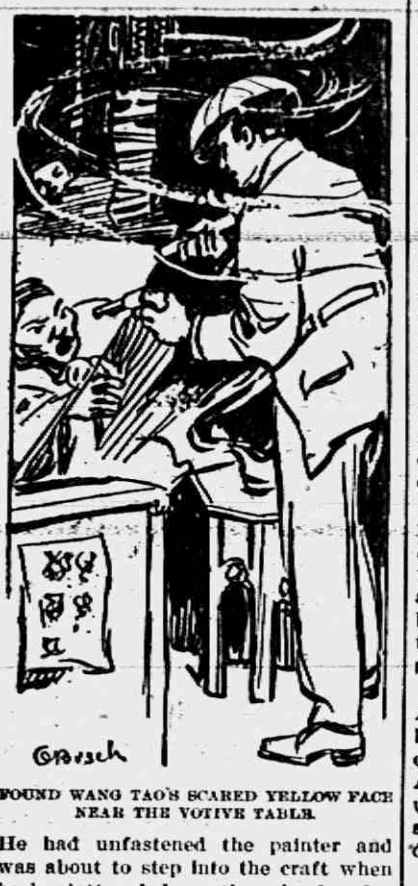
By CLARISSA MACKIE

It had been a hot day in Shanghai, and down at the end of the public wharf a faint breeze crept up from the mouth of the river. Harry Ames paused idly for a moment before entering his motorboat, bobbing lazily at the foot of the steps. He was watching the progress of a small yellow sampan hurriedly threading the maze of other water craft along the water front.

The brawny, amber skinned boatman poled the small covered craft dexterously in and out, closely shaving other sampans and leaving in his wake a staccato chorus of abusive shrieks at his recklessness. Soon it had passed beyond the crowded portion of the river and was headed upstream toward the ancient native city.

"I've seen that yellow skinned giant before, by Jove! He certainly resembled Wang Tao, Galbraith's runaway comprador! Mr. Galbraith said he had found a clew to his whereabouts and lost it again. Fancy a flat faced innocent like Wang Tao running off with 10,000 Mexican dollars! Some load!"

Harry Ames ran lightly down the steps and pulled the boat toward him.



FOUND WANG TAO'S SCARED YELLOW FACE NEAR THE VOTIVE TABLE.

He had unfastened the painter and was about to step into the craft when heels clattered down the wharf and a voice hailed him from above.

"I say, Ames, thank God you haven't gone!"

He looked up and saw the white, strained face of John Galbraith peering down at him.

"What is it? What is the matter, Mr. Galbraith?" he asked hastily.

In answer John Galbraith came panting down the steps. When he reached the foot he sat down and, removing his pith helmet, mopped his forehead with a silk handkerchief. His handsome old face was drawn with anxiety.

"Is it—has anything happened to Miss Rose?" demanded Harry quickly.

Galbraith nodded and held out a strip of red paper covered with Chinese ideographs.

"Can you translate that?" he asked grimly.

Ames slowly read the words aloud, his face growing ashen beneath the tan:

"When you cease pursuit of the worthy Wang Tao then the fair American devil will be restored to her parent."

"My God, Mr. Galbraith, do you mean to say that they have kidnaped Rose?" gasped Ames.

"It looks like it. She has been missing since tiffin. Chi Tung, our new comprador, last saw her driving down the road toward Speedwell's bungalow, but Van Ping, the house boy, declares she said I had sent for her to come down to this wharf to meet some friends on an American yacht just arrived. I found this letter on my desk in the office just now. And, I say, Ames, I can't find a soul who has seen her this afternoon on the wharf—and"—

"Wait a moment," interrupted Harry Ames. Then he briefly related the incident of the yellow sampan. "If that was Wang Tao, as I thought, there is no doubt Rose was concealed in that boat. The wharf has been almost deserted all afternoon, and Rose would not hesitate to enter a sampan because we all use them frequently, as you know. I will follow at once. The Lark can easily overtake that little tub. Will you come, sir?"

"Of course. Take these," and Mr. Galbraith entered the boat and tossed a couple of loaded revolvers into Ames' outstretched hands. "I've got mine safe," added the older man, grimly patting his pockets.

The yellow sampan had a good ten minutes' start of the motorboat and by this time, favored by the swift tide, might have effected a landing somewhere, although this procedure was doubtful. The fugitive Chinese would prefer to run a risk in gaining the water front of the native city, for within the maze of its crooked streets and alleys escape would be easy. Even if cumbered by a foreign woman no Asiatic hand would stop their flight. Public sentiment was against the foreign invasion.

Only a criminal, such as Wang Tao had proved himself to be, would dare to commit a second crime to conceal the first.

The two men in the launch were silent as the little craft sped upstream. Harry Ames' eyes were busy searching for a glimpse of the yellow sampan. His thoughts were chaotic. Only the week before he had asked Rose to marry him; she had consented, and Mr. Galbraith had refused to consider the question. Ames' minor position in the bank was not considered sufficient to support the beautiful daughter of the rich Galbraiths.

But John Galbraith had evidently forgotten that episode in his horror at the abduction of his daughter. Constantly he urged Harry Ames to make greater speed as the sun went down and left the river a dismal yellow path leading—whither?

"I'm getting every inch out of her, sir," reiterated Harry patiently. "There, there! I believe it is beyond there, at the third flight of steps! See, they are half carrying some one wrapped in a long cloak!"

He turned the Lark toward the stone steps leading down from one of the water gates of the native city. Even as he did so there came a shrill warning cry from a nearby boatman.

"Ay, yah!" he shrieked shrilly, and the men about the yellow sampan turned, saw and melted through the adjacent gate.

Two minutes later Harry Ames and his companion scrambled up the slimy stone steps and plunged through the gate just before it slammed in their faces.

The crooked street was empty, but away to the left came the sound of muffled foot beats on cobblestones.

"Follow me, sir," cried Harry Ames, his fingers clutched about a weapon and his elbows pressed close to his sides.

He turned to the right, entering a winding alley that sprang apart into three branching alleys. At the end of the middle alley a confused group of people melted out of sight.

"Here!" shouted Ames, dashing down the thoroughfare.

The alleys and streets were strangely deserted. It was as if all the denizens of the closely shuttered houses had withdrawn from the street to allow a free passage for the abductors to make their escape.

John Galbraith soon fell behind in the chase. He could only glimpse Ames' flying white clad figure as it darted around corners and up and down deserted streets.

Twice they had doubled on their tracks, and once Harry Ames had heard a muffled scream for help. It was growing dark now in the city, and the occasional paper lantern hung before a doorway served to accentuate the gloom of the badly paved, filthy streets.

All at once, panting and breathless, Ames stopped at a corner. He was baffled. He had lost track of his quarry. Where had they disappeared? A moment before he had been almost upon them, and now they had been swallowed up by some forbidding doorway.

He looked about for one large enough to receive them in a body and saw the latticed gate of a temple.

He waited an instant for Mr. Galbraith to join him, pointed at the temple, and together they assailed the gate. It fell in at their first touch, and they hastened up the wide stone steps, where filthy mendicant priests scurried away like scared rats at their approach.

Inside the temple there was a muffling darkness, with the suffocating smell of incense.

There was a great silence. Not a sound broke the stillness of the place.

"They are not here. It is too late," moaned Mr. Galbraith.

"Wait," said Ames tersely. He pulled an electric torch from his pocket, and its needle-like light searched hither and thither through the smoke shrouded atmosphere. He heard suppressed whispers, shrill chatterings nipped in their first utterance and once the beginning of that weird Chinese cry of intense excitement:

"Ay, yah!" But it was silenced, and there followed an ugly gurgling sound and a girl's faint, frightened cry.

"Courage, Rose; coming!" called Harry Ames, and he dashed toward the sounds.

"Careful, my boy," cautioned Mr. Galbraith's agonized voice from the rear.

But Harry Ames had but one thought. The torch flashed hither and thither until it sought and found Wang Tao's scared yellow face near the votive table. Beside him was another smaller man. The third one of the abductors lay dead across the floor. Rose Galbraith was nowhere to be seen.

In three seconds the thieving comprador and his companion had vanished.

"Rose!" called Harry Ames.

"Coming," said the girl's voice unsteadily, and from behind the great bronze idol there crept a pale, pathetic little figure that found refuge in Harry Ames' arms.

John Galbraith openly wiped his eyes.

"My—my dear, you can come and kiss me afterward, but this is a good place to say that I guess you belong to Harry here. He has certainly won you!"

Then somehow Rose found herself in the arms of her father and her lover.

"I can never think hardly of Wang Tao after this," she sobbed.

To admire, to love, to regret, is to live, said a great writer. Do not let the regret be brought on by a cough or cold, which if treated when it first appeared would have easily been controlled. Allen's Cough Balsam brings welcomed relief in such cases. Contains no harmful ingredients. 25c., 50c. and $1.00 bottles at all dealers.

PERRY DAVIS PAIN KILLER

Jim Vanroekel, a laborer, is in the Kalamazoo hospital suffering from severe injuries received in an elevator accident. He stepped aside to allow a woman to enter, the cage shot up and he was crushed.

A section man found the body of an unidentified man, about 35 years old, early Sunday morning on the Ypsilanti branch of the Lake Shore railroad near Hillsdale. It is thought he killed himself, as a large jackknife was found beside the body, and two wounds had been inflicted over the heart. His head was severed. It is thought he stabbed himself and fell across the track. There were no holes in his shirt, which bears out the point that he inflicted the wounds. There was no money in his clothes.

Ignoring the threat of striking Grand Rapids-Muskegon Power Company linemen that the lighting up of the boulevard system, just completed at Muskegon, would mean its soon being put out of order, strikebreakers quietly connected up the wires, and the current was thrown on. The installation of the boulevard lighting system in Muskegon's business district is but the beginning of a move to make Muskegon known as the "electric city" of Michigan, it being the plan to have all streets brilliantly illuminated.

T. Neu, who has already begun an inquest to determine the responsibility for the affair.

FIGHTS OVER DOG; LEG BROKE

Bloomington Man Injured When Boy Throws Stone

Bloomington, Ind., Aug. 11.—In a quarrel over a dog, Jefferson Goode, fourteen-year-old son of Fred Goode, a blacksmith hurled a stone at John Branam, a house mover, breaking Branam's right leg

Braham had lost his dog and found it near the Goode home. Policemen hauled Branam in a taxicab to a doctor's office.

LAW BREAKER GETS LIMIT

Muncie "Blind Tiger" Operator Fined $500 and Sentenced to Jail.

Muncie, Ind., Aug 11—Charles Benadum, a local wholesale liquor dealer was "handed the limit" of the "blind tiger" law by a jury in the Delaware circuit court, when he was fined $500 and sentenced to six months in jail on a charge of operating a "tiger."

During the trial of the Benadum case it was brought out that several more affidavits are likely to be filed by the state against druggists and wholesale liquor dealers

A charge of assault and battery with intent to kill, in that he was an accessory after the fact, was filed in the circuit court against Joseph Bowman, the local garage owner who hauled out of town the men who assaulted the "dry" detectives here a few days ago. It is contended by the state that Bowman was acquainted with the facts in the case at the time he took the men out of town.

SLIT SKIRT; NO STOCKINGS

Authorities Indorse Fashions and Counsel Women to Go Further.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 11.—Fashion, health and beauty hint for women: Don't wear stockings.

Medical science and jurisprudence, in the persons of Dr. W. P. Melody, city physician, and Judge Phelan of the recorder's court favor the stockingless woman.

"The transparent skirt is a blessing in disguise" said Doctor Melody. "It gives the air and sunshine an opportunity to better nourish the nether limbs."

"I don't believe in stockings," said Judge Phelan. "Women should also drop the corset. Both of these things are nonessential."

RABBI REMEMBERS GRANT

Only Person to Place Flowers on the General's Tomb.

New York, Aug [illegible] —The anniversary of the funeral of General Ulysses S. Grant, would probably have passed unnoticed had it not been for the act of Rabbi E. B. M. Browne, who was a pallbearer at the funeral, and who went alone to Grant's tomb on Riverside drive and placed a wreath on the great marble casket

Every year Rabbi Browne has come from his home in Boston on the anniversary day pay his respects to the memory of General Grant in this manner.

Neilsville, Wis, Aug. 11.—A well dressed man about twenty years old, entered the Chile State bank at Chile, Wis., ordered the cashier to hand over the money in the safe, and then calmly walked out with $1,400, the bank's receipts for the day.

Two large posses are searching the neighboring woods for the robber. Two suspects were arrested but later released.

CUTS THROAT AFTER TRYING TO KILL WIFE

Greencastle, Ind., Man Fires Barns and Is Shot.

Greencastle, Ind., Aug. 11.—After setting fire to the barns cribs and sheds of his father-in-law Aaron Hand, a prominent farmer living near Bainbridge, Otis Sandford broke into the house, attempted to cut his wife's throat was shot by her brother and beat over the head with a club by her sister, and finally attempted to cut his throat. Physicians in Greencastle say he will die.

Sandford and his wife separated some time ago and she lives in a house belonging to her father, a short distance from her father's home. About 1 o'clock at night she was awakened by the screams of her little boy. He told her that he had seen his father at the window. She screamed for help and her father and brother, armed with shotguns, ran to her assistance.

In about half an hour they discovered that their barn and other adjoining buildings were on fire. While they were fighting the fire, Sandford returned to the house and broke in. The screams of the women were heard by young Hand and he ran to the house. Sandford had caught his wife and it is said, was trying to cut her throat when Hand shot him.

Sandford stumbled outside. A younger sister of Mrs. Sandford attacked him with a club. Sandford staggered away and disappeared into a nearby cornfield.

By this time the whole neighborhood was aroused. A number of farmers soon appeared and began a search for Sandford. They found him with a large gash cut in his neck

GOTHAM FORTS WEAK

War Maneuvers Said to Show City Is Ill Protected

Newpot, R. I., Aug. 11.—Although the umpire awarded victory to the Narragansett bay forts in the efforts by a battleship squadron to enter Long Island sound, army and navy officials said the joint maneuvers throughout the week had demonstrated the inability of the forts to defend New York city from attack by that route. Captain W. S. Sims, commanding the torpedo flotilla, said the army officers agreed with the naval officers as to the weakness of the coast defense.

"The maneuvers," he added, "showed that destroyers could and did run through the race in the dark repeatedly without being seen by the forts."

200 TRAPPED IN PAVILION'S FALL

One Baby Is Killed and 100 Persons Are Injured.

TELEPHONE SERVICE CUT OFF

Worst Storm in Years Rages in East —Philadelphia Is Hit Hard—Damage Throughout City Will Exceed $1,000,000—Atlantic City Cut Off From the World.

Philadelphia, Aug. 11.—Two hundred persons were caught in the collapse of a band pavilion in Fairmont park at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, when the worst storm of many years struck this city. Rain, hail, lightning and a sixty-mile wind did great damage all over the city, but the worst accident was that at the park. One baby was killed and fifteen of the most severely injured are in hospitals near the park.

More than 100 of the injured managed to drag themselves to their homes. Only the fact that the pavilion was of light construction, without any real heavy joists, prevented a terrible catastrophe. The crowd had sought refuge from the rain inside the frail structure.

Sightseeing Auto Wrecked.

At the height of the storm a large sightseeing automobile carrying a crowd of picnickers was being pushed to its utmost to get the gay merrymakers under cover. The wind blew the flowing necktie of the driver into his face. He lost control for an instant and the big machine was thrown into a tree. Seven of the occupants were injured.

The entire length of Market street is laid waste. Large trees are stretched across th streets. In all parts of the city trolley service is either tied up absolutely or delayed for hours. Telephone and telegraph poles are down on all sides.

Large plate glass windows in the downtown stores were smashed like so much tissue paper. The wind tore the roof from the building of the Franklin Trust company's building, and the roofs of eleven houses were carried away bodily.

Worse in Outlying Districts.

Reports from the outlying districts show that the storm was even worse than Philadelphia. These reports are meager and are being obtained chiefly from passengers on belated trains. Early reports show that many of the magnificent homes in the suburbs and along the "main line" are wrecks. Many fine suburban greenhouses are reported to have been greatly damaged by the hail.

Atlantic City Is Cut Off.

Atlantic City up to a late hour was cut off absolutely from Philadelphia.

CIGARETTE SMOKERS FINED

Boys Caught in Mechanicsburg "Blind Tiger" Raid Pay $25 Each.

Newcastle, Ind., Aug. 11.—Truman Hendricks, charged with selling liquor to minors, pleaded guilty and was given a fine of $100 by Judge Jackson. Eugene VanWinkle, seventeen years old, and Herbert Cooper, eighteen years old pleaded guilty to smoking cigarettes and were fined $25 and costs each.

All were arrested when a "blind tiger" was raided at Mechanicsburg, near here. Seven arrests were made. The other four men will stand trial.

WILSON NAMED IN SUIT

President and 45 Governors Involved in Claim for Wages.

St. Louis, Aug. 11.—President Wilson and the governors of forty-five states are among those named as defendants in a suit for $200 filed by Roscoe C. Specking, a reporter in the circuit court.

Specking alleges that he was employed to report the convention of the Lakes-to-the-Gulf Deep Waterway association in Little Rock, Ark., last September, and was not paid for his services. The public men sued are connected with the association.

TWO CONVICTED FOR ARSON

Chicagoans, Members of "Trust," Fire Store, Heavily Insured.

Chicago Aug. 11.—W. A. Harris and Max Covitz were found guilty of arson here, making the second conviction of the alleged "arson trust" investigation

They were accused of entering into a conspiracy to set fire to their clothing store, the stock of which had been heavily insured.

Defeat Annexation by City.

Petersburg, Ind., Aug. 11.—In the annexation trial before the board of Pike county commissioners just ended, the remonstrators defeated the annexation by the city, with the exception of one tract of five acres in the West End. The proposed annexation included the suburbs of Toad Lope, Windy Hill and parts of Morgan's addition.

LIND OFF FOR MEXICO CITY

Crowds at Vera Cruz Show no Hostility to Envoy.

ENVOY MAINTAINS A SILENCE

Will Be Guided by Circumstances in War-Torn Republic and Don't Know How Long He Will Remain—Life in No anger—Accompanied by Wife.

Vera Cruz, Mex., Aug. 11.—John Lind, personal envoy of President Wilson to investigate conditions in Mexico left at 6 o'clock in the morning for Mexico City. He was accompanied by his wife. Neither the envoy nor Mrs. Lind showed an nervousness, despite the rumor that had reached here that Mr. Lind might be attacked on the train bearing him to the capital.

Envoy Lind Is Silent.

"There is absolutely nothing I can sa as to m actions and plans," he stated to a correspondent. "I shall be guided b circumstances. I cannot tell how long I shall stay."

The latter part of his statement indicated that he had been given wide latitud by Prsident Wilson and had been told to stay until he was absolutely sure of his facts as regards the situation.

Life in No Danger.

If the treatment accorded Mr. Lind in eVra Cruz may be taken as a forecast of that he will receive in Mexico City, the United States need have no concern over his personal safety. His sta hre was unmarked by any attitude of hatred on the part of the public, either at the United States consulate, where he conferred until late at night with Consul Caanada, or at the Hotel Terminal, where Mr. and Mrs. Lind passed the night.

There were few persons at the station when the couple took up the last stage of their journey.

"HAIRPIN" TURN WIPED OUT

Dangerous Point Done Away With on Elgin Road Race Course.

Elgin, Ill., Aug. 11.—The Elgin road race course has been shortened 469 feet. This information was learned when a certificate of measurement was delivered to Manager Fred W. Jencks of the road association by the city engineer.

According to the report, the total distance around the course is now eight miles and 2,030 feet. "Hairpin" turn has been cut off, and in its place is a corner easy to make at a high rate of speed.

The "hairpin" turn was considered dangerous by all the racing fraternity.

SUPPOSED BONES ARE FOUND

Chicago Hotel Chef Believed Guilty of Death of Wife.

Chicago, Aug. 11.—John Grady a hotel chef, was formally booked on the charge of murder while the police continued their search for traces of his common law wife who disappared twenty-eight months ago.

Search of the Grady home revealed portions of a woman's corset half charred, woman's supporters, eight hairpins, part of a woman's shoe heel and bits of supposed human bones.

Grace Connell the woman's grown daughter, has not been located, although it wasreported last night that she had been found.

ROADS TO FIND OWN VALUATION

Start on Most Studendous Job Ever Undertaken.

TO WORK WITH GOVERNMENT

United States to Expend $10,000 Listing $245,000 Miles of Rail Holdings in Ten Years—Many Positions to Be Given, but All Under Civil Service.

Chicago, Aug. 11.—Railroads of the entire country are preparing to take an inventory of the physical value of their properties. The task is one of the most stupendous ever undertaken by any industry in the world.

The work will be carried on in conjunction with the interstate comengineers will co-operate with a corps of experts to be selected for the work by the railroads The cost to the government of this gigantic accounting job, which involves estimating the value of 245,000 miles of railroad, probably will be between $10,000,000 and 15,000,000, and take at least ten years to complete.

Under Civil Service.

To carry on the work the interstate commerce commission will require a large additional clerical force in various parts of the country working under divsion chiefs. These positions will be under civil service. Already hundreds of applications have been filed and examinations will be announced soon.

Many of those seeking clerical positions are getting their applications indorsed by railroad officials. Many positions will be of a technical character, such as estimating the value of rails and road bed per mile, bridges, yard equipment, machinery, tools and other railroad appurtenances.

After the government has completed the valuation work, any road that has reason to believe its valuation too low, will have thirty days in which to file objections.

BARTLETT IS TO BE CONSUL

Kith of Mayor Harrison Expected to Be Assigned to St. Petersburg.

Washington, D. C., Aug 11.—Senator Lewis announced that Paul Bartlett of Chicago, who married Miss Owsley, the niece of Mayor Harrison, will be appointed to the consular service. It is expected he will be assigned to St. Petersburg Russia

As a result of a clash with the isthmian canal commission, L. D. Williams of Illinois, who has been auditor of the Panama railroad, has been removed.

The vacancy has been filled temporarily, but Senator Lewis has asked that an Illinois man be selected for the permanent appointment.

TO ANNUL WEDDING OF GIRL AUCTIONED

Authorities Find Turkish Girl Sold Is Under Age.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 11.—The marraige license department of the county clerk's office took steps to nullify an auction sale of a girl who was knocked down to the highest bidder to be his wife.

The girl is Marie Aman, a Syrian. Her father made the sale. There were a half dozen bidders. The girl has been in the country only seven weeks, and was brought here by her father expressly to be sold. A Turk, Mehammed Haj Seleem, was the successful bidder.

The bargain was sealed immediately by the reading of an Oriental marriage service. Later the Turk visited the county clerk's office and got a license for a civil marriage.

He gave the girl's age as nineteen. After he left the officials read about the auction sale. Marie's real age was fifteen, less than the legal age for wedlock.

Marie has a sweetheart, who could not bid high enough to win her.

It developed that selling Syrian girls to the highest bidders is a frequent happening here.

"BLUE SKY" WARNING IS OUT

New Law Will Take Effect August 15; Brokers Cautioned.

Lansing, Mich., Aug. 11.—August 15 the "blue-sky law" passed at the last session of the legislature will go into effect and the newly-created securities commission will pass upon all stocks and bonds offered for sale in this state.

However, State Treasurer Haarer, who is one of the members of the commission, says that neither the blue-sky law nor the securities commission afford the investor the same protection as a state bank. Nevertheless the attention of the treasury department has been called to a prospectus issued by one firm in which it is set forth that the company is supervised in the same manner as a state bank. Haarer says this is not true and firms sending out misleading literature after the new act takes effect will receive a warning from the commission.

ONE DROWNED, TWO SAVED

Mrs. C. W. Clement, Kalamazoo, Steps Into Deep Water.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Aug. 11.—Mrs. C. W. Clement, twenty-four years old, wife of the superintendent of the Bartlett Label company, was drowned in Gull lake.

Miss Nina Kitter, of Grand Rapids, was saved from death by Frank Knoblet, of Chicago, who was bathing with the two women.

Miss Grace Morgan, of Chicago, was saved from drowning in the lake by George Henry, another Chicago resorter, when she, like Mrs. Clement, waded out in water that was too deep for her.

The American Code

How It Was Adhered to In Italy

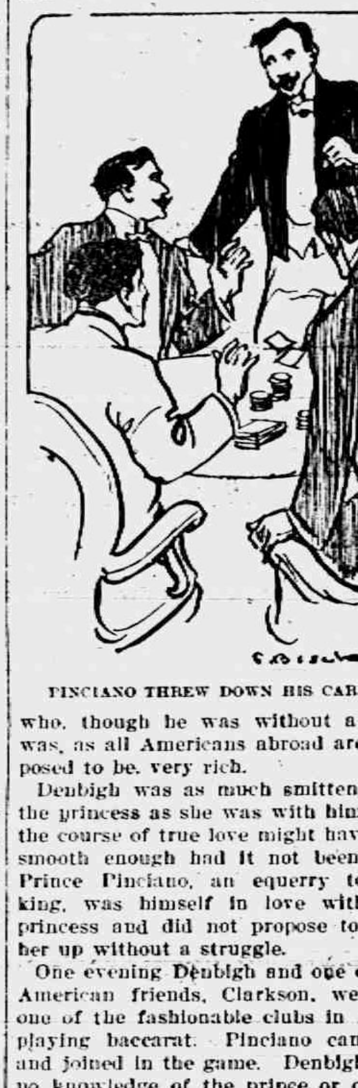
By THOMAS R. DEAN

In Europe, while the spirit of dueling has died out, the form remains, except in England, where the people have always been one or two centuries ahead of those on the continent. Every now and again some Englishman or American in France or Germany or Italy finds himself up against a system with which he has no sympathy and for which in America no preparation is required.

The American has an advantage in getting out of such affairs without discredit in his inexhaustible assurance and resource. Some years ago a party of Americans got together at the principal hotel in Rome on the Esquiline hill, making each other's acquaintance easily, as Americans abroad do, visiting the sights together or at least meeting together at dinner after having done so during the day. There were both men and women among them, mostly young and full of life and spirits.

One of the men, Ernest Denbigh, who owned a ranch in New Mexico, had brought letters to the American minister, and that functionary, having taken a fancy to him, presented him at court and procured invitations for him in society. Since there was nothing mean about a man who had spent several years of his life in the wild and woolly west of America, he helped such members of the party he had fallen in with as desired to see Roman society.

At a ball at the Quirinal palace Denbigh was introduced to the Princess Asconti, a beautiful girl, who fell desperately in love with him. Moreover, the young lady, being one of the poorer members of the Italian nobility, was not averse to wedding an American who, though he was without a title, was, as all Americans abroad are supposed to be, very rich.



PINCIANO THREW DOWN HIS CARDS.

Denbigh was as much smitten with the princess as she was with him, and the course of true love might have run smooth enough had it not been that Prince Pinciano, an equerry to the king, was himself in love with the princess and did not propose to give her up without a struggle.

One evening Denbigh and one of his American friends, Clarkson, were at one of the fashionable clubs in Rome playing baccarat. Pinciano came in and joined in the game. Denbigh had no knowledge of the prince or of his pretensions to the hand of the Princess Asconti. He was therefore greatly surprised when Pinciano threw down his cards and, pointing to Denbigh, declared that he would play no more with that lowborn American, who made money by cheating, and, rising, left the room.

Denbigh at once called for an investigation, but a member of the club took him aside and told him that the charge was well understood to be a mere pretext to keep the name of a lady from being connected with a duel which was inevitable between himself and his accuser. On being assured that he would not suffer any stigma from the charge itself he withdrew his request. But he was given to understand that if he did not challenge Pinciano he would be obliged to give up the social position he occupied and would be cut by his Roman acquaintances.

Denbigh and Clarkson immediately left the club and, going to the hotel, called a conclave of the young men of the party. Two of them had not gone to bed. The other, who had done so, was awakened by the party entering his room and turning on the lights.

Clarkson before leaving the club had been told that Pinciano was experienced both with the foils and the pistol. Denbigh had no skill with the foils, but had while on his ranch practiced the quick shooting in vogue in western America. The question was, Should he claim his privilege as an American of declining what was virtually a challenge, or, if he must fight, how do so without being at a disadvantage? After some debate, in which the principal took no part and which resulted in his being advised to stand on his dignity rather than yield to a custom handed down from the middle ages, Denbigh said:

"Clarkson, I wish you would go back to the club, find the man with whom Pinciano has left his case and say to him that if he thinks to force me into a position all to his advantage he is much mistaken. I am not an Italian used to Italian methods, but an American used to American methods. His charge is generally understood to be a pretext. Technically, if I fight him, I must challenge him. I will not fight him unless he will consent to consider his action at the club this evening not an insult, but a challenge. If he agrees to this you are authorized to accept the challenge, and, since this gives me the choice of weapons, you may arrange the affair in this way:

"At 4 o'clock in the morning I will start from this hotel, walk down the Via Cavour to the main thoroughfare leading to the Pincian gardens and, turning into it, walk toward them. The prince is to leave the gardens at the same time and walk in this direction. When we meet either may open fire at will with revolvers. Either may take to a side street or any article of defense he may find handy."

It was generally agreed among the consulting party that if Denbigh really meant to fight this was the best position that could be suggested. Clarkson went to the club, where he found Captain Carlucci ready to receive any communication he might have from Denbigh. When Clarkson delivered his message the captain looked surprised.

"But we do not fight that way here in Italy," he protested, "nor is it done anywhere in Europe."

"And we do not fight your way in America. It is your principal that desires to fight mine, not mine yours, and since the prince desires a meeting he must consent to the methods used in the only part of America where quarrels are settled by arms, and every day such cases are becoming more rare as civilization spreads over a country that has been gradually passing from savages to white men."

The captain said that he would submit the proposition to his principal and withdrew for that purpose. Clarkson lighted a cigarette and looked over periodicals for some time, during which he was thinking what would be the effect of a proposition so entirely at variance with the European code duello. Presently a member of the club came to him and said that the prince had referred the message to a committee for its decision as to what reply he should send to Denbigh. The committee had sent Clarkson's informant to him to protest against any such custom being engrafted upon the Italian code and would be pleased if Signor Denbigh would fight according to the code if the prince were considered the challenger, the challenged man choosing the foils or the pistol, according to accepted rules.

Clarkson took the responsibility upon himself of replying to this for his principal in the negative. Denbigh would fight, if he must fight, under protest, since there was no just cause for a quarrel between him and the prince. But if forced to fight he would only do so in accordance with the custom of his own country. Having delivered himself of this reply, Clarkson lighted another cigarette, took up a newspaper, and the messenger went back to the committee with the message.

There is a proper sense of courtesy to visitors in all countries. The committee recognized that it occupied a delicate position. An American gentleman had visited Rome, been introduced to society by the representative of his government and had become popular. A Roman lady had accepted his attentions. A rival, an Italian of high rank, had sought to eliminate him from the lady's circle, first, by an accusation which was untrue and, second, by forcing him to fight under the Italian code, which had no standing in America. While the committee recognized that a pretext was necessary in a case where a lady was involved, the whole matter appeared to it as an inhospitable act to a visitor to Italy.

Its decision was that if Prince Pinciano insisted on the meeting he must accept Denbigh's terms. But it recommended that under the circumstances the Italian make a statement that he had been mistaken in accusing Denbigh of having cheated at cards and apologize for having made the charge.

The first information Clarkson had of all this was when a door was opened and the prince's friend, Captain Carlucci, entered, bearing a written statement and apology from his principal to Denbigh. Clarkson concealed his delight. He folded the paper, put it in his pocket, bowed formally to the captain and leisurely left the club. But as soon as he reached the sidewalk he called a cab and, putting 5 lira in advance into the driver's hand, told him to drive in a hurry to the hotel. Though it was now 2 o'clock in the morning, the party were awaiting him.

"An apology!" he explained, throwing the paper he had brought at Denbigh.

"Read it aloud!" cried every man present.

Denbigh read the apology, and after a celebration in honor of the event the party went to bed.

The next day the episode was the talk of Rome, but very few knew that a lady had been the cause. The princess soon heard of it and was told that Pinciano had sought to clear the field of a preferred suitor for her hand. When she met him at a ball in the evening she ignored him.

However, there was no match between her and Denbigh, for her family objected to her going to America, and Denbigh would not consent to become an Italian.

The Boer Umbrella.

Umbrellas for some inscrutable reason, for the seasons in South Africa are not so changeable as ours, are much used by the Boers. In common with our own views, the Boer believed that an umbrella gave a man an air of distinction, though the shocking specimens they carried, which reminded one very much of Sairey Gamp, would not have been calculated to possess this attribute among our own countrymen. Where these umbrellas came from is one of the many unknown facts of the old time republic. They were big and bulky, as a rule of alpaca, and the catch was generally out of order, but they were always to be found in the guest room when the "old man" was at home and always accompanied him in the spider when he journeyed into town on Saturday. They were rarely opened in public, because if the weather was wet the Boer stayed at home. An umbrella is not considered necessary on horseback, as a rule, but the Boer carried it there just the same as he did when driving in his spider and often used it as a whip to urge his steers on.—Outfitter.

Rapid Voice Culture.

"Teaching the voice is a difficult task," said a great singer. "It is a fine thing to be a good teacher. Some pupils are so very stupid!

"You can no more hurry a voice than you can hurry a flower, but most pupils want to become star singers in a month or two.

"A lady said to one of my friends, a superb teacher:

"'I'm going abroad next month, and I want twenty-five lessons in voice culture before I sail.'

"'Impossible,' said the teacher.

"'Why impossible?' said the lady. 'I could take two lessons a day, some days.'

"'Or, better still,' said my friend sarcastically, 'you could take the whole twenty-five lessons all at once, one after the other. A day would do it, then.'

"'Splendid!' cried the lady. 'Shall we make it tomorrow?'" Exchange.

MINERS RETURNING TO WORK

Operators Claim They Have Routed the Western Federation of Miners.

Calumet, Mich., Aug. 11.—Copper mine operators claim the complete rout of the Western Federation of Miners in its strike here for higher wages, an eight hour day, abolishment of the one man drill, and recognition of the union.

Over 2,000 men are at work. No demands for changes in working conditions were made by the men returning but it is said from high authority that mining companies will raise the wage scale and probably give the men the eight hour day.

SAYS EX-WIFE SHOT SELF

Man Held for Attempted Murder Says She Meant to Kill Him.

LaCrosse Wis., Aug. 11.—Arraigned in county court on a technical charge preliminary to holding him for attempted murder, or murder, should his former wife die, Henry M. Gilles pleaded not guilty, asserted that the woman shot herself and declared his belief that she came to his rooms for the purpose of killing him and then committing suicide.

Gilles, who had been divorced three years, was about to remarry, and he asserted that this furnished a motive for his former wife's act.

LUXURY OF A TROPIC SEA.

Bathing In January With the Water at 90 Degrees.

Those who live in temperate and cold climates do not realize the effect of the sun's direct heat on the sea. The luxury of bathing in an ocean that has a temperature of 108 degrees, writes Mr. E. J. Banfield in "My Tropic Isle," is not for the multitude who crowd the cities that the sun touches tremulously and aslant.

On Nov. 21, 1909, we bathed at Moo Jee, north Queensland, in shallow water, on the edge of an area of denuded coral reef fully two miles long by a mile broad. For three hours a considerable portion of the reef had been exposed to the glare of the sun, and the incoming tide filched the stored up heat from coral and stones and sand.

The first plunge provoked an exclamation of amazement, for the water was several degrees hotter than the air, and it was the hottest hour—3 o'clock in the afternoon—of a very hot day. No thermometer was at hand to register the actual temperature of the water, but subsequent tests at the same spot under similar conditions proved that the surface stratum of about one foot was at 108 degrees F., from four to six degrees hotter than the air. Below that the temperature of the water seemed ordinary and corresponded with that of the water a hundred yards from the shore.

On another day, Jan. 10, 1910, between noon and 3 o'clock in the afternoon, the sea, scientifically tested, was found heated to 90 degrees. With the bulb buried in the sand six feet from the water's edge, the mercury rose to 112 degrees very quickly and remained stationary.

Sweet Corn.

Sweet corn, classified by botanists as Zea saccharata, is a variation of Zea mays, which is regarded as a monotypic genus. It first came into cultivation in the region about Plymouth, Mass., in 1779, being received from the Indians of the Susquehanna. Whether some Indian Burbank originated it or whether it was the result of careful selection by copper colored cultivators is now unknown. Prior to 1854 only two varieties of sweet corn were known, but in 1899 sixty-one distinct sorts were listed. We do not know when sweet corn was introduced to Europe. Field corn was introduced in 1562. Sweet corn has been attracting some attention in Great Britain for several years, but is not yet generally grown. William Cobbett, the politician and writer, who died in 1835, tried to popularize the culture of field corn and grew it for some years at his farm in Surrey.—Rural New Yorker.

EASY MONEY.

BY SAM JAY.

(CONCLUDED.)

There's always two sides to a story and now "my brudders, let us take sweet counsel togedder." Jasper's boastings may be true in a measure—if we measure it upright, adding a little salt and sense—but the man who gets down close to the soil can usually deliver the most interesting testimony.

Here's Henry A——, a German-American from Wisconsin, who came down when the orange boom was at the crest in 1910.

He says: "I come down to make it a easy living raising oranges. I see them growing, flowers blooming, weather warm and I go crazy. I go up in a balloon. I pay forty acres of land, plant thirty acres in oranges and freeze up the next January. I lose four tousand tollars, efery cent I got und I say: 'To H— mit Texas'!"

But Henry is still here. Some good Samaritan grubstaked him and he is now making a living from staple crops instead of luxuries, realizing when too late, that he put too many eggs in one basket.

But the siren song of the orange, mild climate and soft breezes, of life in a semi-tropical land, is the most alluring bait ever dangled before the vision of a hard working man. His goat is captured and the purse strings are loosened.

"Easy living and easy money!" says the gab gifted gentleman who displays pictures of land and crops yield ing $500 to $1000 per acre.

"Easy pickings!" whispers the former land owner as he disposes of his ranch which cost him little or nothing.

"Velvet!" sings the company which sells tracts at from ten to a hundred times the initial cost.

"Hell's Fire!" yells the "homesucker" when he wakes up and discovers his ignorance of climate, soil and special crops: when he finds that he has to study and work with brains and brawn fully as hard as in his Northern home. He is amazed to see weeds growing as large as shade trees and chagrined at the thoughts of the endless amount of plowing, disking, harrowing and hoeing that is necessary to control those weeds and bring crops to maturity. And along "in the Good Old Summer-time" when the sun is almost directly overhead the hookworm—the lazy bug—gets in its work and he retires to the welcome shade of a huge surprise weed to indulge in some tall soliloquy:

"Huh! Oranges and homesuckers! Fiddlesticks and damnation! What'd I ever come down here for? God-forsaken country, that's what 'tis. Full of fools, crooks, mules and hard work. I'm a-getting so that I hate everybody and everything. Wish I had a drink now to brace me. The climate's too hot, the pesky weeds grow too fast, the mules are ornery, the people are selfish and stubborn, the food and water don't agree with me, the mosquitoes have lances like crowbars and I'm going back."

And he does go back in more ways than one, acknowledging his defeat and humiliation, his lack of gumption and grit and misunderstanding of the natural law of compensation. The projection of heated atmosphere in well directed shots may sell land and other commodities but it takes good honest toil to raise crops and market them profitably, to build highways and to acquire that peaceful poise of body and mind called contentment.

Regarding the fabulous sums to be made from small areas or acreage of fruits and vegetables, I know it has been done and can be accomplished again under certain conditions of climate, soil and water but those extraordinary conditions cannot be made to order every season.

Those exceptional instances of bumper crops are quoted and misquoted by those who have axes to grind as being the common every season occurrence which is far from the truth but it catches the "homesucker's goat" just the same.

Much more could be accomplished by all of us human bipeds if we could forget those dreams of "easy money" and follow the olden time injunctions regarding industry and frugality, but we don't and we won't. We are chasing phantoms, building castles and finding gold mines and apparently take great delight in being harpooned.

Getting back at our tormentors is another game that we seem to enjoy. The fact is that there is no modern Utopia or land of milk and honey and, as the late and much esteemed editor of The Herald once said: "Much depends upon the individual as to whether they will find success and happiness."

It is not my intention or ambition to make sparkling preachments or to boost any particular section, but I want to say a few words about this little town of Alvin and few miles of surrounding territory which is especially favored in having fertile soil and a thickly settled population of energetic Anglo-Saxons who are continually striving for better things.

In addition to the specializing of fruits and flowers, such as oranges, strawberries, figs, gardenias and daisies, there are hundreds of general farms, cattle ranges, poultry yards and truck farms contributing to the general prosperity of the community. And the town itself is quite modern and up-to-date compared with some other Texas burgs where the inhabitants vegitate during the day and go to roost with the chickens and dicky-birds.

It is a fact that we have 165 autos in this township and you've heard about the silk socks. And as I write this in full view of thousands of young orange trees loaded with growing, russet-brown fruit, a hundred mocking birds pilfering grapes from the arbor, I can glance in another direction and see rows upon rows of roses, hibiscus, jessamine, arborvitaes, cannas, palms, bananas and a thousand varieties of shrubs, plants and vines in endless profusion and confusion. Still farther away, across the willow fringed bayou and beyond patches of "black-eyed Susans" and other wild flowers, are small groves of chinaberry, poplar, silver maple and cottonwood all aglow and adazzle with color in the declining sunshine. The sun retired beneath a curtain of glorious and perfectly blended colors—an indescribable Texas sunset—while the gentle zephyrs from the Gulf whisper and murmur sweet, soothing lullabys.

Surely this is preferable to hot, crowded cities with stuffy houses, uncongenial people and poisonous foods—saying nothing about drinks; better than factories or stores, however sanitary they may be, and there are no speedometers or comptometers checking up our motion mileage or overhead expense. "Easy money?" No, but we can live as we should live, not planning gastronomical orgies or financial coups but with senses attuned to the everlasting beauties of Nature and the wise whisperings of Conscience.

"Easy money?" Here's one answer that is found in the school books of Ireland: A teacher commands her favorite pupil, Johnny Jumpup:

"Johnny, spell and define 'easy money.'"

Johnny jumps up and spells, "I-n-d-u-s-t-r-y. Industry. The definition is constant diligence or application and THAT MEANS 'EASY MONEY.'"

"Correct," says the wise teacher.

Sincerely yours,
SAM JAY.

TOLEDO'S MAYOR MAY BE APPOINTED TO THE DIPLOMATIC POST

Brand Whitlock

Washington, August, 10.—Brand Whitlock, the literary mayor of Toledo, O., is slated for an important diplomatic post. It is probable that he will be sent either as ambassador to Russia or as minister to Turkey. While Mr. Whitlock does not have the backing of the solid Ohio congressional delegation, as he has always been an independent in politics, he is a close personal friend of the president, and with the later's influence will have no difficulty in gaining congressional indorsement. Detroit News Tribune.

CAPT. WESLEYS SEALS,

This marvelous animal act is one of the features of the Sparks Circus which is billed to exhibit here Saturday August 23, and the following is the criticism of the New York Morning Telegraph of Saturday, Nov 23rd 1912, at which time these wonderful animals were playing an extended engagement at all the largest New York City Vaudeville Theatres.

"The current week the electric lights in front of the American Music Hall blazoned forth "Capt. Wesley's Seal's" and they deserved every killowatt used to flash it. What impresses one most after seeing the wonderful exhibition given by the seals is the extraordinary patience which must have been utilized by Capt. Wesley to train the seals. Training horses dogs and monkeys is esily understandable, but to take a quintet of sea lions performing out of the water, their natural habitat, and to put them through a course of stunts, is almost unbelievable, and for once that hackneyed phrase, "must be seen to be appreciated" is apropos. One of the seals get many laughs by his trick of applauding each stunt by the other seals. He does this by means of his flappers on the sides of the stand from which he works. Capt. Wesley is a young chap of likable personality, and there is a cleanliness and neatness to the entire act and a great favorite with the ladies and children."

Preparation for Knowledge.

No man can learn what he has not preparation for learning, however near to his eyes is the subject. A chemist may tell his most precious secrets to a carpenter, and he shall be never the wiser—the secrets he would not utter to a chemist for an estate. * * * Our eyes are holden that we can not see things that stare us in the face until the hour arrives when the mind is ripened; then we behold them, and the time when we saw them not is like a dream.—Emerson.

A WORD IN SEASON

Hastings taxpayers who were adverse to building a new schoolhouse have found a reason why they should always attend annual school meetings. This year by a vote of 7 to 6 it was decided to build a $75,000 high school building. This tax will have to be spread and collected in one year. The taxpayers had voted down a bonding proposition several times but the action taken at the annual meeting will hold.

It's said that heaven is ruled by justice
Where no one ever sheds a tear;
If that is true then we've been perverts
Down to this nineteen hundredth year;
Since Christ was born to come among us
And teach us never to have fear,
Of using heaven for a model
In the establishing of justice here.
Where e're we look we see injustice
Stalking round so proud and brave
That it seems that Christ and all his teaching
Never rose up from the grave.
We go to church and prate of justice
And pray like other men have done,
Never think of the earthly brother,
But always of the Spiritual one.
Christ gave up his life to save us
Between two thieves on Calvery,
Said he to one who had repented,
"You'll be in Paradise with me."
O, Father in Heaven, do forgive them
For they know not what they do,
The Son of Man they're crucifying
At behest of priest and mammon's crew.
We pretend to be so Christlike,
While on mammon's neck we fall,
And say we'll take your tainted shekels
This church is broad enough for all.
We pretend to follow Christ and martyrs
Who died to set the whole world free,
But very few have moral courage
To bear the Cross of Calvery.

Michael Eckhart.

May Be Something in Dreams.

Belief in the prophetic power of dreams has run ring around a rosy. Men formerly thought dreams foretold future events, dreams gave good advice for the regulation of one's future conduct, dreams told where to find lost articles. Then as we grew more sophisticated we regarded dream omens as mere superstition. Lately some of the closest investigators of dreams have begun to switch to the former opinion.

Varied Weights in Use.

Gems, the most precious of earth's productions, have been weighed from time immemorial with uncertain and varying weights. The first gem weights of which we have records were seeds of uniform size from the fruit of the Kuara or coral tree and from the fruit of the carob or locust tree, which were used in Africa for weighing gold and later in the east for weighing diamonds.

"A Child and a Fool imagine twenty shillings and twenty years can never be spent"

The Power behind the dough

You may use an old favorite recipe and the best of materials and make it carefully, the oven may be just right, yet you will have a failure if "The Power behind the Dough" is not the right one to leaven it properly and make it light, digestible, wholesome.

Good baking without good baking powder is out of the question. K C Baking Powder has wonderful leavening power, and the double action —in the bowl and in the oven—makes good results doubly certain.

Take no chances of failure—use K C and have "good luck" every time. At all Grocers.

BOOST TECUMSEH

In nearly every paper we take up. we read how some town is trying to better its conditions, some by sports days, by business mens picnics by moving pictures, by every laudible means that may be employed to call attention to the fact that the town is still on the map and means to keep its place, and this is right. Let every man be a booster for his own town, and co-operate with the man who has the nerve to start a new enterprise for the good of his town. Be a Booster. Every man who helps in this matter is helping himself for what ever helps to advance works for the good of everyone in the town. Boost Tecumseh.

GRANGE AND FARMERS PICNIC

The Grange and Farmers Union picnic was held Saturday in Minor Davisons grove east of town.

There were 150 present and every one seemed to enter into the spirit of good fellowship on this occasion. Various games and stunts were indulged in. A baseball game between the Grangers and Farmers resulted in a score of 10 to 7 in favor of the Grangers.

Pitching quoits called forth some lively work, as did the three legged races, those winning in the boys races were Leon Van Valkenburg and Harry Waldron, in the girls race Hazel Hall and Gertrude Baker.

The relay races were quite interesting 1st relay won by Leon VanValkenburg and Gertrude Baker, 2nd Leon and Clara Bancroft, 3rd Leon Van Valkenburg and Gertrude Baker. In the straight races by the girls Hazel Hall was 1st and Gertrude Baker 2nd. A ball throwing contest was very exciting.

The most special feature of the day however was when the call was given to fall in line for the feast of good things, and if the saying is true that "the way to a man's heart is through his stomach," then the ladies must have reaped quite a harvest of hearts, for the good things that were spread before them would appeal to the most fastidious.

NEW ELEVATOR AND FEED MILL.

A new elevator and feed mill is being erected on a site purchased about a year ago by D. Gratz & Son located a block west of the Tecumseh Junction station and facing the D. T. & M. tracks.

The old D. T. & I. office building purchased by Gratz & Son is being remodeled and fitted for the firms use. Connecting this building on the west is being erected a large three story elevator. When completed the firm will have one of the finest elevators and feed mills in this part of the country. Later on, power may be furnished by electricity generated from water power at the Old Raisin mill.

The firm will do a general business, will buy and sell all kinds of grain and will handle cement and rubberoid roofing. A cereal mill will be installed with a capacity of five tons per hour, grinding buckwheat, corn and other cereals and a new cleaner which will take care of 2200 bushels an hour.

Docks will be constructed for the use of farmers and along the railway siding so a car can be loaded or unloaded with ease. When the mill is in running order over a carload of grain can be unloaded in an hour.

Grain dumps will be provided so farmers can dump their wagon loads. In fact Gratz & Son are putting in every convenience to make the plant up-to date and when completed will represent an investment in buildings of about $7500.00 The building will be provided with galvanized iron roofing and siding.

The firm plan to add to this plant in the near future a flour mill, thus giving them a complete equipment.

This plant will be a valuable addition to Tecumseh and they have the best wishes of The Herald for continued success.

Mrs. Howard Bretlow very pleasantly entertained at "500" Monday evening. The honorees were Mr. and Mrs Halleck Wilson, Mrs. Frank Osborne and Miss Mary Cochran her house guest.

SEASON OPENS AT BRADLEY

Bradley Opera House opened the season Monday night with John W. Vogel's Minstrels and if the crowds continue it will be necessary for the management to enlarge the house.

The audience seemed to be well pleased as every number was meet with a hearty encore. The costumes were new and very pretty and in the opening scene the scenery was very attractive.

The circle was made up of some unusually fine voices.

"Waunee" was sung by Jas. LaFan and was much enjoyed.

"Cross the Mason-Dixon Line" by Lew Denney was unusually good.

"At the Old Cathedral Door" by Russell Rollins was fine and the chorus by the Louisiania Glee Club was so well received that in had to be repeated while F. S. Carroll pleased the audience in his song "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine."

The house went wild over Tommy Donnelly in his song "Miss Maria, My Heart's Desire" so well pleased were they that Tommy had to respond many times and whenever he appeared during the evening he was was given an ovation.

The work of Eddie Gardner with Funny Hats was good as was Robert Wingate in his "Artistic bone" act and again Tommy Donnelly in his "Songs and sayings of the Day."

As an opening entertainment Mr. Mark deserves much credit in securing the Vogel's Minstrels.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McCann and sons Harold and Wiley returned Saturday from their visits in Jackson and Bunker Hill.

Special Communication of Tecumseh lodge No. 69 F. & A. M. Friday evening, August 8. Work in F. C. degree.

Tecumseh is supposed to be a dry town, but judging by the number of snakes that have been reported as seen and killed we are led to wonder; a rattlesnake east of town killed by a buggy whip and one run over by an auto and still another killed by section hands on the railroad. Glad they were killed and not in the boots of those who saw them.

Fine switches made and cut hair and combings bought at the milliner store of Miss Hough.

A large motor truck heavily laden with bag and baggage and supplies from the Commissary department with Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Strong and family of Port Huron and Mr. and Mrs. Jamison of Morenci stopped in town Saturday morning while enroute to Wamplers Lake for an outing. They were joined by Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Hall of Macon. Part of the crowd boarded the train while the others made the trip on the motor truck.

We clip the following from a write-up of Douglas Arizona that was sent us last week. Miss Gainsley was born in Tecumseh, Mr Gainsley her father being at the time a dry goods merchants on our street. Douglas, Arizonia, August, 4.—Miss Grace Gainsley, will leave Douglas, Arizonia, on Saturday, the summer school over which she has been principal closing on Friday August 8th, to spend the balance of the summer, until school opens September 15, breathing the salt air of the grand. calm old Pacific ocean. This is her fourth year of teaching in the schools of Douglas. For the past two years she has been principal of the Pirtleville graded school, and is to have the same position at the opening of the year in September.

England and the Maximum Wage.

England knew the maximum wage long before the minimum was thought of. It came about after the plague of 1348 had swept away half the population. Work was at a standstill for want of workers and wages went up so enormously that the state thought it necessary to fix a limit. The state ordered that the laborer should not merely accept gratefully what was offered him, but that he must not leave his parish in search of another master on pain of having the letter "F" (for fugitive) branded upon his forehead. Statutes of this kind were popular up to Queen Elizabeth's time, when the last of the series was passed "in the hope that it should banish idleness, advance husbandry and yield unto the hired person, both in the time of scarcity and in the time of plenty, a convenient proportion of wages."

Red Light and Photographs.

Why have we to develop photographs in a red light? We know that white light is really a mixture of light of all sorts of colors—red, yellow, green, blue and so on. Some of these lights of various colors have one kind of power and some another. Now, the kind of light that has the power of causing chemical changes, which is the light we photograph by, is mainly violet light. We can see in a way by red light, but red light has practically no influence on photographic plates. We may say that photographic plates cannot see red light, and so we can use red light to develop them by without fearing that the photograph of our faces or the walls of the room will be printed on the plates.

The Epitaph of Mary Lyon.

In the grounds of Mount Holyoke seminary, overlooking the beautiful valley through which the Connecticut flows seaward, is a monument to Mary Lyon, the Massachusetts teacher who founded the college. On it is inscribed a sentence of her own. "There is nothing in the universe that I am afraid of but that I shall not know and do all my duty."

DON'T EXPERIMENT

You Will Make No Mistake if You Follow This Tecumseh Citizens Advice.

Never neglect your kidneys.

If you have pain in the back, urinary disorders, dizziness and nervousness its time to act and no time to experiment. These are frequently symptoms of kidney trouble, and a remedy which is recommended for the kidneys should be taken in time

Doan's Kidney Pills is a good remedy to use. No need to experiment It has acted effectively in many cases.

Tecumseh. Follow the advice of a Tecumseh citizen

F. C. Brisbine, farmer, N. Democrat St., Tecumseh Mich., says: "I began to suffer from kidney complaint twenty years ago and the medicine I took brought me only temporary relief. Often my back ached intensely and the secretions from my kidneys were irregular in passage, and highly colored. Doan's Kidney Pills went to the seat of my trouble and did me so much good that I am seldom without a supply on hand." (Statement given December 5, 1910.)

A WILLING CONFIRMATION.

When Mr. Brisbine was interviewed at a later date, he said: "You may continue to use my name as a reference for the merits of Doan's Kidney Pills. Whenever I feel in need of a kidney medicine, I take this preparations and effectively."

Answered the Question.

W. J. Fox, a free trade colleague of John Bright, was a clever debater and unexcelled in repartee. His chief heckler in Oldham was a local baker, who once had the misfortune to be fined by the magistrates for selling short weight bread. Fox also had the misfortune to separate from his wife. On one occasion, after he had delivered an address to his constituents, the baker got up and said:

"Mr. Fox, there is just one question I should like to ask you. What has become of your wife?"

"Sir," replied Fox, "she has been weighed in the balance and found wanting."

CALLED HIM A MAJOR.

And a Major He Remained, For the Emperor's Word Had Passed.

Emperor William I. of Germany prided himself upon the fact that his subjects considered his word as binding as the "laws of the Medes and Persians." An amusing incident in Mrs. Hugh Fraser's "Reminiscences of a Diplomatist's Wife" shows that the people's confidence was not misplaced.

One day the emperor's adjutant, Count Seckendorff, presented an officer to him upon the latter's promotion to major.

"Congratulations, major," said the emperor. The officer glanced at him an instant with an expression of astonishment and delight, then bowed and withdrew.

Presently, to his dismay, Count Seckendorff discovered that the officer thus promoted was one of two brothers and that it was the other one, the elder, who had just reached his majority. The younger brother, who had just been presented to the emperor, was only a captain.

When he explained the mistake to the emperor William I. replied: "Well, there's nothing to be done. 'Major' I said, and major he must remain."

Seckendorff came to him a few days later with the request that he might be allowed to present the real major, but the emperor shook his head. "No, no, my dear fellow," he answered with a smile; "you don't catch me making the same mistake twice." It took some persuasion to induce him to receive the newly promoted officer.

Lazy Fishermen.

Some of the fishermen of the Mexican gulf shores have a method of angling for tarpon that at first sight appears to be the height of laziness. A stoutish line with a wire trace at the end is baited and then swung round the head and thrown right out in the sea. The other end is made fast to a post driven in the sand, the slack being coiled up beside it.

Then, lying on their backs, the fishermen hitch the line over their toe, the leg resting on the other knee. Lying thus apparently asleep, with their hats tilted over their faces, they wait until a twitching of the line announces that a tarpon has taken their bait.

Glancing round to see that all is clear, the men then check the line until the fish, feeling the hook, makes off at lightning speed. The rest is easy.—Stray Stories.

Uses of Barytes.

The greater part of the barytes produced in the United States is used as a pigment in the manufacture of mixed paints. It is also used in the manufacture of lithopone, a white pigment. Other uses for the mineral are in the manufacture of rubber, wall paper, asbestos cement and poker chips and in tanning leather. A use of barytes reported from Italy is in the manufacture of gorgonzola cheese. The cheese receives a covering in the form of a thick, heavy crust of the finely ground material, which has the property of affording just sufficient protection from aeration.

The Vision of Mankind.

"Man is a funny proposition."

"What now?"

"When he reads a medical book he fancies he has every disease described; but let him read the work of a moralist, and all the faults pointed out he sees not in himself but in his neighbor."—Exchange.

Gents In Vienna.

He was known twenty years ago as a "gigerl," and young men who were ambitious in regard to correct dress studied him closely," says the Vienna Press. "In other countries his name was variously 'fop,' 'dandy' or 'dude,' but in Vienna he had an added touch of dash, and that made him a 'gigerl.' Today the son of the fashion wise man of those days, who, like his father, knows how to wear his clothes and appreciates the superiority of the man whose necktie and socks are in harmony as to color, whose dress is correct, no matter what the occasion may be—promenade, funeral, race, opera, business or golf—is known as a 'gent,' derived from the English word 'gentleman.'" A member of the American colony at Vienna, commenting on the "gent" article, says, "We try to explain to our neighbors that 'gent' is only four-fifths of what they think the abbreviation stands for."

Microscope and Building Stone.

Especially valuable are the comparative microscopic studies of rock used in building which has resisted weathering for a long time and that which is in process of disintegration. The cause of rapid weathering can be recognized as a natural structural relation. Two granites, for instance, of almost identical mineralogical and chemical composition can behave quite differently. The one remains sound for years; the other disintegrates rapidly because delicate microscopic pressure zones run through it. Two marbles of equal beauty show entirely different powers of resistance as material for a work of art exposed to the weather, according to whether the calcite individuals in thin section interlock with sinuous outlines or merely adjoin each other as paving stones.—Engineering and Mining Journal.

Housework Drudgery!

Housework is drudgery for the weak woman. She brushes, dusts and scrubs, or is on her feet all day attending to the many details of the household, her back aching, her temples throbbing, nerves quivering under the stress of pain, possibly dizzy feelings. Sometimes rest in bed is not refreshing, because the poor tired nerves do not permit of refreshing sleep. The real need of weak, nervous women is satisfied by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and as Mrs. Briggs and others testify:

It Makes Weak Women Strong and Sick Women Well.

This "Prescription" removes the cause of women's weaknesses, heals inflammation and ulceration. It tranquillizes the nerves, encourages the appetite and induces restful sleep.

MRS. BRIGGS.

Dr. Pierce is perfectly willing to let every one know what his "Favorite Prescription" contains, a complete list of ingredients on the bottle-wrapper. Do not let any druggist persuade you that his unknown composition is "just as good" in order that he may make a bigger profit.

MRS. BRAZILL BRIGGS, of 529 N Washington St., Delphos, Ohio, writes: "Having taken your 'Favorite Prescription,' for a bad case of intestinal disease and constipation with woman's ills, for which I was almost unable to do anything, I think I am safe in saying that there are no remedies in the world like Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Purifying Lotion Tablets.' I am now enjoying the best of health, and thank Dr. Pierce for his wonderful medicines which have done me a world of good."

HIS COACH

A Medieval Story In a Modern Dress

By F. A. MITCHEL

Edwin Etheridge, the novelist, had gone to the country to rest. He had been writing all winter and till late in the spring and resolved to go to the most secluded spot he could find and do nothing. He located at a cottage occupied by a worthy though poor family in the mountains.

Etheridge took walks in the clover, climbed the peaks and under the influence of the bracing air and change of scene was getting into condition when he met with one who changed the tenor of his summer outing. He was sitting one day on an eminence overlooking a beautiful valley, when without the breaking of a twig or the motion of a bush he heard a voice directly behind him:

"Splendid, isn't it?"

The novelist turned and saw a tall, lithe figure of a man leaning on a staff. There was something both fascinating and repulsive about him. Though he seemed to be a mountaineer, his beard was cut to a point and his mustache grew upward. In his eyes were softness, cunning and withal a strange glitter.

"Yes," responded Etheridge, "it is indeed a fine picture."

"It reminds me of a time when I offered to exchange a—my friend, would you like to make a fortune?"

"I certainly would."

"What is your profession?"

"A novelist."

"A novelist. Well, you need a—well, a model. I will be that model."

"I do not use models in my work."

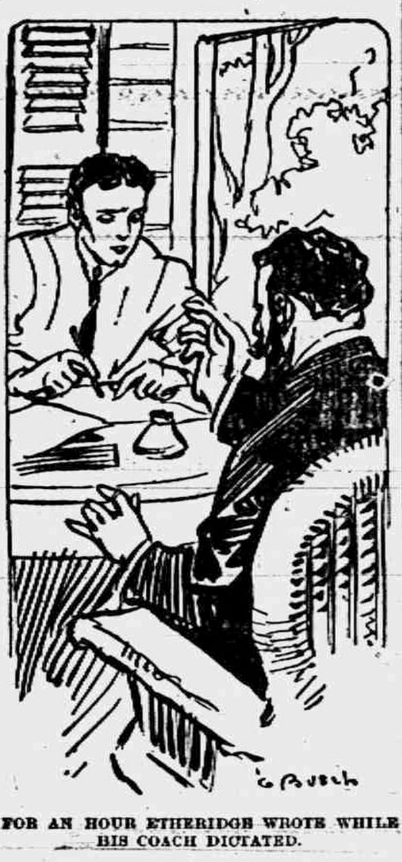
"But you should. I have made the fortune of more than one writer by posing for him."

"In what way?"

"In different ways."

"Thank you for your offer," said the novelist, "but I am not writing now. I am resting."

"Just the time for me to serve you. I take you when you have thrown off all predisposition. I can the more readily influence you."



FOR AN HOUR ETHERIDGE WROTE WHILE HIS COACH DICTATED.

"Influence me! What do you mean?"

"My dear man, do you suppose that you can write interesting stories without being influenced? What do you write but influences—influences to which all human beings are subject? It is this kindred interest that gives the story its interest. I have in me the power to infuse into you that which is commonly called genius."

"Do you mean to tell me that you can make a genius of me?"

"I do."

Now, Etheridge knew very well that no one can make a genius of another, and he would have laughed the man to scorn, but there was something like a challenge in the stranger's eye, an audacity, a mocking expression that seemed to say: "You think I am crazy. Try me." But Etheridge thought of his vacation and controlled himself.

"No," he said; "I will not work this summer."

"Not for one morning?"

"Can you prove what you say in that time?"

"Certainly."

"Very well. Come to the cottage below there tomorrow at 9 o'clock. I will give you till 12."

"I will be there."

The stranger turned and walked away. His going was far different from his coming. While his advent had been noiseless, his footsteps at his exit sounded plainly. And what astonished Etheridge was that he continued to hear them long after the man had gone a considerable distance. It was like the ticking of a clock that is being carried away from one amid otherwise perfect stillness. While the beats grew less in volume they did not diminish in distinctness. It seemed to Etheridge that the stranger's footsteps were resounding through the mountains, but that their distance from him gave them a faraway sound. When they had died completely he arose and descended to the cottage.

The next morning at the appointed hour Etheridge was sitting on the porch when he saw the stranger coming down the road. The house dog saw him, too, and set up a furious barking, which died gradually down to a whine as the man came on, and before he reached the porch the dog slunk away with his tail between his legs. The good woman of the house saw the man coming and involuntarily looked about for her children to see that they were all indoors.

Etheridge had pen and paper on the table, so, after greeting the comer coldly, said he was ready to proceed. He said he would use a motif that he had intended to use during the coming autumn and winter. To this his model or his coach or whatever he purported to be replied that he might use any motif or any plan he chose. Etheridge had already written the opening in a dialogue between his hero and the foil, who was to bring out the hero's strength of character, his manliness, his breadth of soul, his virtue. He handed it to his coach, who read it and tossed it back to him contemptuously.

"To admire, to love, to regret, is to live," said a great writer. Do not let the regret be brought on by a cough or cold, which if treated when it first appeared would have easily been controlled. Allen's Cough Balsam brings welcomed relief in such cases. Contains no harmful ingredients. 25c., 50c. and $1.00 bottles at all dealers.

PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER

"Write it over," he said. "I will start your story for you. Take my dictation."

For an hour Etheridge wrote while his coach dictated. As the dialogue between the two characters proceeded the villain of the story loomed up as a splendid man, while the hero perceptibly dwindled. Not a word did the hero speak that was not good, and not a word was uttered by the villain that was not evil, and yet the evil was beautiful as the blue heavens and the good sounded like a mockery of righteousness.

"Now," said the man who had produced this effect, "I have given you the pitch. You can sing the song yourself, only to keep you up to the key I will sit here and chat with you, as portrait painters do with those sitting for them in order to draw their souls out into their faces. Proceed."

Curious to discover whether this remarkable master in the art of writing could infuse genius into him according to his boast, Etheridge took his pen and began to write. The stranger rattled on, at times to himself, at times to the novelist. It seemed to the latter that he was sitting in a bower of flowers, each flower exhaling its own delicious perfume. The light seemed broken into its component parts, each color intensified in beauty. Thoughts—such thoughts as he had never known before—crowded in upon his brain. Evil was endowed with the attributes of the good; good was endowed with the attributes of the evil. The woman foil, too, was ravishing. She attempted to draw the hero from the pure woman he loved, and, although he resisted her seductions, he seemed despicable that he did so.

When noon came Etheridge desired to continue the work, but his coach declared that he had written enough for one day and must break off. Rising, the stranger bowed himself away, and as he receded Etheridge heard him talking and chuckling to himself. And as he was lost amid the trees growing on the mountain side there came back the echo of laughter.

The next morning the work was renewed under the inspiration of the coach, and the next and the next. As the plot developed it seemed that it could have been invented only by Satan. It was in itself a thing of genius. Etheridge became infatuated with it and with his characters. When the clock in the cottage struck 12 his coach would go no further. Once after he had gone Etheridge undertook to proceed with the work himself, but when he stopped to read what he had written he tore the paper into fragments.

When the story rounded to its close it seemed to Etheridge that all his characters had become evil and that evil was the great desideratum of human existence. The good and the bad were whirling before him in a merry dance. The hero and heroine, who had passed from the good to the evil, were making merry over their fall, and the others were clapping their hands and shouting, "What a waste of time to have been good!" And the chief feature of it was that the author found himself sympathizing with vice triumphant.

As he was writing the last pages Etheridge heard the creaking of a vehicle and, looking down the road, saw a hearse approaching surrounded by uncovered mountaineers. Glancing at his coach, he saw a sardonic scowl on his face.

"This is death," he said, "that men so much fear. It makes men cowards. But I shall overcome it in the end."

When the procession came opposite the cottage, suddenly, without warning, the stranger cowered. Slinking down like a whipped cur, he endeavored to get away from the hearse, but there was no way to do that except by first advancing. Trembling in every limb, he remained cowering till the funeral party had passed, then without a farewell darted away in the opposite direction.

As he did so the woman of the house threw up a sash and said:

"I knew it."

"Knew what?"

"He's the devil."

"The devil?"

"Yes. Didn't you see what drove him away?"

"No; what was it?"

"The cross on the hearse."

Etheridge sat for a few moments trying to collect his faculties. When he had succeeded he took the manuscript of his story into the house, threw it into the fire and watched it burn, with yellow and blue and green and red flame, till it was entirely consumed.

Dressmaking on the Boulevards.

This picture of life in the French capital is given in Frankfort Sommerville's "In the Spirit of Paris":

An industrious woman at a newspaper kiosk sat making a jacket in the intervals between customers. A sleepy cabby, with a cigarette in his mouth, watched her at her work. Presently she put on the coat and began to fit it and fix it with pins. She was examining the sides to see how they hung.

She stooped to plant a pin. But the cabman strode up, bent and fixed it for her, with a "Voila, madam," turned to the other side, measured the distance with his eye and inserted another pin, traveled thus round the garment, doubled a clumsy pleat, mumbled "It's too big here," at which she nodded, and then stood back to see the effect.

"Merci, monsieur," she said, took off the jacket and sat down. A "fare" came up; the cabman jumped to his seat, cracked his whip and was off.

LIND NOT TALKING

Wilson's Representative to Mexico Will Not Act Hastily.

The arrival in Mexico City, Mexico, of John Lind, whose mysterious mission to Mexico was the direct cause of a public manifestation in support of General Huerta's attitude toward American mediation, has of itself been devoid of any thrills.

When Mr. Lind, the personal representative of President Wilson, alighted from his train after a tedious day's journey from Vera Cruz, there were only a few pesons about the station who seemed at all curious to watch his movements. Mr. O'Shaughnessy, the charge de affaires, was on hand to receive him Numerous newspaper photographers were present and Mr. Lind obligingly posed for many pictures.

Lind Keeps Silent.

Mr. Lind maintained that taciturnity which he has observed since he was summoned from his home in Minnesota by President Wilson to undertake the mission to Mexico. Just what he is to do here or just when he will begin the negotiations for which he has come are matters of as great mystery as before his arrival.

Mr. Lind declared that he did not have the slightest intention of discussing affairs regarding Mexico with private individuals. He said his business was with official Mexico and that he would be very careful with whom he talked. There need be no apprehension, he added, that he would embarrass the government by indiscretion of that sort.

There is reason to believe that before his mission to Mexico is ended he will have suggested more than the mere fulfillment of the promise by General Huerta that elections be held.

Lind Won't Act Hastily.

It has been pointed out that such a demand is not wholly consistent since the promise to hold elections in October has already been made and intimations of bad faith are out of taste at the present time.

Mr. Lind does not propose to act hastily, though he will lose no time, and it may be that all his work in Mexico will be finished within three weeks and possibly sooner. If General Huerta persists in being unwilling to see him. O'Shaughnessy, the charge de affaires, will transmit Mr. Lind's communication.

N. A. Jennings and Marvin Ferree, two American newspaper correspondents, were arrested. They are being held by order of the minister of the interior. The nature of the charge is not made known. Jennings is a representative of the Hearst newspapers and Ferree is a correspondent of a Los Angeles newspaper.

May Recognize Carranza.

Hints that the Washington government may recognize Venustiano Carranza and his revolutionists in the north as a de facto power have reached Mexico and added to the strained feeling between Huerta's adherents and the American embassy.

Nevertheless, it is pointed out that there may be a strong foundation for such action by the United States, inasmuch as representatives of Carranza in Washington have urged that the Carranza faction is in control of considerable more territory than that of Huerta. This phase of the situation is causing much uneasiness.

KNIGHTS FILL DENVER

18,000 Have Arrived There to Attend the Great Conclave.

More than 18,000 Knights Templars have arrived in Denver to attend the thirty-second triennial conclave. Early in the morning the St. Bernard commandery of Chicago arrived and was soon followed by the Creston commandery of Burlington, Iowa, and at intervals of a few minutes came armies of Sir Knights, glittering with the silver and gold of full parade uniform.

CHICAGO—Figures from the statistical bureau of the agricultural department at Washington wired to Chicago grain traders after the close are in some respects the most unusual for many years, according to dealers on the board of trade. A calamity has overtaken the big corn crop and the total for the year even if there is no further damage from the extreme heat and drought will be about 500,000,000 bushels short of the crop of 1912.

CHICAGO — Mrs. Esther Detchon has been awarded a decree of divorce from Seymour G. Detchon, wealthy real estate dealer, by Judge Petit in the circuit court, after having effected a private alimony arrangement by which she received about $150,000 of real estate and other property. Detchon entered no contest of his wife's suit after jurisdictional questions were deccided against him.

LONDON, ENG.—Followed by a detachment from each battalion of every regiment at Aldershot and with the funeral honor accorded to dead soldiers, with the single exception of the volley over the grave, Samuel Franklin Cody, the Anglo-American aviator, who was killed at Aldershot on August 7 in an aviation accident, was buried in the military cemetery at Aldershot.

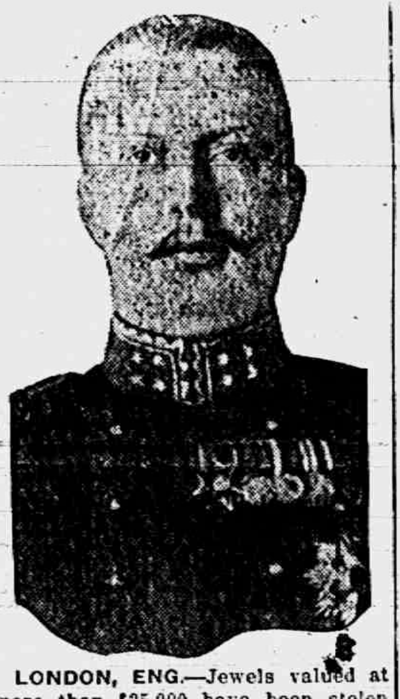
PRINCE HENRY

Thieves Stole $25,000 in Jewels From His Compartment.



LONDON, ENG.—Jewels valued at more than $25,000 have been stolen from Prince Alexander of Battenberg. The thieves in some way gained admission to the prince's compartment on a train and removed the jewels between Hull and Kensington palaces.

CRIMES AND CASUALTIES.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH. — John Herman, forty-three years old; Peter Schutz aged eighty-two years and Raymond Lillie, twenty-eight, promminent farmers living twelve miles from this city, were blown to pieces by a dynamite explosion. They had gone into a field to blast stumps and, it is thought, one of the men dropped a box containing the explosive. There was no witness to the accident.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—A riot between Jewish union cloakmakers and Italian non-union cloakmakers characterized the opening of balloting on a proposed strike by the members of the Cloak and Suit Makers' union here.

Four of the union men were stabbed, two of them probably fatally. Three Italians arrested for the stabbing were identified by the victims at the city hospital.

WORTHINGTON, IND.—Twice on the night before John Moreland was drowned his wife dreamed that she saw him struggling in the water. Her dreams so impressed her that she begged him not to go to work, but he laughed at her. Later she was told he was drowned. The woman is prostrated by grief.

SALEM, OREGON — With their heads almost severed from their bodies, Koye Kowa and Mrs. Tami Koda and her child, all Japanese, were found murdered in an alley near a restaurant owned by the woman's husband, Y. Koda. Beside the bodies were found two bloody knives and a revolver.

MONROE, MICH.—One working man was killed, one was probably fatally injured and a third was badly hurt when northbound tourist train on the Pere Marquette struck a gang of Hungarian workmen who were walking home along the tracks near Erie.

LONDON — Colonel F. S. Cody, the famous Anglo-American aviator, was killed in an aeroplane accident at Aldershot. A passenger named Evans also was killed.

NEWARK, OHIO — The pleasure tain Ralph Hunt, sank fifty feet from the pier at Buckeye lake with sixty persons. Ten were drowned.

KIN FORM UNIQUE MICHIGAN COLONY

Eleven Families Settle St. Martin's Bay District.

RUDYARD, MICH.—A most unique settlement is being established in the St. Martins bay district in eastern Mackinac county.

It is a colony comprised all of one kin, and yet it numbers eleven households. A. D. Simmons, an elderly farmer from Minnesota, is the patriarch of the community, and has as his followers ten families, headed by seven sons and three son-in-laws, including twenty children, grand-children of the leader.

At present the settlers are without a practical road and are the pioneers in a virgin territory. They are many miles from a postoffice, that at Rudyard, in Chippewa county, being the nearest. Lake Huron is three miles directly south.

DEPUTY SHERIFF A SUICIDE

Temporary Insanity Believed to Have Influenced Benjamin D. Leach.

DETROIT, MICH. — While his wife was lying ill in an invalid's chair which she has not left for several years, waited for him to return after a three days' vacation, Benjamin D. Leach, thirty years old, deputy sheriff of Flint, shot himself in a toilet room of the Burns hotel, Detroit, and died a few hours later.

Leach entered the toilet room about 9 o'clock in the morning. A moment later a shot was heard and James Burns, the proprietor, hurried to the room to find the man lying on the floor with a bullet hole in his head.

Leach was well known in Detroit and all his friends thought very highly of him. They could not offer any reason for his act other than that he probably had become temporarily insane.

ONE DROWNED. TWO SAVED

Mrs. C. W. Clement, Kalamazoo, Steps Into Deep Water.

KALAMAZOO, MICH. — Mrs. C. W. Clement, twenty-four years old wife of the superintendent of the Bartlett Label company, was drowned in Gull lake.

Miss Nina Kitter, of Grand Rapids, was saved from death by Frank Knoblet, of Chicago, who was bathing with the two women.

Miss Grace Morgan, of Chicago, was saved from drowning in the lake by George Henry, another Chicago resorter, when she, like Mrs. Clement, waded out in water that was too deep for her.

MINERS RETURNING TO WORK

Operators Claim They Have Routed the Western Federation of Miners.

CALUMET, MICH. — The copper mine operators claim the complete rout of the Western Federation of Miners in its strike here for higher wages, an eight hour day, abolishment of the one man drill, and recognition of the union.

Over 2,000 men are at work. No demands for changes in working conditions were made by the men returning but it is said from high authority that mining companies will raise the wage scale and probably give the men the eight hour day.

NEVARRE'S BODY FOUND

Corpse of Monroe Fisherman Recovered Near Shore Off Newport.

MONROE, MICH.—The dead body of Albert Navarre, twenty-nine years old, who was washed off the tug Chester L., on the way from West Sister Island to Monroe, was found by Patrick Lomia and Joe LaDuke, floating near the shore in Lake Erie, two miles from Newport.

TO ANNUL WEDDING OF GIRL AUCTIONED

Authorities Find Turkish Girl Sold Is Under Age.

DETROIT, MICH. — The marraige license department of the county clerk's office took steps to nullify an auction sale of a girl who was knocked down to the highest bidder to be his wife.

The girl is Marie Aman, a Syrian. Her father made the sale. There were a half dozen bidders. The girl has been in the country only seven weeks, and was brought here by her father expressly to be sold. A Turk, Mehammed Haj Seleem, was the successful bidder.

The bargain was sealed immediately by the reading of an Oriental marriage service. Later the Turk visited the county clerk's office and got a license for a civil marriage.

He gave the girl's age as nineteen. After he left the officials read about the auction sale. Marie's real age was fifteen, less than the legal age for wedlock.

Marie has a sweetheart, who could not bid high enough to win her.

It developed that selling Syrian girls to the highest bidders is a frequent happening here.

"BLUE SKY" WARNING IS OUT

New Law Will Take Effect August 15; Brokers Cautioned.

LANSING, MICH. — August 15 the "blue-sky law" passed at the last session of the legislature will go into effect and the newly-created securities commission will pass upon all stocks and bonds offered for sale in this state.

However, State Treasurer Haarer, who is one of the members of the commission, says that neither the blue-sky law nor the securities commission afford the investor the same protection as a state bank. Nevertheless the attention of the treasury department has been called to a prospectus issued by one firm in which it is set forth that the company is supervised in the same manner as a state bank. Haarer says this is not true and firms sending out misleading literature after the new act takes effect will receive a warning from the commission.

LIGHTNING FOLLOWED HER

Makes Bed Near Phone, Bolt Hits Her, May Die.

MARION, MICH.—Badly frightened by the terrific electrical storm which struck this section, Miss Florence Wine, seventeen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wine, unsuspectedly went downstairs and made a bed under the telephone.

A bolt of lightning struck the wires, and ran into the phone, passing through her body. She is in a serious condition, and according to the attending physician has little chance to recover.

Policemen to Have Day Off.

DETROIT, MICH. — City Police Commissioner John Gillespie has issued an order notifying all members of the police department that on August 14 the new state law will go in effect giving all policemen one day off with pay in every fourteen, in addition to their twenty days" furlough each year

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—The notorious Diggs-Caminetti "white slave" case which recently caused a national scandal, reached actual trial in the United States district court, when Maury Diggs was placed on trial for taking Marcia Warrington from Sacramento to Reno, Nevada, for immoral purposes. With Diggs and the girl were Drew Caminetti and Lolo Norris.

The One Who Waited

An Illustration of "Patient Waiters Are No Losers"

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Jimmy Dill pattered down the steps of the subway station, grabbed a ticket from the window, shot across the intervening space and caught the downtown express without a second to spare.

Settling himself in a corner, he opened a morning newspaper and endeavored to interest himself in its contents. The train roared through the tube, a waste of vitiated atmosphere swept into the car, and Jimmy yawned.

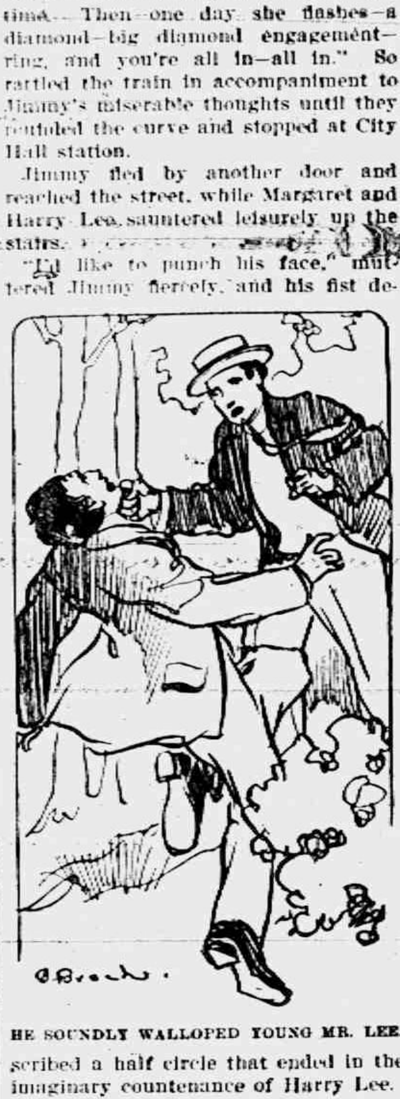
For the first time he saw Margaret Gray. If he had known that she was there he would have found a seat beside her and thus have been miserably happy for a brief time. Then his glance fell upon the slender youth who accompanied Margaret, and a fierce jealousy smote him so that he buried his face behind the newspaper again.

The train seemed to rattle a tune that expressed the unhappy situation in which Jimmy Dill found himself.

"That's the way—that's the way," rattled the train. "A feller never—never looks at a girl—until the right one comes along—and you find—she's at the next desk—in your office all—the time. Then—one day she flashes—a diamond—big diamond engagement—ring, and you're all in—all in." So rattled the train in accompaniment to Jimmy's miserable thoughts until they rounded the curve and stopped at City Hall station.

Jimmy fled by another door and reached the street, while Margaret and Harry Lee sauntered leisurely up the stairs.

"I'd like to punch his face," muttered Jimmy fiercely, and his fist described a half circle that ended in the imaginary countenance of Harry Lee.



HE SOUNDLY WALLOPED YOUNG MR. LEE.

Seated behind his desk in the office of the big lumber firm where he was billing clerk, Jimmy knew to the very instant when the door opened to admit Margaret, a little late and quite breathless.

When Jimmy closed his eyes he could always see Margaret dressed in a pretty cotton house frock with a white apron on setting the table for supper or watching for him at the window or sewing by a shaded lamp. Always she was connected with a home picture. To Jimmy Dill this meant a great deal, for he had never known a real home. He had been reared in an orphan asylum, and when he was old enough to earn his living he had existed in hall bedrooms of boarding houses of various classes—always respectable, never homelike.

A bell rang sharply, and Margaret picked up notebook and pencils and disappeared through the door leading to Mr. Compton's private office.

Her departure started a little buzz of gossip in the room.

"I don't believe she knows," said one of the girls to Jimmy.

"Knows what?" asked Jimmy gruffly.

"What a sport Harry Lee is. They say"— And her voice whispered certain matters of gossip that Jimmy Dill had long known to be facts. He knew that Harry Lee was utterly unworthy of Margaret. He knew that he was a gambler, that he drank and that he was utterly unreliable; also that he had held nine different office positions in twelve months.

"Couldn't say," Jimmy had responded when the girl had finished her remarks. "Have you the invoice for that last shipment of long leaf pine, Miss Dawson?"

"No; I haven't!" snapped Miss Dawson, and she remarked to her neighbor that Jimmy Dill was grumpy because Margaret Gray was going to be married.

That night Margaret handed in her resignation and shook hands and said goodby to every one in the office. There were much talk and laughter about the approaching wedding, and Margaret's eyes were very bright.

When she came to Jimmy his cold hand closed her warm one for the briefest instant. "I hope you will be very happy, Miss Gray," he said evenly, and only Margaret detected the strained note in his voice.

Then she was gone, and they all talked at once about what they should buy for a wedding present. Miss Dawson took up a collection, and Jimmy dropped his $2 in with the same sort of feeling that one experiences in buying a funeral wreath for a departed friend.

The days were empty after that. Jimmy did not know the date of Margaret's wedding. He didn't want to know. The girls in the office would soon enlighten him. He was sick of the whole thing. Suddenly opportunity thundered at his door, and he was offered a very advantageous position with another concern. This was a distinct rise for Jimmy, and the change did him good. It took him away from the immediate neighborhood of the people who knew Margaret Gray. He wanted to forget her.

Absorbed in his new work, he succeeded in forgetting her to a certain degree, but one noontime while he was sauntering around Battery park he met her face to face as she was hurrying toward South Ferry.

She was dressed in white linen, and under her white hat her face looked very pale.

"How do you do?" she smiled up at Jimmy, and a warm color waved across her cheeks.

"How do you do?" returned Jimmy dazedly. "I—er—I should say how do you do, Mrs. Lee."

Again the color flooded her face, and this time Jimmy recognized it as the flag of embarrassment.

"Haven't you heard?" she asked faintly.

"Heard? No; I haven't heard anything."

"You knew that I am not married?" she asked in a surprised tone.

"No!"

"I am not going to be." Her voice broke a little, but she smiled bravely. "It's best to find out people before you marry them than afterward, isn't it?"

"Yes, but ah, say, it's too bad, Margaret!" Jimmy would have gladly undertaken to reform Harry Lee and hasten that young man's marriage to Margaret if the deed would have brought back the sunshine to her eyes and the smile to her face.

"I am glad; but, oh, Jimmy, I didn't know that he was so mean; nobody knows at the office. They believe it is because of his habits. But—but—he said to let it go at that. But there was another reason." Margaret's voice was quivering. Jimmy slipped a hand under her arm and piloted her through the crowd streaming toward the ferry. When they were on board and had found a secluded corner he said:

"Tell me about it if you want to. You know I'm not a cackler."

"There isn't much to tell, only the day of the wedding. It was to be very quiet at my aunt's. He never came."

"He never came!" Jimmy growled at her.

She shook her head. "He came the next day and said he forgot—forgot, Jimmy! And then when I told him that there wouldn't be any wedding he said it would be a distinct relief to him. He didn't think he was cut out for a married man."

"You loved him a lot, Margaret?" whispered Jimmy hoarsely.

"I believed I did at first," said Margaret drearily, "but it was only a first attraction, and I drifted into an engagement, and then I got to comparing him with some one—with others—and he appeared so mean and contemptible. But I was engaged to him, and I would keep my promise. But it seems he was tired of me too."

"Never mind, Margaret," said Jimmy. "You ought to be glad enough to get out of it so easy. Did I tell you about my new job with the Continental people?"

Thereupon he told Margaret of his rising luck, and when they reached Brooklyn she bade him goodby with a ghost of her old smile lingering on her lips.

After office hours he rode up to Central park and wandered among the shady trees, trying to figure out in his mind just what this change of Margaret Gray's plans might mean to him. If she only loved him it would be so easy, but he did not want to gain her consent when her heart was sore from a quarrel with Harry Lee.

He sauntered through a bowery path where solitude and bird songs were in accordance with his newly stirred sensations. Here, in the shadiest corner of the most secluded path, he came upon a skinny youth from whose lips there drooped a cigarette. He was lounging on a bench.

"Mr. Lee!" rapped out Jimmy.

"Huh?" The youth leaped to his feet and faced the other with a queer look of surprise. A smile curled his lip. "I guess you're the chap that got my girl away from me!" he sneered.

"What are you talking about?" demanded Jimmy.

"I guess you know! We had a little difference, and Margaret—I told her that she was gone on you, and—well, oh, she cried and said you was too sensible to look at a silly thing like her, and then she denied it, and, oh, well, you knew the wedding was off, eh?"

"Yes, I know the wedding didn't come off, and I know why it didn't occur at the proper time. So now I'm going to relieve my feelings a little, Lee. There!" Jimmy Dill's fists flew back and forth as he soundly walloped young Mr. Lee. And when that youth lay on the grass and looked reproachfully up at his antagonist through a rapidly swelling eye Jimmy Dill looked down at his foe.

"I just had to do it, Lee. I believe it will do you good in the end, and now you'll have to excuse me. I've got to get a train for Brooklyn."

Mental Originality.

Anatole France coined a phrase which may have the breath of life in it. "What is madness after all," he says, "but a sort of mental originality?" He writes that Charles Dickens always liked madmen and cites among the madmen good Mr. Dick in "David Copperfield," whose innocence is described with such tender grace. "I believe," writes the great Frenchman of letters, "that Dickens had more feeling than any other writer. I believe that his novels are as beautiful as the love and pity that inspired them. I regard 'David Copperfield' as a new gospel. I believe, lastly, that Mr. Dick is a 'sensible' madman, because the only reason left to him is the reasoning of the heart, and that is hardly ever received. What matter if he does fly kites on which he has written some reflections concerning the death of King Charles I? He is benevolent, he wishes ill to no one, and that is a piece of wisdom to which many sane men do not so easily attain as he."

Great Eaters, Great Breakfasts.

Looking over the aged pages of Morris Berbeck's "Journey In America," which extended through Ohio, we found this account of a breakfast at Rushville (June 16, 1817), in Fairfield county:

"A gentleman, myself and three children sat down this morning to a repast consisting of the following articles: Coffee, rolls, biscuit, dry toast, waffles (a soft, hot cake of German extraction covered with butter), pickerel salted (a fish from Lake Huron), veal cutlets, broiled ham, gooseberry pie, stewed currants, preserved cranberries, butter and cheese. For all this for myself and three children and four gallons of oats and hay for four horses we were charged 6s. 9d. (or about $1.65)."

There were great eaters in those days, and from this record they got plenty to eat.—Ohio State Journal.

Misapplied Philosophy.

"Mike," said Plodding Pete, "what would you do if you was rich?"

"I'd lead a life of ease," replied Meandering Mike.

"No, you wouldn't. You'd be playin' polo or golf or takin' physical culture. Let well enough alone. A life of ease ain't nothin' but work in disguise."—Washington Star.

A DOORSTEP FIND.

G. H. Turner of Flint, County Agent, Answering an Early Morning Call, Finds a Baby Boy.

NO CLUE TO IDENTITY.

Awakened about 1:30 o'clock Sunday morning by the ringing of his doorbell, Mr. Turner of Flint, father of F. S. Turner of the Tecumseh Herald, found a basket awaiting him. On inspecting the contents a baby boy about two weeks old was discovered, who made a vigorous appeal to be taken in and cared for. This was done, Mr. Turner and his daughter Mrs. Buchanan, doing all in their power to make the young man comfortable.

A neighbor has taken him in charge until some final arrangement can be made for his future. The baby was well clothed in fine handmade garments showing that much pains and time had been spent in their manufacture. The neighborhood were quite excited over the advent of the baby and he was the recipient of a number of calls during the day.

GOVERNOR SULZER IMPEACHED.

Both Governor and Lieutenant Governor Claim Office.

The lower house of the legislature of the State of New York by a vote of 79 to 45 voted to impeach William Sulzer Democratic Governor of New York. The vote was taken at 5:16 o'clock Wednesday morning August 13, after an all-night session on charge of having diverted campaign contributions to his private use and having made false statements under oath as to his campaign receipts.

The governor's wife made an eleventh hour effort to save him at the rest of her own reputation but failed.

A committee of three was appointed to acquaint the senate with the fact that the lower house had voted to impeach the Governor and that articles of impeachment were being prepared.

As soon as the articles of impeachment were presented to the senate about 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon Lieut. Gov. Martin H. Glynn announced his intention of occupying the executive chamber.

Friends of the Governor claim that the governor will continue office and maintain that the assembly had no constitutional right to consider impeachment at its extraordinary session.

The date of his trial before the senate and judges of court of appeals is fixed for Sept. 18.

With the adoption of impeachment resolutions by the assembly the governor is automatically stripped of power which is lodged with Lieutenant Governor. If charges are sustained by the senate and the court of appeals the Governor is removed from office and the office falls to the Lieutenant Governor until the election.

"I shall walk the street called straight" said Gov. Sulzer when he took the oath of office.

GENERAL NEWS.

WASHINGTON — Colonel Martin M. Mulhall before the house lobby committee is a very different Colonel Mulhall from the truculent, cocksure witness who "ran" the senatorial lobby investigation for three weeks. He appeared for examination before the Garrett committee for the first time. He was submissive for a short while, but vastly more reticent than when he had Senator Reed of Missouri, sitting close to his elbow and propounding all the questions that Colonel Mulhall might answer in his own way and in his own sweet time. He attempted the truculent attitude only once or twice, once to his great discomfiture with Representative Ferris of Oklahoma and promptly the Oklahoma member appealed to the chair and with equal promptitude Mr. Garrett forced a direct answer.

WASHINGTON — Ten baby buffaloes have eben born to the government herd on the Wichita national forest and game refuge near Lawton, Okla., advices to the forest service from the game warden in charge announce. The new arrivals bring the herd up to a total of forty-eight head, twenty-seven of which are bulls and twenty-one are cows. The herd is reported to be in excellent condition and contains nearly four times as many animals as it did when turned over to the government six years ago. The herd is one of the best in the country, all of the animals being splendid specimens. They were placed in the care of the government in 1907 by the American Bison society and were transferred from New York to Oklahoma.

NEW YORK—John Henry Mears, the special commissioner of the Evening Sun, who left New York on July 2 on a tirp around the world arrived in New York with a record that beats by three days, 22 hours, 7 minutes and 37 seconds the best previous time for such a journey. At exactly eighteen minutes and four-fifths of a second after 10 o'clock he crossed the finish line in front of the Sun office from which he made his getaway at 12:43 o'clock on the morning of July 2. The record held by Jaeger-Schmidt of the Paris Excelsior, was 39 days, 19 hours and 42 minutes, 37 4-5 seconds. Mears' time was 35 days, 21 hours, 35 minutes and four-fifths of a second.

ANTAGONISM.

Do not be afraid of antagonism, but face it manfully and with intelligence. He that wrestles with us strengthens our nerves and sharpens our skill. Our antagonist is our helper. This conflict with difficulty makes us acquainted with our object and compels us to consider it in all its relations. It will not suffer us to be superficial. — Edmund Burke.

SUMMER WEDDING.

Miss Helen Smith and Alvin Brazee of Chinook, Ma. United in Marriage at Home of the Bride's Parents Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Smith, Tuesday, August 12.

WILL START FOR WEST TODAY

The home of Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Smith was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Tuesday evening when their daughter Helen, was united in marriage to Mr. Alvin Brazee of Chinook, Montana.

To the soft strains of the wedding march played by Miss Edith Dalsher the young couple accompanied by Miss Florence Smith, sister of the bride, and Ray Brazee, a brother of the groom, were met by the Rev. Schwelle of the German Lutheran church of Lake Ridge, who pronounced the solemn words that made them husband and wife, using the ring service.

The bride was beautiful in a gown of white voile over white messaline, trimmed with shadow lace. She carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and sweet peas.

Miss Florence wore white voile with pink messaline trimmings and wore a corsage boquet of pink sweet peas.

Following congratulations an elegant wedding supper was served. About thirty-five guests were present coming from Wisconsin, Ohio and Pennsylvania.

A most beautiful array of wedding gifts in silver, china, table linen, and other drapery, blankets and bedspreads, doilies with generous checks from the parents and other friends of the young couple, gave ample proof of the love and esteem in which they are held.

Mr. and Mrs. Brazee leave today for their new home where he has a ranch and has built a home. During the school year Mr. Brazee teaches, his school being about a half a mile from his home.

The best wishes of their go with them on their journey through life.

Mr. Brazee has been a life long resident of Tecumseh and is a graduate of our high school and Mrs. Brazee has been a teacher for several years and has endeared herself to many during her brief residence here.

The guests from out of town were: Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Smith, Miss Bertha Kuehne and Chas. Hesl'ley, Toledo, O., Mrs. Caroline Kurz of Youngstown, O., Mr. and Mrs. Ray Brazee and family of Monesson, Pa., Mr. and Mrs. Lavern Hessen, New Brighton, Pa., Mr. and Mrs. Leo Brazee and family Milwaukee, Wis.; Miss Emma Curry, Farwell, Mich. and Mrs. Cynthia Chambers, Lowell, Mich.

FRANCHISE GRANTED

At a meeting of the board of the Township of Tecumseh Tuesday Aug. 12 an ordinance was passed granting a franchise to the Tecumseh Electric Co to erect poles and wires for electric light and power throughout the township of Tecumseh. A special election to ratify this franchise will be held Sept. 3. Saturday Aug. 30 has been set for registration. All men and women who are qualified may vote at this election. It may be of interest to the voters to know that all the expense of this election will be met by Tecumseh Electric Co.

TO-NIGHT AT THE ROYAL

Seligs great animal picture a feature, "Wamba a child of the Jungle." 5c to all. Don't miss it.

MRS. NATHAN ARNOLD.

The body of Mrs. Nathan Arnold was brought here from Cleveland Tuesday and laid beside her husband in Brookside cemetery. Mrs. Arnold was a former resident of Tecumseh and will be remembered by many of her old friends. The son, Ellsworth Arnold, and daughter, Mrs. Fannie Flick, came with the remains and have spent part of the week in town.

NOT A MODERN ROOF.

In the year 1855 Horatio Keyser, an uncle of Wesley B. Keyser, built a house for Bates Chatteren on the farm now owned by Wesley B. Keyser three miles north and west of Tecumseh.

The same roof put on at that time, 58 years ago, served on the upright of the house until last Saturday when Mr. Keyser re-shingled it. The shingles we made of pine shaved thin and were painted under the laps.

Oh! take us back to the days of the old shingles.

SPARKS CIRCUS WAS A GOOD ONE

Rhinelander, Wisconsin, Friday, July 11, 1913. The Sparks Circus which showed here Tuesday was seen by large crowds and was well worthy of patronage, it presenting one of the cleanest and best programs ever given here, even if the rings were not as large as those of the Ringlings. It rained hard in the morning but cleared beautifully in the afternoon permitting the parade and the afternoon and evening performances. The acts were uniformly interesting, comprising some of the best features seen in the larger circuses. The management is courteous and the employes all seem gentlemanly, and the sentiment here is decidly in favor of their return at some future date.

Both?

"An acclivity," said the teacher, "is a slope up; a declivity being a slope down." "Then," asked the class prodigy, "upon which would I be standing if I were on a side hill? It runs both ways." But the teacher was making little Johnny Jones throw away his chewing gum.

His Comment.

"They say that women keep the wheels of commerce going." "Maybe so. Here's a woman's program when she buys anything: She opens a handbag, takes out a purse, opens the purse and takes out a coin, shuts the purse and opens the handbag, shuts the handbag and adjusts her veil. I think business would slump if a man had to do all that every time he made a five-cent purchase."

Painful Situation.

Marble Pudding

Steamed puddings will not be heavy if made with K C Baking Powder and cooked slowly to give the pudding time to rise before the dough is cooked through. Have a low blaze under the water for at least the first fifteen minutes.

K C Marble Pudding

By Mrs. Janet McKenzie Hill, Editor of the Boston Cooking School Magazine.

2 cups sifted pastry flour; 2 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder; ½ teaspoonful cinnamon; ½ teaspoonful salt; yolks of 2 eggs, beaten light; ⅞ cup sugar; 4 tablespoonfuls melted butter; ½ cup cold water; whites of 2 eggs, beaten dry; 1½ ounces melted chocolate.

Sift together, three times, the flour, baking powder, salt and cinnamon. To the yolks add the sugar, butter and water, and stir into the dry ingredients. Add the whites of the eggs. Divide the mixture into two parts and add the chocolate to one part. Dispose the two parts in a buttered mold to give a marbled appearance. Steam forty-five minutes.

Vanilla Sauce

Boil 2 cups of sugar and a cup of water six minutes; add 2 tablespoonfuls of butter and a teaspoonful of vanilla extract.

Before Visiting Sick.

An infectious disease is more liable to be taken when one has been long fasting than soon after a meal. It is well, therefore, when going to see a friend suffering from a disease of this kind to eat a substantial meal first. Neither should one go into an affected area when very warm or after a long, quick walk, when the pores of the body are all open.

POCOHONTAS EGG COAL

Last winter we had an exceptionally good grade of this coal. It gave satisfaction as it was neither too fine or ful of bone or slate. We now have several cars of this same grade of coal in transit.

We could have secured any amount of inferior "Smokeless coal" in lump size for some time back, but have waited for this particular grade of coal.

Please place your orders at once so same can be drawn from the car and save breakage to you.

You will find our prices are very reasonable, consistent with the quality.

KILLED

O. B. Nye Victim of Hoboes, Meets Sudden Death at Elmwood, Ohio Tuesday, Aug. 12.

LEAVES WIFE AND THREE CHILDREN.

Dispatches were received Tuesday by his family that Olla B. Nye had been killed in Elmwood, Ohio. Mr. Nye was employed as brakesman on the C. H. & D. railroad for the past six months. He was to have come home to-night for a visit to his family. A wife and three children Welma aged 9 Park 3 and Esther 18 months old are left to mourn his untimely death.

The remains arrived Thursday morning. The funeral services were held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home with the Rev. Hartzog officiating.

Mr. Nye discovered a number of hoboes on his train and ordered them off, but they refused to go claiming the conductor had given them permission to ride. On interviewing the conductor he told him he had not given them permission and to get them off at once. This he did when one of the number threw a brickbat striking him on the head inflicting a bad wound and knocking him off the car. In falling it broke his neck and throwing him under the cars cutting off both legs and one arm. The man has been arrested and is awaiting trial.

GRAND RAPIDS — Miss Helen Molloy, twenty-three years old, of Berlin, was drowned at Spring lake shortly before midnight, when she walked from a dock at Villa crossing while strolling with a girl friend. Miss Mollo's companion fainted when she saw the latter fall into the water and when she recovered consciousness, twenty minutes later, she ran to the cottage where they were staying and told of the accident. The body was almost immediately recovered but all efforts to restore life failed.

DON'T EXPERIMENT

You Will Make No Mistake if You Follow This Tecumseh Citizens Advice.

Never neglect your kidneys.

If you have pain in the back, urinary disorders, dizziness and nervousness, its time to act and no time to experiment. These are frequently symptoms of kidney trouble, and a remedy which is recommended for the kidneys should be taken in time.

Doan's Kidney Pills is a good remedy to use. No need to experiment. It has acted effectively in many cases.

Tecumseh Follow the advice of a Tecumseh citizen.

E. C. Brisbine, farmer, N. Democrat St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I began to suffer from kidney complaint twenty years ago and the medicine I took brought me only temporary relief. Often my back ached intensely and the secretions from my kidneys were irregular in passage and highly colored. Doan's Kidney Pills went to the seat of my trouble and did me so much good that I am seldom without a supply on hand." (Statement given December 5, 1912.)

A WILLING CONFIRMATION.

When Mr. Brisbine was interviewed at a later date, he said: "You may continue to use my name as a reference for the merits of Doan's Kidney Pills. Whenever I feel in need of a kidney medicine, I take this preparations and effectively."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Riches.

He is rich or poor according to what he is, not according to what he has.—H. W. Beecher.

Sometimes the symptoms of kidney and bladder trouble are so plain no one can mistake them. Backache, weak and lame back with soreness over the kidneys, sharp pains, rheumatism, dull headache, and disturbed sleep, are all indications of a trouble that Foley Kidney Pills will relieve quickly and permanently. Try them. For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

Wisdom.

A wise wife soon learns to manage her husband, while a wise husband never tries to manage his wife.

Mothers! Have Your Children Worms?

Are they feverish, restless, nervous, irritable, dizzy or constipated? Do they continually pick their nose or grind their teeth? Have they cramping pains, irregular and ravenous appetite? These are all signs of worms. Worms not only cause your child suffering, but stunt its mind and growth. Give "Kickapoo Worm Killer" at once. It kills and removes the worms improves your child's appetite, regulates stomach, liver and bowels. The symptoms disappear and your child is made happy and healthy, as nature intended. All druggists or by mail 25c.

Commissioners Notice

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee ss.

In the matter of the Estate of ALFRED JAMES, Deceased.

The undersigned having been appointed by the Probate Court of said County, Commissioners to receive, examine and adjust all claims and demands of all persons against the estate of said deceased, do hereby give notice that we will meet for that purpose at the Tecumseh State Savings Bank in the village of Tecumseh, Lenawee County, Michigan, on the 2nd day of August 1913 and on the 17th day of January 1913, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of each of said days.

And that six months from the 17th day of July, 1913 are allowed by said Probate Court for the creditors of said estate to present their claims to us for examination and allowance.

Dated July 17th 1913

Joseph H. Smith
Sylvester P. Hosmer
Commissioners

STATE OF MICHIGAN.

Probate Court for the County of Lenawee.

At a session of said court, held at the probate office, in the City of Adrian, in said county, on the 28th day of July, A. D. 1913.

Present: Hon. HARRY L. LARWILL, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of ADELINE TILTON, deceased.

ELDRIDGE H. [illegible], nephew and heir at law of deceased, having filed in said court his petition, praying that said court adjudicate and determine who were at the time of her death the legal heirs of said deceased and entitled to inherit the real estate of which said deceased died seized.

It is ordered, that the 25th day of August, A. D. 1913, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at said probate office, be and is hereby appointed for hearing said petition.

It is further ordered, that public notice thereof be given by publication of a copy of this order, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing, in the SEMI-WEEKLY HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulated in said County.

SPORTING AFFAIRS.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL.—The recent desertion of Pitcher Henry Keupper from the Bloomington team to join the St. Louis club of the Federal league has aroused the fears of Three Eyes league magnates that other stars players may take similar action. Keupper is the first Three Eyes player to desert, but it is known that Federal agents are trying to induce other players to join Keupper.

NEW YORK—When Fireman Jim FFlFynn had been knocked down four times in the fifth round in Madison Square garden, referee Job stopped the battle, and gave the decision to Gunboat Smith. Flynn and Smith fought desperately from the first clang of the gong, and although the battle was devoid of real cleverness, it pleased the crowd.

WASHINGTON—The heavy rains which were general from Nebraska to western New York, continuing all day, have broken the heat siege in portions, at least of the east-central and west-central states and will be of great benefit to what remains of the corn crop, according to reports received here. The rains were steady, without driving winds, and soaked gradually into the ground.

DAVENPORT, IOWA.—Mrs. Theodone N. Morrison, wife of the Episcopal bishop of Iowa is dead at Mercy hospital after a week's illness. She was married October 28, 1879, to the Rev. T. N. Morrison, then rector of the Church of the Epiphany Chicago.

HAPPY THO' MARRIED?

There are unhappy married lives, but a large percentage of these unhappy homes are due to the illness of the wife, mother or daughter. The feelings of nervousness, the befogged mind, irritable temper, the pale and wrinkled face, hollow and circled eyes, result most often from those disorders peculiar to women. For the woman to be happy and good-looking she must naturally have good health. Dragging-down feelings, hysteria, hot-flashes or constantly returning pains and aches—are too great a drain upon woman's vitality and strength. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription restores weak and sick women to sound health by regulating and correcting the local disorders which are generally responsible for the above distressing symptoms.

MRS. DICKOVER.

"I suffered greatly for a number of years and for the past three years was so bad that life was a misery to me," writes MRS. B. F. DICKOVER, of Utica, Ohio, Route 1. "The doctors told me I would have to go to a hospital before I would ever be better. A year ago this winter and spring I was worse than ever before. At each period I suffered like one in torment. I am the mother of six children. I was so bad for five months that I knew something must be done, so I wrote to Dr. R. V. Pierce, telling him as nearly as I could how I suffered. He outlined a course of treatment which I followed to the letter. I took two bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and one of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and a fifty-cent bottle of 'Smart-Weed,' and have never suffered much since. I wish I could tell every suffering woman the world over what a boon Dr. Pierce's remedies are. There is no use wasting time and money doctoring with anything else or any one else."

The Medical Adviser by R. V. Pierce, M. D., Buffalo, N. Y., answers hosts of delicate questions about which every woman, single or married ought to know. Sent free on receipt of 31 stamps to pay for wrapping and mailing only.

FLINT—Albert Williams, who is about twenty-five years old, is in a critical condition at Hurley hospital as the result of being scalded from head to foot when he attempted to clean a boiler at the Wolcott Packing company's plant, twenty miles west company's plant, twenty miles west H. H. Gill, superintendent of the plant, who rescued Williams, was burned about the feet by the water which covered the engine room floor. Preparatory to starting the boiler, Williams opened a manhole to clean the flues, not knowing there was water in the boiler. He was struck in the face by a stream of the scalding water and temporarily blinded. He stumbled and fell and all of the water in the boiler, a depth of about six inches, rushed out on to him as he lay helpless. His body was cooked from his shoulders down.

An Episode at Kingston

After Which the Old Village Slowly Crumbled Away

By EDNA D. HILL

Kingston, from its settlement by a younger son of an English nobleman and its naming for the king of England, who ruled at the time, was an aristocratic town. There was scarcely a house in it that was not owned by a woman, for the men as fast as they came to years of maturity went to more active places. But there was not a woman in Kingston whose house was not a model of comfort, whose silver had not been handed down in the family for more than a century—some of them three centuries—and whose furniture was not antique.

True, much of the original wealth [illegible] been brought there by retired buccaneers. But those whose silver had come down to them from ancestors who had taken it from some merchant vessel, compelling the owner to walk the plank, argued that in those days piracy was indulged in by persons of aristocratic birth, the present owners, and were therefore quite proud of the manner in which it had been obtained.

THIS WAS VERY NEARLY, IF NOT QUITE, A SNUB.

The aristocratic center of Kingston consisted of two blocks on the main thoroughfare. There was not a house on these two blocks whose front door was not flanked with side lights and arched glass above and whose garden was not situated in the rear, inclosed by a big wall. Some of the knockers on the doors were known to be 300 years old. There was a disposition in the town to gauge the families by the age of these knockers, which were considered in lieu of coats of arms.

In these aristocratic two blocks was one house smaller than the rest—though houses built in colonial times were not large—which had finally passed to the ownership of an old maiden who had died at the age of ninety-two. She being the last of her family, at her demise the house was shut up and remained closed for twenty years. One day the street was electrified by the presence of a painter and decorator at the Olmstead house, as it was called, and a still stronger current was turned on at the subsequent appearance of a boy of twenty and a girl of eighteen, who were evidently a bride and groom. They settled down in the old house like a pair of birds just mated and about to build a nest.

Their appearance was a signal for the collection of groups of women in different houses in the district where the innovation had occurred. Had a bomb been discovered in the middle of the street, its fuse spitting venomous fire, the commotion could not have been greater. The parties interested were a few old ladies whose husbands were living, a large number of widows, a still larger number of old maids, with a small crop of maidens coming on. Such a thing as any family settling in any house in the sacred district without the permission of the social primates had never been known since a returned patent medicine man had dared do so. His family had been ignored and frozen out within three months.

But the present case was different. These young creatures seemed to be quite respectable. What treatment should be given them? Should they be suffered to live in seclusion or called upon and invited to their neighbors' houses? One thing was certain—action in their case should be unanimous. It would never do for a wedge to be inserted into Kingston society.

After numerous consultations by different groups, with women flying from house to house to consult the old ladies who were not able to get out, there was found to be a consensus of opinion that the matter had better be left to Miss Drake, the last of the family of Drakes, who lived in the house built with the proceeds arising from piracy. Miss Drake claimed descent from Sir Francis Drake (who acquired a taste for piracy by preying on Spanish commerce), she being the authority to whom all questions of social importance were usually referred.

Miss Drake recommended that some one make it his business to find out how the couple lived; what was the young man's business. If he were a professional man and in good standing the pair might be called on and received. But if he sold or manufactured anything the matter must be further looked into. If he sold soap his admission would be out of the question.

But nothing could be learned about the young couple. They did not offer any information concerning themselves, and those who would learn of them were too well bred to ask them any questions. Besides, how could they ask questions when they had no acquaintance with the strangers? And how could they find out what was the husband's occupation when he had no occupation? He went to the nearest city, a distance of fifty miles, two or three times a week and the rest of the time remained at home. From what his occupation might be the problem became, How did he live?

All this put off a decision as to the reception of the newcomers. Some of the young persons of the town would have been glad to make their acquaintance, for youngsters are gregarious and not so set in their ways as their elders. But their mothers would not permit them to become on terms of equality with persons about whom they knew nothing. So the tea parties and the sociables went on without the bride and groom.

There were no young men in Kingston, so the groom could not make any [illegible], but his wife indicated that she would be pleased to make acquaintances. She occasionally smiled on meeting a neighbor and on one or two occasions dropped a remark. But as time passed and no one called on her such informal recognitions became constrained, and at last most of them ceased altogether.

When half a year had passed it began to be noticed that the bride was seldom seen out of her house, and from this time forward she appeared more and more seldom. One day a man with a satchel in his hand came up from the city with the husband and disappeared within the portal. A dozen pair of eyes on the other side of the street saw him go in, and two dozen saw him come out. He was the only visitor the couple had received since they came to Kingston, and he went away without exchanging a word with any one except those he had come to see. He made one or two visits after this, and every time he came a desire welled up in the breasts of many women to interview him with regard to the strangers; but to speak to a man to whom they had not been introduced was not to be considered.

The next commotion among the Kingston ladies was a resplendent touring car that pulled up before the house occupied by the couple. An elderly gentleman and lady threw off their fur coats, sprang from the auto and ran up the steps. They were received by the husband, the door was closed behind them, and the battery of eyes that stormed the premises looked upon nothing but the outside of the house. On the arrival of the next train from the city the same auto brought from the station the stranger with the bag who had appeared before and two other men, all of an eminently respectable appearance.

The impression got abroad that the young wife was very ill; that the elderly couple who had come were her parents and the others were doctors.

It now occurred to the good people of Kingston that possibly they had made a mistake. These connections of the young people were certainly rich and to all appearances respectable. Was there not still time to atone for their neglect? Not that there was any atonement to be made had the couple turned out to be ordinary persons. It was due only since it had become apparent that they were both rich and respectable, for, while all the elite of Kingston were respectable, none of them were rich, and their respect for the combination was something overwhelming.

Two of the most estimable leaders of the place called at the house and sent up cards and a message asking if they could be of service. A reply came back, borne by a uniformed maid who had come from the city by train, that the lady begged to be excused from seeing them, and there was nothing they could do.

This was very nearly, if not quite, a snub. Then some one reported that a city newspaper had mentioned that a reconciliation had occurred between a wealthy banker and his wife on the one hand and their daughter and her husband on the other, the mother being a social leader and a member of one of the oldest families of the country. The young couple had eloped and hidden themselves in an obscure village called Kingston, where the bride's parents had found them.

The pride of the town was wounded by being referred to as an obscure village, and the young girls all wept bitter tears of disappointment that they had lost an opportunity to become friendly with a member of the exclusive circle of city society.

One day the automobile pulled up in front of the house in question. The elderly couple and the young couple came out, attended by a maid carrying a baby dressed in garments trimmed with the finest embroidery and lace. All got into the auto and chugged away, leaving the house to be shut up by others and an object of no further interest to the neighborhood of Kingston.

Before this episode the town had become wormy, and after it crumbled more rapidly. But few of the aristocratic set are now left, and they are too old to get out. They sit all day looking at the grass growing in the street.

PORT HURON—Most of the residents in the vicinity of Athletic park are living in terror and mothers are keeping their offspring safe indoors because a big black snake escaped from its cage at a carnival which showed here last week and has eluded capture. It may be hiding under the grand stand at the park but no one appears willing to take any chances at capturing it. Charles Gruel nearly ran into it near the stand and did not stop running until he got to his officer. Later several boys made a half-hearted effort to run down the reptile, but kept at a respectful distance.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—Two persons were killed and eleven injured some of them fatally, when an interurban car of the Milwaukee Northern road crashed into a Milwaukee city car near the northern city limits.

WASHINGTON—The developments at the conference which Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo had with bankers from the middle west made it clear that they favor the prospectus of the administration currency bill at this session of congress provided alterations are effected in the provisions regarding the concentration of reserves. There were indications that the desired changes may be adopted by the senate committee on banking and currency.

WOMEN AT CITY PRIMARIES

Those of Chicago Will Be Permitted to Vote in February.

Chicago, Aug. 18.—Women voters of Chicago will have their first chance to participate in the election of candidates for local offices on Feb. 3 of next year. They will take part in both the nomination and election of aldermanic candidates, according to two changes made in the registration laws.

Until copies of the laws reached Chicago it generally was supposed by politicians the suffrage legislation in Illinois did not provide for women taking part in the nomination of aldermanic candidates in the spring. It was pointed out, however, that the changes with regard to registration permit women voters to participate in the primaries, as well as in the election of council members.

BRAKEMAN CUT TO PIECES

Victim in Laporte Believed to Have Fallen Asleep on Track.

Laporte, Ind., Aug. 18.—Roy Miller, a Lake Shore brakeman was cut to pieces here while flagging for an extra freight with which he was working out of Chicago to Elkhart. Miller is supposed to have fallen asleep on the track.

He was married only three weeks ago to Miss Kathleen Meagher of Duluth, Minn. They lived in Elkhart.

THIRD RAIL WAGE IS RAISED

Men on Aurora-Elgin Line Accept a Two-Cent Increase.

Aurora, Ill., Aug. 18.—Employes of the Aurora, Elgin and Chicago railroad voted by an overwhelming majority to acept the company's offer of a wage increase of two cents an hour. The increase was a compromise.

Some time ago the men threatened to strike unless their pay was raised. It is understood the ballot precludes any strike at this time.

DESPERATE BATTLE WHILE BEATING WAY

Thrown from Engine Pilot in Fight with Holdup Men.

Wabash, Ind., Aug. 18.—James Flannigan of Saginaw, Mich., who was beating his way to St. Louis, had a desperate battle with two tramps on the pilot of a Wabash freight engine near here.

When approaching the city one of the men asked Flannigan what time it was. The Saginaw man pulled a watch from his pocket and it was jerked from his grasp. His money was then demanded, but Flannigan refused, and a tussle ensued in which $25 in bills was taken from one of his pockets.

Flannigan's experience with the strangers was not destined to end then, and when within two miles of the city he was pushed from the engine, which was then running thirty-five miles an hour.

For an hour he lay unconscious, but was then able to regain his feet and walked to Wabash, where the affair was reported to the police. His assailants have not been found.

FIVE DIE IN AUTO CRASH

Three Women and Two Men Meet Death at Railway Crossing.

Carrolton, Mo., Aug. 18.—Five persons in an automobile were killed and the driver was seriously injured when a Santa Fe passenger train struck the machine at a crossing a mile east of this place.

The dead are Carl Forbes and Mrs. Carl Forbes, Sacramento, Cal.; Mrs Mabel Warner, Brookfield, Mo.; Mrs William Roberts, Brookfield, Mo., and H. S. Vandevente, Brookfield, Mo. William Roberts was injured, it is believed, fatally. Vandevente was the owner of the car.

"JOYRIDERS" WRECK AUTO

Escape with Minor Injuries in Accident at Bloomington.

Bloomington, Ind., Aug. 18.—The seven-passenger automobile of Robert H. Harris, a theatrical man, was wrecked at night on North Indiana avenue by Willard Roberts, who was "joyriding" with other employes of the theater near the campus of Indiana university.

The machine struck a tree, tearing off the front and rear wheels. The occupants of the car escaped with minor bruises.

IS IRONMASTER BRITISH CITIZEN?

Andrew Carnegie Is Urged to Prove Allegiance.

REGISTERED SCOTTISH VOTER

Americna Woman, Miss Lillian Scott, Finds "Laird's" Name on Popular List at Dornoch, Sutherlandshire—Home Secretary McKunne Appealed to—Thinks He's Britisher.

London, Aug. 18.—Is Andrew Carnegie an American or British citizen?

This question, which has interested persons on both sides of the Atlantic for some time, seems likely to be made the subject of official inquiry. Miss Lillian Scott of California discovered the name of the "Laird of Skibo" on the register of parliamentary voters in Nornoch, Sutherlandshire, and asked a member of parliament to obtain an expression from the secretary of home affairs. Mr. McKenna replied:

A British Subject.

"As far as I know Mr. Carnegie was born in the United Kingdom and in virtue of this he would be a British subject, and unless he had ever done anything to divest himself of his British nationality he remains a Briitsh subject."

"POKER IS POKER"

Speaker McKinley Puts in Odd Defense for Gamblers.

Chicago, Aug. 18.—Stud poker played by "prominent north siders" is as much gambling as "craps" shot by newsboys, according to Judge Mahoney of the municipal court. The judge gave this opinion after the police had raided the cigar store and poolroom of George Specht.

Speaker William McKinley of the house at Springfield appeared to defend Specht.

"I have played there about fifteen times," the complaining witness said. "The game was always stud and it was pretty steep. In fact, it was strong enough to get $1,400 out of me—all the money I had. There is a game going on nearly every evening, and they make a handbook during the day."

"That sounds like gambling," Judge Mohoney commented.

"But the men who go there are all prominent," McKinley insisted.

"That doesn't make any difference," said the court. "Gambling is gambling just as pigs is pigs. I will fine Specht $100 and costs and the others $1 and costs each. And I also suggest the police keep a watch on the place to prevent a reopening of the game by the 'prominent north siders.'"

STRICKEN MAN DIES IN LAKE

Suffers Heart Attack and Falls From Boat Into Water.

Laporte, Ind., Aug. 18.—While rowing from the Anderson Clubhouse across Koontz Lake to the east side, near where he lived, Emil Oberg, sixty-one years old, had an attack of organic heart trouble and fell from the boat into the lake. His body was found about fifteen minutes after the attack in ten feet of water.

Oberg was a farmer and leaves a widow and one son.

LONG DROUGHT WILL BOOST MEAT PRICES

Officials Anxious Over Probable Results in Southwest.

Washington, Aug. 18.—Sharp increases in the prices of fresh beef are expected to follow the drought that is scorching the cattle-raising states of Kansas, Iowa, Nebraska and Oklahoma, and officials of the department of agriculture are not concealing their anxiety over the outlook. Their apprehension is increased by unfavorable reports said to have been received from agents now in South America concerning the condition of the cattle there.

Dr. A. B. Melvin, who was sent by the department to South America to observe the manner in which cattle were slaughtered and meat was packed in that country, is said to have reported that a serious hoof and mouth disease is raging in Argentina.

Australia is expected to furnish much of the meat consumed by Americans in the immediate future.

KIND FEEDING ON KIND

Motorcycle Cops Will Supplement Work of Automobile Cops.

Aurora, Ill., Aug. 18.—Supplementing a volunteer police force of twenty-five rich automobile owners who enlisted in the city's cause when it began a war upon speeders, twenty-five motorcyclists, who will serve without pay, were sworn in.

The swearing in of the motorcycle coppers marks the beginning of a "feud," for behind the patriotism of the cyclists is seen a hope that they may get a chance to pinch an autoist. Mayor Sanders understands and is satisfied. He says: "Let kind feed upon kind."

"The motorcyclists' desire to serve the public was given an impetus when C. S. Kilbourne, president of the Y. M. C. A., millionaire [illegible] man, one of the twenty-five volunteer automobile cops, chased and captured A. L. Everett, a motorcyclist, who had only owned his machine two days.

GOVERNMENT OF LEGAL COUNSEL

That Is Status of New York State's Affairs.

STEPS TO ELIMINATE SULZER

Acting Gov. Glynn and Impeached Gov. Sulzer Take No Steps Without Advice of Counsel—Will Show Sulzer No Discourtesy—Glynn Inquires Concerning Thaw's Escape.

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 18.—Acting Governor Martin Glynn spent the day quietly with Mrs. Glynn at their summer home. Governor Sulzer had a restful day at the executive mansion. He was with Mrs. Sulzer most of the time except when he took a two hour automobile ride alone.

Glynn Won't Act Discourteous.

At no point in Acting Governor Glynn's efforts to pursue the duties of the office of governor pending Governor Sulzer's trial will force be utilized either to get possession of the legislative chamber suit or executive papers or anything done personally discourteous to Governor Sulzer in any way.

But Governor Sulzer and acting Governor Glynn have surrendered their prerogatives to their attorneys in the sense that neither will make an official governor or attach his signature to an official paper before the corps of eminent counsel retained by each pass on the act.

For this reason neither acting Governor Glynn nor Governor Sulzer will discuss his official future until he has performed some official act which has been backed up by the advice of his attorney.

To Eliminate Sulzer Peacefully.

As a result of the legal advice which has been given Mr. Glynn he has determined upon a course which he feels will mean the peaceful elimination of Governor Sulzer from the situation before many days have gone by. At the outset when the trustees of state public buildings are taken they will pass a resolution designating the suite of rooms now used by the lieutenant governor as the executive chamber. This board has complete jurisdiction of the rooms in the capitol and their designation for the uses of the different departments. As Lieutennat Governor Glynn said in the evening: "The executive chamber is where the governor is and a person is not governor merely because he is occupying rooms which have heretofore been designated as the executive chamber."

Th employes in the executive chamber will then be notified that if they want their money from the state comptroller they had better recognize acting Governor Glynn or they may find new appointees doing their work for Governor Glynn. It is not believed it would take much coercion to induce the civil service commission to recognize Glynn as acting governor.

Acting Governor Glynn sent the following telegram to Superintendent Riley at Plattsburg and to Dr. Ramond F. Kieb, superintendent of Matteawan hospital:

"Please telegraph me instantly all details you have about the escape from Matteawan of Harry K. Thaw."

Wonders of Henry VIII.

"Henry VIII. was king of England and the greatest widower that ever was," states a boy's essay quoted in the London Lancet. "He was born at a place called Annie Domino, and he had 350 wives. The first was beheaded and then executed, the second was revoked, and the third died, and then he married Ann Bulletin."

The Demon Barber.

The story of the "demon barber," his misdirected energy and undue personal attention to customers, a story that has been made famous in ballad and on the stage, was this: He lived at 186 Fleet street, London, next to St. Dunstan's church. Under his shaving chair there was a trapdoor. When Mr. Todd, making some excuse, left his customer—or client, for this is now the genteel term—and went into an adjoining room he drew a bolt. The trapdoor turned over and threw the customer into a cellar. There he was murdered, and his body was made into mutton pies, which were sold at a neighboring shop at a reasonable price and much relished. This story was believed by all for many years, and Dickens mentions it in "Martin Chuzzlewit," yet it was without foundation.

80TH BIRTHDAY.

George Monaghan of Toledo was in town Monday from Sand lake where he had been for the anniversary of John W. Monaghan's 80th birthday. This was a surprise on the old gentleman and a large party of relatives and friends gathered for the occasion at his home, "Cove Farm" on Sand lake.

A bountiful spread of good things to eat was a leading feature. As a token of their regard for their friend the company presented Mr. Monaghan with a fine Morris chair and after the company had departed the old gentleman took a fine snooze in it as an appreciation of the gift. In his younger days Mr. Monaghan was a familiar figure on our streets and will be remembered by many.

SOME CATCH.

George Monaghan of Toledo, a former Tecumseh boy, has a son George C. Monaghan, who is attending school in California. Recently he sent him a dainty pink fish line and there-in hangs a tale of a fish.

On the first fishing excursion taken by the young man after receiving the line he caught a stingaree that weighed [illegible] lbs., measuring 3 feet in length and 20 inches across. His strength was mighty and he drew out the 200 feet of line and towed the boat half a mile. It took an hour to land him and then only after he was gaffed.

FIFTY FIRST ANNIVERSARY

August 26 1913

Clayton, Mich., August 1, 1913.

Comrade:

The Forty Sixth Reunion of the Eighteenth Michigan Volunteer Infantry will be held at City Hall, Adrian, Michigan, on Tuesday, August 27, 1913.

Register in the morning. Woodbury W. R. C. serves dinner at 12 m.

Business meeting at 1:30 p. m. Officers will be elected for the ensuing two years.

Camp Fire will follow business meeting. Rev. Mr. Bussing, it is expected, will help us out with a twenty minute talk at camp fire.

Comrades of the Eighteenth Mich.: Memory links us to one of the best regiments ever sent to the front during the civil war. Let each surviving veteran be present at the 51st Anniversary of its first muster.

If it is impossible for any to attend, write briefly to the Secretary, and these letters can be published, and in this manner we may again touch elbows.

Please report deaths of comrades during the year.

Bring your family and friends with you.

Everybody invited, especially comrades of other regiments.

Only Fair For Faither.

In a train the other day, says a Glasgow News correspondent, I overheard two schoolteachers dwell with a certain fondness on the pranks of a boy whom they called Jimmie. I could gather that this lad was full of sweet simplicity and a deep rooted objection to education. Despite his dilatoriness, however, he was a general favorite.

One of the dominies in whose class Jimmie now idles his time remarked that on a recent morning the boy had handed in an exercise in arithmetic which, by its neatness and freedom from errors, simply howled "Father." Jimmie was in a simmer of excitement to see what mark he would get.

In order to surprise him into saying something the teacher had scribbled on the copybook "Fair" instead of "Excellent," as it should have been. A murmur of dismay was expected from the boy, but instead he chuckled with glee and remarked: "Oh, I'm glad! Faither's only got 'fair' efter a' his bouncin'!"

London's Ugly Man.

Frank Duff in his reminiscences tells a story of an exceptionally ugly man, well known in London society, whose name he suppresses. He had it from Lord Lytton, who had it from Lord Beaconsfield.

"I saw him once," said Beaconsfield. "It was when we were living at Grosvenor Gate. When his card was brought up I was extremely busy, and I said to Lady Beaconsfield, 'My dear, you must receive this gentleman for me.' I ought to tell you that Lady Beaconsfield was very fond of seeing remarkable people, and I said to her, 'My dear, I know he is a remarkable man; I cannot tell you for what reason he is remarkable, but you may take it from me that he is remarkable.' Lady Beaconsfield tripped downstairs, and I was turning to my work when I heard a fall and a scream. I rushed down: Lady Beaconsfield had fainted. She thought she had seen Mokanna, the veiled prophet, without his veil!"

Methodist Stamps.

Senator X.'s daughter, who is beautiful, religious and unsophisticated, went into a Washington drug store recently to purchase some stamps.

"Ten cents' worth of stamps, please," she said timidly.

The drug clerk, who had an eye for feminine beauty, was struck with her appearance, so he gave her an engaging smile and urbanely asked:

"What denomination?"

Disconcerted by his open admiration, she looked at him in astonishment, then, remembering the Scriptural injunction to be "prepared to give a reason for the faith that is within you," she replied, "Methodist." There was a moment's pause; then her face became suffused with angry blushes, and she continued, "But I do not see what that has to do with my stamps."—Lippincott's.

Knew Her Way.

The ladies were discussing a wedding which took place in their church the previous day. "And, do you know," continued the first best informed lady of the party, "just as Frank and the widow started up the aisle to the altar every light in the church went out." This startling bit of information was greeted by a number of "Ohs." "What did the couple do?" finally inquired one. "Kept on going. The widow knew her way."—Pall-Mall Gazette.

AMUSEMENTS

ELEPHANT BALL GAME

Of the many stunts performed by the Sparks Circus herd of elephants the one that probably gets the most appreciation is the game of base ball played by these mighty and unwieldy pachaderms. Every play is gone through with in the most ludicrous manner, and the laughs furnished by this number will remain as a pleasant remembrances of the circus.

All the accessories, pitcher, batter, catcher, umpire, fielders and their gloves, masks, bats and uniforms, are present, and "Big Mary" in the role of batter seldom misses a home-run swat, and has has established a 400 mark batting record for herself. Running the bases and the slide to home plate never fail to bring forth rounds of applause and laughter from the audience. Another funny situation is when the pitcher has two strikes on "Big Mary," he and the catcher get into an animated argument over the next ball to be served by the pitcher and trumpet into each other ears. This little piece of by-play always meets with the instant approval of [illegible] the already funny number. This act was presented to New York City's delighted millions last winter and came in for more favorable newspaper comments than any animal act seen there in recent years. This feature is positively on the program of the Sparks World Famous shows, which are billed to exhibit here next Saturday August 23.

ADRIAN IN MOTION PICTURES

Arrangements have been made with Manager Simons of the Family Theatre of Adrian to show their special moving pictures of Adrian at the Bradley Opera House, one night, Wednesday August 20. These pictures show all of the principal scenes in Adrian including the Adrian Fire Department in action, the pednent raising; thrilling motor cycle races on the fair ground; several down town scenes, in all over 31 scenes or over 1400 feet of special films.

Mr. Marks saw these pictures in Adrian last Tuesday and says they are fine, clear as crystal. This big feature will be shown in addition to the regular show which includes Miss Alice Joyce, in "A Streak of Yellow" a modern society drama; Bunny's Birthday Surprise, a big comedy; the Vitagraphers at Kama Kura and another big feature. Positively the best picture value ever given in Tecumseh for the money. Don't forget the date. See hand bills for full program.

"WHERE THE TRAIL DIVIDES,"

A beautiful love story in a picturesque setting and with the central figure an educated Sioux Indian and a rich young New Yorker as rivals for the love of a beautiful Western girl, is told in "Where The Trail Divides," a new Indian play of which Robert Edeson, "the actor," is the author.

Love stories no matter in what setting always make attractive plays. The audiences seem never to tire of seeing the hero clasp the beautiful heroine in his arms and whisper the oft repeated, "I love you", and love stories are all the more fascinating when the hero is a romantic and manly type of American.

Mr. Edeson whose "Strongheart" will always be remembered as the greatest characterization of the American Indian, in writing, "Where The Trail Divides," made How Lander, the educated Sioux Indian, a most fascinating figure.

There is no character on the American stage that is exactly like How Lander, yet it is a character that might have been taken from real life. On presentation at the Bradley Opera House, under the management of C. S. Primrose, for one night, Wednesday Auguss 27.

QUALIFY FOR BUSINESS

First Rate Opportunities Offered in Fast-Growing Detroit.

The marvelous growth of the city of Detroit has created a steady demand for well qualified young people to do book-keeping and stenographic work. The vast increase in the business transacted opens up a great field for young men and young women. To ambitions, industrious young people, the thorough training given at The Business Institute, that city, provides the steps for successful careers in the business offices of Detroit. The Business Institute affords training in the use of the latest machines and devices found in up-to-date offices. The adding machine, the rotary mimeograph, the planotype, the billing machine, etc., all receive proper attention, so that the student is familiar with the best method of operating these machines. The proficiency of the students may be judged when it is mentioned that it has over 2,000 employment calls a year. The Business Institute is centrally located on Cass avenue just north of Michigan, only about one fourth of a mile from the City Hall. It has large airy rooms, sixteen foot ceilings and is open to the breeze and light on all four sides. There are sanitary drinking fountains on each floor and electric fans in the main rooms. The typewriting rooms contain 150 machines, and the entire equipment is of the very best. A free employment bureau is maintained. Visitors are always welcome, and those who cannot call in person will do well to examine the catalogue of the Institute, which will be sent free by mail.

In the Library.

I never come into a library (saith Heinsius) but I bolt the door to me, excluding lust, ambition, avarice and all such vices whose nurse is idleness, the mother of ignorance and melancholy herself; and in the very lap of eternity, among so many divine souls, I take my seat with so lofty a spirit and sweet content that I pity all our great ones and rich men that know not their happiness.—Robert Burton.

A PLEA FOR HELP FROM A COUNTRY WOMAN.

Much has been written lately about beautifying the towns and cities of our country, and considerable good work has been done along this line.

Our own little burg can well boast of its trim streets, beautiful shade trees and neat and well kept lawns,—of its tidiness in general.

We country people enjoy its beauty, as well as do the town dwellers, but how about our own lawns and highways?

We are a busy people, but we realize that the neat and tidy appearance of our premises and highways adds a money value to our farms, besides satisfying our own sense of beauty, and most of use are trying to do what we can along this line.

In this work we want to ask the aid of the merchants of Tecumseh. A few of them, and only a few insist on covering our fences, barn roofs, sheds, our beautiful shade trees, and even the large boulders that otherwise would be ornamental, with hideous highly painted signs, in an effort to draw our trade.

These signs not only disfigure any spot, but they rouse the ire of three-[illegible] country people who are obliged to view them.

I know of one poor farmer's wife who must view five of these large gaudily painted works of art every time she sits on her own front porch. Years ago she registered a vow never to enter one of thos so-advertised stores, and to do her best to persuade others to do the same. The vow has been kept. These signs not being on her own premises, she lacks the right to remove them.

Now this is not meant to be antagonistic to our merchants. We need them—and they need us. We want to save them their money and time. We want them to spare our tempers. We notice it is not thought necessary to decorate Tecumseh's streets with any of these signs to draw town trade. Not one of these merchants would tolerate for twenty-four hours one of his own signs on his own shade trees.

We country people are progressing as well as the rest of the world and the day has long, long gone by when such advertising appealed to us. Most of us take the Tecumseh papers and in them we look for information from Tecumseh Merchants regarding their merchandise. We do not consult fence posts, telephone poles and barn roofs.

"A word to the wise" etc.

A COUNTRY WOMAN.

First Chess Champion.

Authentic history locates chess in Persia in 760, and the word chess is known to be of Persian origin, coming from the word "shah," meaning "king," and chess has been considered a game for kings from time immemorial. The game found its first home in Spain toward the close of the fifteenth century, and in 1561 Ruy Lopez published his treatise, which is recognized as the foundation of all modern chess. His work was republished in Venice in 1534, and from that date the Italians became recognized for their chess dominance. The first chess champion seems to have been Paoli Boi, who defeated every master of his time, including Ruy Lopez himself. Chess playing as an occupation is not a profitable employment, although most of the chess masters devote their time exclusively to it and therefore earn a most precarious sort of a living.

How Rough Diamonds Shrink.

The loss in weight in diamonds when going through the process of cleaving and chipping and polishing amounts to from 50 to 60 per cent on the average. Accordingly, the price of a rough diamond will have to be advanced in the finished brilliant, aside from all other expenses, at least twice to three times. With the well known "solitaires" the loss in weight is even greater, because it is necessary to chip off so much more. Thus, the diamond Excelsior, which, in its crude raw state, weighed 971¾ carats, produced two brilliants, weighing together only 340 13-32 carats, with a loss in weight of 65 per cent; and the Cullinan, originally weighing 3,024¾ carats, was reduced to only 980 carts, with a loss of 67 3-5 per cent.

Have the Best Last.

He who eats the best grapes from a bunch first and finishes with the poorest on the stem is likely to feel at the end that grapes are very unsatisfactory and that he does not care for any more. But if the last few grapes are good he is more than likely to reach for another bunch. And so it goes with all the gastronomic affairs of life. The dinner that starts off with a very poor soup and works through a mediocre fish to a fair entree, an excellent roast and a superb salad, concluding with unimpeachable coffee and a dessert fit for a queen, leaves a far better impression than a dinner that starts with excellent soup and progresses "downward" steadily to an atrocious finish.—Providence Journal.

A Cool Convict.

A life convict in the Andamans had served some long period when an order recently came for his release. All the time he had been in the band and had evidently so far forgotten that he was a prisoner that on his release he put in a claim for a pension on account of his long and faithful service as a government servant.—Madras Mail.

His Preference.

Woman (in cigar store)—I wish to get a box of cigars for my husband. Clerk—Here's a new brand I think would suit him—the Suffragette. Woman—Oh, dear, no! He prefers a mild domestic.—Judge.

Wise Child.

The little daughter of a prominent divine, whom it would be cruel to name, was recently taken to her father's church for the first time. She was, of course, intensely interested in all that went on.

A true little Yankee, her first remark on coming out was:

"Do all those little boys in nighties get paid for singing?"

"Yes, I suppose so," replied her mother.

"And does father get paid too?"

"Yes."

"Well, I shouldn't think they'd have to pay him much, for he does nothing but talk, and he just loves to do that."—Judge.

PRACTICAL BAKING LESSONS

MUFFINS

When properly made, there is nothing more appetizing for breakfast or tea than muffins, or gems, as they are sometimes called. With honey, preserves or marmalade, they readily make the chief feature of the meal, and there are so many ways to vary them, that one can have a different kind about as often as she likes. Below I give a few choice and successful recipes.

Nevada Briggs

A great many housewives have had trouble in making rich, light, moist muffins without their falling, and to overcome this, they have resorted to making the batter so stiff that when baked, the muffins are very dry. A muffin can be made almost as light and just as palatable as a pop-over, but to make a light, moist muffin which is not soggy in the center, a double-raise baking powder such as K C must be used. K C Baking Powder has two separate and distinct raises: one when moisture is added, and the other when heat is applied, so that the raising is sustained until the muffin is baked through, and all danger of falling and becoming soggy is past.

Like biscuits, the softer the dough goes into the oven, the lighter the muffins that come out of it.

One-Egg Muffins

2 cups flour 1 teaspoonful salt
2 slightly rounded teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder ¼ cup sugar
¼ cup melted lard or butter
1 egg 1 cup water or milk

Sift dry ingredients together three times. Add to this the unbeaten egg, melted shortening and water or milk. Then beat all together until perfectly smooth. Oil muffin or gem pans and have oven slow until the muffins come to the top of the pan, then increase the heat to bake and brown the muffins. This recipe makes 12 large muffins. Raisins or currants may be added if desired.

Graham Muffins

1 cup graham flour 1 cup pastry flour
2 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder
1 to 2 level tablespoonfuls sugar
½ teaspoonful salt 1 egg
1¼ cups milk or water
2 to 3 tablespoonfuls melted butter

Mix and bake as One-Egg Muffins.

Graham batter should always be quite soft to insure lightness and a moist muffin.

Corn Meal Muffins

¼ cup butter ¼ cup sugar
2 eggs, well beaten 1 cup milk or water
1¼ cups corn meal 1¼ cups flour
½ teaspoonful salt
level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder

Cream the butter; add the sugar and eggs. Sift together, three times, the meal, flour, salt and baking powder. Add this to the first mixture alternately with the milk. Bake about twenty-five minutes, baking a little slowly to start, then increase heat to bake brown.

Bacon Muffins

2 cups flour 1 teaspoonful salt
3 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder
¼ cup sugar (if desired)
¼ cup melted lard or butter
4 or 5 slices of bacon fried crisp and broken into small bits 1 cup milk or water

Mix and bake as One-Egg Muffins above.

Date Muffins

¼ cup butter ¼ cup sugar
¾ cup milk or water 1 egg
2 cups pastry flour ½ teaspoonful salt
3 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder
Scant ½ pound dates

Cream the butter, add the sugar and the egg, beaten light. Sift together three times, the flour, baking powder and salt; add these to the first mixture, alternately with the milk; beat thoroughly and add the dates; stoned and cut in pieces. Bake rather slowly to start, increasing heat to brown.

Some Helpful Suggestions

Muffins would be served on many more breakfast tables if this meal were not prepared so hurriedly that there is not time enough to stir up muffins and bake them. With K C double-raise baking powder, the batter may be stirred up the night before and if set in a cool place, it will remain in a partially leavened condition all night, and the raising will be completed when put in the oven in the morning. No difference will be noticed between muffins mixed the night before and those mixed immediately before baking. This should not be attempted however, with any of the old fashioned single-acting baking powders.

The old fashioned way was to bake muffins in a hot oven, but this makes a thick heavy crust and a soggy center, which is unpalatable and hard to digest. The proper and healthful way to bake muffins is to start the oven at a low temperature, just as for baking cakes. When the muffins come up to the top of the pan, the heat should be raised, and they should be baked until a crisp crust is formed. This crust will be thin, and the centers will be found light and fluffy, but thoroughly baked.

Always sift the flour and baking powder together at least three times, no matter what kind of pastry is to be made. This will insure its rising evenly and the flour is lightened by having air sifted into it.

Either water or milk may be used for muffins. Milk will make the richer muffin and brown better, but water will answer the purpose very nicely when milk is not to be had.

A most excellent "spread" for muffins, hot biscuits and hot cakes is made by creaming together about equal parts of butter and honey either strained or in the comb. If the butter is solid it will work up to about the consistency of hard sauce and it is simply delicious.

UNIVERSAL

Why is this brand called for by most of the contractors, masons and farmers around here in preference to all others? Ask them the question.

They will all say "Universal Quality."

It comes in cloth sacks and there is therefore no waste in handling as compared with paper.

WEDS DAUGHTER OF COMRADE IN ARMS

Gettsburg Survivor Figures in Reunion Romance.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Aug. 18.—Friends of John Kress, civil war veteran of this city, learned of a romance in which he participated and which had its culmination in the fiftieth anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg.

Mr. Kress was a participant in that battle and while attending the celebration he met Miss Elizabeth Wheeler of Plainfield, N. J., whom he had first met at a reunion in Los Angeles. At Gettysburg the friendship ripened into love through mutual reminiscences, as Miss Wheeler's father was a participant in the battle and served in the same regiment with Mr. Kress. After the celebration the couple went to New Jersey and was married.

Mr. Kress is seventy-two years old and is thirty years older than his wife. The announcement of the marriage is just made.

CAUGHT WITH BURGLAR KIT

Noblesville Prisoner Believed Guilty of Robbing Grocery.

Noblesville, Ind., Aug. 18.—A stranger giving the name of Frank Williams and Chicago as his residence, when arrested in this city, charged with loitering, was carrying a complete set of burglar tools. He also had in his possession $10 in nickles, dimes and pennies.

The police are making an effort to connect him with the robbery of E. E. Fisher's grocery at an early hour in the morning. More than $40 in change was taken from the cash register.

DON'T EXPERIMENT

You Will Make No Mistake If You Follow This Tecumseh Citizens Advice.

Never neglect your kidneys.

If you have pain in the back, urinary disorders, dizziness and nervousness, its time to act and no time to experiment. These are frequently symptoms of kidney trouble, and a remedy which is recommended for the kidneys should be taken in time.

Doan's Kidney Pills is a good remedy to use. No need to experiment. It has acted effectively in many cases. Tecumseh. Follow the advice of a Tecumseh citizen.

E. C. Brisbine, farmer, N. Democrat St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I began to suffer from kidney complaint twenty years ago and the medicine I took brought me only temporary relief. Often my back ached intensely and the secretions from my kidneys were irregular in passage and highly colored. Doan's Kidney Pills went to the seat of my trouble and did me so much good that I am seldom without a supply on hand." (Statement given December 5, 1918.)

A WILLING CONFIRMATION.

When Mr. Brisbine was interviewed at a later date, he said: "You may continue to use my name as a reference for the merits of Doan's Kidney Pills. Whenever I feel in need of a kidney medicine, I take this preparation and effectively."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Riches.

He is rich or poor according to what he is, not according to what he has.—H. W. Beecher.

Sometimes the symptoms of kidney and bladder trouble are so plain no one can mistake them. Backache weak and lame back with soreness over the kidneys, shorp pains, rheumatism, dull headache, and disturbed sleep, are all indications of a trouble that Foley Kidney Pills will relieve quickly and permanently. Try them. For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

Wisdom.

A wise wife soon learns to manage her husband, while a wise husband never tries to manage his wife.

Mothers! Have Your Children Worms?

Are they feverish, restless, nervous, irritable, dizzy or constipated? Do they continually pick their nose or grind their teeth? Have they cramping pains, irregular and ravenous appetite? These are all signs of worms. Worms not only cause your child suffering, but stunt its mind and growth. Give "Kickapoo Worm Killer" at once. It kills and removes the worms, improves your child's appetite, regulates stomach, liver and bowels. The symptoms disappear and your child is made happy and healthy, as nature intended. All druggists or by mail 25c.

Why They're Trams Abroad.

"Abroad," said a tourist agent, "you must call street cars trams and street railways you must call tramways. The word tram must puzzle the average etymologist. It derives from a man's name—Outram. Thomas Outram. Outram lived in Derbyshire, and in the beginning of the last century he invented a peculiar sort of track that diminished the friction between wheels and roadbeds. These tracks of Outram's, though nothing like a trolley track, were called first outramways, then tramways, and when street lines and street cars came into existence they were dubbed respectively tramways and trams."

THAW ESCAPES FROM ASYLUM

Is Now Safely Out of New York State Jurisdiction.

ACCUSE GUARD OF COMPLICITY

Doubt as to Whether He Can Be Extradited—Superintendent Had Suspected Plan—Gets into Waiting Auto and Is Wisked Away—Evelyn Scared and Mother Pleased.

Fishkill, N. Y., Aug. 18.—Harry Thaw escaped from the Mattewan asylum for the criminal insane just before 8 o'clock in the morning and got clean away. When seen last he was passing Stormville, a village thirteen miles from the hospital in a forty-horse power up-to-date touring car, going at sixty miles an hour or more. Accompanying the large automobile in which sat Thaw was another machine, which aided in the escape. Five men at least were actually concerned in the escape besides Thaw, and an attendant of the hospital, who had charge of the gate through which Thaw walked has been placed under arrest, charged with aiding and abetting the escape.

The object of Thaw and his confederates was the Connecticut state line, thirty-five miles away, and it is certain that they attained their object. As far as the authorities now know Thaw is speeding through Connecticut, or some point north in the machine, accompanied by the other.

Word of the escape has been telephoned and telegraphed to most of the big towns which lay in the direction Thaw probably took, but no word has been received up to late at night with one exception that the fugitives had been seen.

Doubt About Extradition.

One of the queer kinks in the present situation that even if Thaw is located and caught in some other state than New York there is great doubt in the minds of the authorities that he can be brought back to this state.

Dr. Raymond F. C. Kieb, superintendent of the asylum believes that the method of escape was planned several months ago. Dr. Kieb has been superintendent since June 12. He was appointed after the legal proceedings involving Thaw, which caused the dismissal of Dr. John Russell, the former superintendent, against whom some testimony was brought that Thaw had planned to use money to get away.

MOTHER GLAD; WIFE SCARED

Harry Thaw's Escape Causes Wife to Ask Protection.

New York, Aug. 18.—"Surprised?—oh yes, and not sorry either," was Mrs. William Copley Thaw's comment on the escape of her son, Harry K. Thaw from Matteawan.

"We've had about enough of this business," she went on to say. "Harry's affairs have served long enough as a bread and butter getter for a lot of people."

Mrs. Thaw, who is staying at the hotel Gotham with her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. George Law Carnegie, spoke with quiet satisfaction, frequently in a humorous vein about her son's escape.

As soon as Evelyn Nesbit Thaw heard of her husband's escape she asked for protection. She declared she believed her life in danger and, accordingly, she was given police protection. She is also being guarded by a private detective hired by Arthur Hammerstein. This detective accompanied her to and from the Victoria theater, where she is performing in vaudeville.

William Travers Jerome, who, while district attorney sent Thaw to the asylum and thereafter successfully resisted all attempts of the young man to gain freedom, was told late in the day of Thaw's escape. He said he would make no comment then, except that he was afraid Thaw would attack him.

Story of the Vote In Fiji.

The Indian merchants in Fiji in municipal elections vote solid for the wealthy storekeeper and landowner, who, says Ralf Stock in "Confessions of a Tenderfoot," represent vested interests and owe them money.

On one occasion that is fresh in the mind of every one in Suva, these Indian merchants were rounded up and driven to the polls like sheep, well primed beforehand to vote for we shall say Johnson and Jacobson. These instructions had been so impressed upon them that their vocabulary for days consisted of nothing but "Johnson and Jacobson." "Move up there," said the clerk of a polling booth on the great day to a line of apprehensive Indians. "D'your hear? Move up!" "Johnson and Jacolson," answered the latter as one man.

Before the Bar.

The terms "admitted to the bar" and "before the bar" are of English origin. The "bar" in question is the barrier or railing which separates the judge and the other officers of the court from the rest of the courtroom. In earlier days the parties to a suit presented themselves before the bar, accompanied by their counsel. A lawyer, after keeping the required number of terms at the Inns of court and passing a satisfactory examination, was then entitled to appear before the bar on behalf of a client, or, in other words, he was "admitted to the bar." The English word barrister suggests the technical meaning of this word.

AN INFERNAL MACHINE

It Excited a Commotion, but Did Not Go Off

By GROVER J. GRIFFIN

"Captain," said the third officer of the ocean liner Tartaric, saluting his chief, "the baggagemaster reports a box in the hold in which there is some mechanical contrivance that ticks."

"Well, what of it?"

"There was talk of anarchists blowing up the ship before we left. I should suppose that in view of such talk it might be well to examine the box with a view to discovering if it contains an infernal machine."

"Where is the box now?"

"In the hold."

"Get it up into the baggage room, and I'll have a look at it."

Later Captain Chambliss inspected the box. It was rectangular in shape, about two feet long by eighteen inches broad and deep. On the cover was the name Ethan B. Jenkins.

"Who's Mr. Jenkins?" asked the captain.

Nobody knew.

"Send for the purser."

The purser came, and the captain asked him if there was a passenger aboard of the name of Jenkins. The purser said there was and dispatched a steward to look for him and send him to the baggage room. Mr. Jenkins was a dapper little man, who looked no more like an anarchist than a Hottentot.

"What's in the box?" asked the captain.

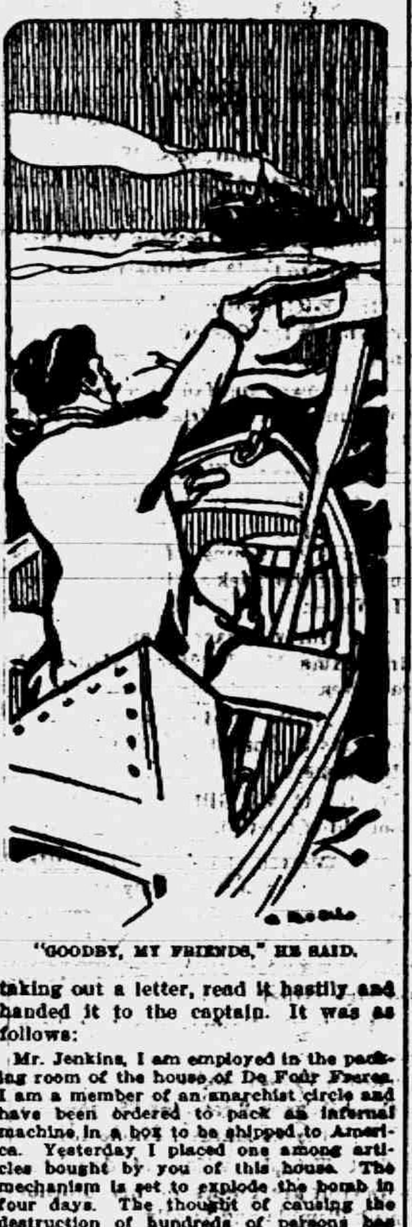
"Articles picked up abroad intended as presents for my friends."

"Is there a clock in it?"

"Not that I am aware of."

"Listen."

All were silent, and the ticking was distinctly heard by all. A great change came over the face of Mr. Jenkins. He looked terror stricken. He seemed to be thinking hard for a few moments; then, thrusting his hand into his breast coat pocket, he drew out an envelope and, taking out a letter, read it hastily and handed it to the captain. It was as follows:



"GOODBY, MY FRIENDS," HE SAID.

> Mr. Jenkins, I am employed in the packing room of the house of De Four Freres. I am a member of an anarchist circle and have been ordered to pack an infernal machine in a box to be shipped to America. Yesterday I placed one among articles bought by you of this house. The mechanism is set to explode the bomb in four days. The thought of causing the destruction of hundreds of persons has palled on me. I am horrified at what I have done and write this letter that you may avoid the consequences of my act. Do not attempt to open the box. If you are at sea throw it overboard. I leave De Four Freres at once and cannot be found.

There was no signature to the letter, nor anything by which the anarchist could be identified, for it had been written and addressed by a typewriter.

"Why did you not take action to get rid of the thing at once?" inquired the captain sternly.

"I thought it was a hoax. My nephew, Charlie Burns, is always playing practical jokes on me, and I had no doubt that this was one of them."

"Heave the thing overboard at once!" cried the captain.

"Not on your life!" interposed the owner. "There are things in that box which I would not take thousands of dollars for. What need for hurry? The letter says the machine is set to fire the bomb in four days. This is only the third day."

"I don't care if it's only the first," snapped the captain. "I'm not going to endanger the ship and those aboard by carrying an infernal machine. Take it out and heave it overboard, I say."

"I protest in presence of the persons present that if you do I'll hold the company for damages. There is no necessity to send such valuable property to the bottom. In the first place, as you already know, the machine is set to go off in four days from the date it was packed. It was packed the day we sailed; therefore it will not explode till we are near the American coast. I'm not sure it will explode at all. It may be that it's a joke perpetrated by that fellow Burns after all. If so he wouldn't hesitate to put a clock in the box to make it worse. I wish I had him here now to punch his head. This isn't the first time he's caused me trouble by his pranks."

"What do you propose?" asked the captain. "If you think the matter a hoax you'd better open the box and find out whether it is or not."

"And blow up your ship as well as myself if it's a real infernal machine?"

The captain, evidently, had not thought of that. He looked confused.

"I tell you what you do, captain," continued Jenkins. "Tow it."

The captain looked relieved. He told the purser to take down a list of the articles in the box from the owner, with their values, so that in case the box were lost the amount of claim would be limited. But he did not want to have this done before getting rid of the box. He directed one of the crew, so carry it to the upper deck, where the lifeboats were swung on the davits, and put it in one of the lockers intended for provisions, wedging it so that it would not slide about with the motion of the waves. This was done. The boat was lowered, a cable attached to her bow, and she was suffered to drift a hundred yards astern.

While this was being done the captain gave orders that what was in the boat, or rather what was supposed to be in the boat, be confined to those who were in the baggage room when the matter was discussed. He did not consider that a bomb a hundred yards away from the ship could endanger her.

The Tartaric sighted Fire island on the fourth day out. She was twelve knots east of Montauk point just before daylight on the morning of the fifth day. A man stood on the after deck of the ship, where the cable that towed the lifeboat was attached. He tied loosely to the rope a pair of oars, which drifted back to the lifeboat. Then he fixed to the rope a clutch with handles like those of a pair of tinner's shears. Grasping the handles, he swung himself off the stern and let himself down slowly till he reached the water. The pressure against him exerted by the headway of the ship was so great that he would not have been able to maintain his hold had it not been for this clutch. By its use he let himself be slowly forced backward till he reached the lifeboat and pulled himself up by the cable on to its bow.

Once in the boat he cast an eye to the westward, where shone a light, which he recognized as one on Montauk point. Taking from the bow the oars he had sent before him, he put them in the boat. Then he cast off and was left astern. As the dark body of the Tartaric grew darker in the distance he smiled and raised his hat to her.

"Goodby, my friends," he said. "I think I can now get on without your valuable assistance."

Taking the box from the locker in which it had been placed, he ripped it open with a screwdriver he drew from his pocket, took out a clock, which he threw overboard, and a small package, which he concealed in a pocket of his flannel shirt. Then, beginning to shiver with the cold, he took up the oars and pulled for the light on Montauk point.

By this time a streak of gray light appeared in the east end, in due time the sun came up, but the man in the boat did not need its warmth to dry his clothes, for the beat of his body, kept up by the exercise of rowing, had already done that. He was making slow progress, for one man pulling on so large a boat could not move it rapidly. However, by 9 o'clock in the morning he was but half a dozen miles from the Long Island coast, and, a motorboat passing him, he made a bargain with the man running her to take him ashore.

Once on terra firma, leaving his boat hauled up on a beach, he started inland till he came to a town, where he hired a horse and buggy to carry him to the northern coast of the island. There he chartered a motorboat to take him across the sound to Saybrook, where he boarded a Long Island eastbound train for Boston. Arriving there in the afternoon, he purchased clothing and, dropping into a diamond dealer's, took from his pocket the package he had taken from the box supposed to contain the infernal machine, unrolled it and displayed a dozen enormous diamonds. Before leaving the shop he sold a number of them to the dealer and early the next morning parted with the rest of his stock, realising a handsome profit between what the stones had originally cost him at the diamond mines and what he received for them. He had reached the end of a series of brilliant impostures to defraud the customs.

On the morning of the day the Tartaric arrived in port an officer announced to the captain that the lifeboat astern was missing. The captain, surprised, asked if the owner of the box had been notified, and, on being told that he had not, a steward was sent to find him. Later the messenger returned to say that Mr. Jenkins was missing. The captain looked astonished; then a light broke in upon his brain.

"A smuggling dodge!" he exclaimed. "Keep it from the inspectors."

Before the Tartaric sailed again her captain had been notified that a lifeboat with his ship's name on the bow was lying on a beach on the eastern end of Long Island. He gave orders to have it shipped by water to New York, but asked no questions as to how it came there.

Curious English Dialects.

Our English dialects are probably as diverse as any. Put a Cornish miner and a Northumberland miner together for the first time and each would only have a faint glimmering of the meaning of the other's speech. What would the Cornishman think of "What mak' o' yan is sha?" He would express the same meaning in "What be her like, then?" The ordinary English, of course, is, "What's she like?" I have known a Londoner, fresh to the fine Dorset dialect, completely bewildered by a farm laborer's talk. He could only get a glint of meaning here and there.—London Chronicle.

H. K. THAW FREE

Is Now Safely Out of New York State Jurisdiction.

ACCUSE GUARD OF COMPLICITY

Doubt as to Whether He Can Be Extradited—Superintendent Had Suspected Plan—Gets Into Waiting Auto and Is Whisked Away—Evelyn Scared and Mother Pleased.

> THAW-WHITE TRAGEDY.
>
> Thaw met Evelyn Nesbit, chorus girl protege of Stanford White early in 1904 and married her in 1905 in Pittsburgh.
>
> Had detectives follow White for over a year in New York.
>
> Saw White while dining with Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw at Madison Square roof garden June 25, 1906; walked over to White's table and shot and killed him.
>
> Brought to first trial Jan. 21, 1907, in criminal branch of New York supreme court; case dragged three months and jury disagreed.
>
> Faced second trial a year later and was found insane in verdict Feb. 1, 1908; immediately taken to Matteawan asylum.
>
> Made fight for his release; bribe of $25,000 offered to gain freedom in February, 1913.
>
> Escaped from Matteawan asylum Aug. 17, 1913.

COATICOOK, QUE.—A man supposed to be Harry Thaw is under arrest here.

NEW YORK—Harry Kendall Thaw made his escape from the Matteawan asylum for the criminal insane just before 8 o'clock in the morning and got clean away. When seen last he was passing Stormville, a village thirteen miles from the hospital in a forty-horse power up-to-date touring car, going at sixty miles an hour or more. Accompanying the large automobile in which sat Thaw was another machine, which aided in the escape. Five men at least were actually concerned in the escape besides Thaw, and an attendant of the hospital, who had charge of the gate through which Thaw walked has been placed under arrest, charged with aiding and abetting the escape.

The object of Thaw and his confederates was the Connecticut state line, thirty-five miles away, and it is certain that they attained their object. As far as the authorities now know Thaw is speeding through Connecticut, or some point north in the machine, accompanied by the other.

One of the queer kinks in the present situation that even if Thaw is located and caught in some other state than New York there is great doubt in the minds of the authorities that he can be brought back to this state.

The asylum authorities believe that Thaw fled to Long Island sound and there boarded an ocean going yacht waiting to take him to Europe. It is known that a party of three arrived at South Norwalk in a big touring car showing signs of having come considerable distance and immediately went on board a yacht which quickly put to sea.

Mrs. Thaw, who is staying at the hotel Gotham with her daughter and son-inlaw, Mr. and Mrs. George Law Carnegie, spoke with quiet satisfaction, frequently in a humorous vein about her son's escape.

As soon as Evelyn Nesbit Thaw heard of her husband's escape she asked for protection. She declared she believed her life in danger and, accordingly, she was given police protection. She is also being guarded by a private detective hired by Arthur Hammerstein. This detective accompanied her to and from the Victoria theater, where she is performing in vaudeville.

MAKE WAR ON COCKROACHES

Ten Gallons of Gasoline Burned in Saginaw to Kill Pests.

SAGINAW, MICH — The Saginaw fire department was called out to extinguish a blaze which extended from the Gouessee avenue to the Johnson street bridges, along the river, on the west side. The fire was set by fifty men, who had been trained to their posts.

Ten gallons of gasoline was used, and the objectof the blaze was to suffocate millions of cockroaches, which have camped on the lowland and invaded the flour mills.

SHERLOCKO IS FOILED

Port Huron, Mich., Man's False Wiskers Flush the Game.

PORT HURON, MICH. — William Porter, alias Morrison, is alleged to have stolen $300 from John Stahl, a guest at the St. Cloud hotel in this city.

Instead of reporting the matter to the police, Stahl is alleged to have enlisted the services of his brother-in-law, who donned a set of false whiskers and goggles and started to play detective. The suspect took alarm and decamped.

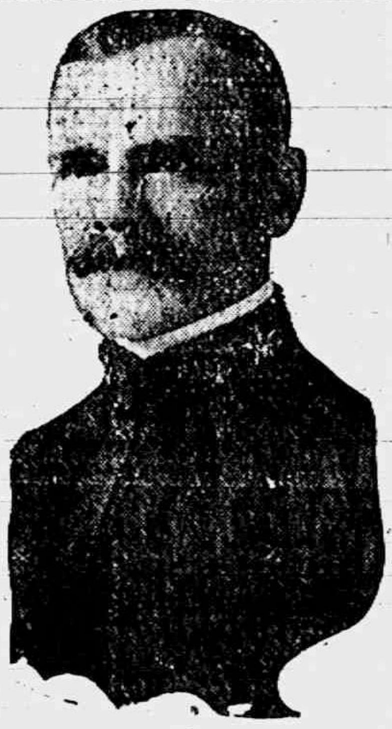
LIEUT. COL. GAILLARD

Man Who Dug Famous Cut in the Panama Canal Breaks Down.



Lieutenant Colonel David Du Bois Gaillard, corps of engineers, U. S. A., who since the army took over the construction of the Panama canal in 1906 has been the engineer officer in charge of the central division of that great work, a division that includes the world famed Culebra cut, arrived in New York on the Panama liner Advance suffering from a severe nervous collapse due to his arduous work of seven years in the canal zone.

CIRCUIT JUDGE SAYS BUS SIGNS LIBEL HIM

Has Owner Arrested for Campaign of Abuse.

CADILLAC, MICH. — Cassius Bowser, of Lake City, will appear before Justice A. E. Rupright Aug. 29 to answer a charge of criminal libel preferred by Judge Fred Lamb, of the circuit court, against whom Bowser has been conducting a campaign of abuse by means of signs on the sides of his omnibus.

The attacks began last year after Bowser lost a suit before Judge Lamb and resulted in the court's sentencing him to ninety days in jail for contempt.

He recently renewed his attacks and the criminal libel charge followed.

DEPUTIES IN CUSTODY

Six Are Charged with Murder in Calumet Strike Trouble.

CALUMET, MICH.—Six state warrants charging murder were issued in Houghton against the two local deputies and four Waddell detectives who were concerned in the killing of two strikers in Painesdale a short time ago.

Only two of the deputies, however, have been arrested. They are Edward Polkinghern and Harry James, both local men and members of the sheriff's staff for months before the strike broke. The other four, Detectives Rawley, Cooper, Groof and Davis, members of Waddell's staff, have disappeared.

Sheriff Cruse, after refusing for twenty-four hours to comply with the demand of Prosecuting Attorney Lucas that he arrest all six of the men later on advice of his personal counsel, decided to comply and a member of his staff swore to the complaints.

VAULT DOORS HOLD; BANK MEETS CRISIS

Calumet Institution Forced to Borrow $200,000 Quick.

CALUMET, MICH — With the big steel doors of its vaults resisting every effort to open them for a whole day, the First National Bank of Calumet has just tided over a crisis only by its ability to borrow over $200,000 in cash within two hours.

At noon the vaults were entered through a hole in the steel and cement walls by a corps of expert drillers and electricians. The First National bank does a big deposit business and had known demands of $120,000 to meet Saturday, besides facing the miners' July pay day, which often requires $150,000.

Attempting to open the big doors shortly before 9 o'clock bank officials were thrown into a near panic by the discovery that something had gone wrong. It was at first supposed that the big time lock had been erroneously set. After half an hour's wait rush requests for cash were sent out to copper country banks from Copper Range to Keweena. The banks here carry heavy cash supplies and the amount necessary for the First National was soon assembled. The situation was kept secret a day.

SCHOOL DAYS HONORED

Thirty-five Pioneers Enjoy Recollections at Bloomfield Center, Mich.

BLOOMFIELD CENTER, MICH.—The memory of the "little red school house" was honored Thursday by thirty-five pioneers, ranging from sixty-five to eighty years in age, who once romped about the premises in their youth.

Men and women from all over Michigan and Ohio were here to celebrate the occasion. The building was torn down several years ago and a brick structure erected. The former pupils gathered in the class room in the morning, where an old-fashioned spelling bee was held, and questions in geography were asked. A recess followed with a picnic lunch.

"Prisoner's goal," "pull away," and "bull-in-the-ring" were played. One aged woman wept as she returned home. Harston Barnum, president of the First National bank of Port Huron, was the "pedagogue."

ONE IS DEAD, TWO ARE HURT

Copper Striker and Two Deputy Sheriffs Victims in Michigan.

CALUMET, MICH. — One striking copper miner was killed and two deputy sheriffs were wounded in the first fatal outbreak of the copper miners' strike. The fight took place at Seeberville, an Italion miners' settlemen. The miner was killed resisting arrest.

The deputies went to Seeberville to get two strikers who had forced the line of guards at the Champion mine of the Copper Range Consolidated company. The two strikers, though without passes, refused to be halted by the guards.

Later, when deputies went to Seeberville to arrest them, the strikers gathered and attacked the peace officers with bottles and revolvers.

FROM "KIVER TO KIVER"

Niles Mail Carrier Seems to Know Bible by Heart.

NILES, MICH.—Niles' City Mail Carrier, William F. Putman, returned from Winona lake assembly bearing fresh laurels of victory as a great memorizer of Scripture.

For the third consecutive year he won the Bible contest memory test and downed fourteen of the best Bible students in the middle west. The test comprised 104 questions covering points in all the books from Genesis to Revelations.

Mr. Putman after beating all his competitors, gave the correct answers to every one of the 104 questions. Putman seems to know the Bible from cover to cover. Ministers all over this region call on Putman for aid. He has been chaplain for several years of the Michigan Letter Carriers' association.

SAGINAW WOMAN IS ROBBED

Loses $442 and Bank Book While on Detroit Car.

DETROIT, MICH. — Pickpockets robbed Mrs. J. L. Fox, of Saginaw, of $442 and a bank book on the Central Savings bank, while she was a passenger on a Grand River car between Grand River avenue and Locust street and the interurban depot at Griswold and Larned streets.

Mrs. Fox was visiting in Detroit and did not discover her loss until she was half way to Saginaw on an interurban car. She returned to Detroit and notified the police. The money was in four $100 bills; three $10 bills, two $5 bills and one $2 bill.

PETOSKEY—While she was carrying three jars of jelly to the basement of her home, Mrs. Frank Dormer slipped and landed in a tub of water, the shock causing her to faint. The noise brought her guests to the scene, and mistaking the jelly splattered over her face and arms for blood they telephoned for a nearby physician. In the meantime Mrs. Dormer revived and graciously served the doctor with jelly when he appeared.

LANSING—A most vigorous campaign to enforce the city charter requirement that all bread sold in Lansing shall be either in sixteen or thirty-two-ounce loaves, was inaugurated, when the city sealer of weights and measures, Arthur P. Rogers, made an inspection of bread weights. With three exceptions all loaves were found to be under weight. Ten different makes of bread were inspected by the city official.

BAY CITY — Sister Mary Hilda, a member of the order of Sisters of Mercy, under whose direction Mercy hospital was established here thirteen years ago, and who has been its superior since, has retired from the institution's management and gone to the mother house in Big Rapids. Sister Mary Baptist, for ten years surgical head of Mercy hospital, succeeds as superior.

FLINT—With solemn and impressive ceremonies, the cornerstone of the new administration building of the Michigan School for the Deaf, was laid by Grand Master Dr. Francis D. D. Clarke, of the Grand lodge, F. & A. M., under whose auspices the event was conducted.

PONTIAC — Charles Mills, who was fifty-six years old, a life-long resident of this city, committed suicide by shooting himself through the head. He was one of the best informed electricians in the state and had made a lifelong stduy of the business.

SEBEWAING—During an exciting trap-shooting contest at a farmer's picnic at Unionville, Victor Spring, fourteen years old, was shot in the back when a shotgun in the hands of one of the contestants was accidentally discharged.

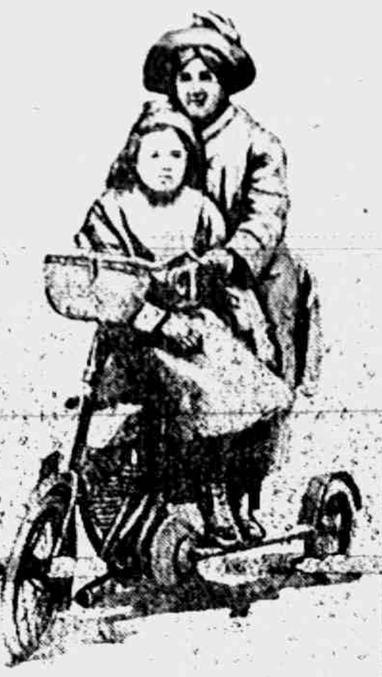
HELPS FOR THE BUSY HOUSEWIFE

Three Wheel Motorcycle For Shopping Expeditions.



A motorcycle, designed for shopping and visiting, is shown in the accompanying illustration. It can be driven, says Popular Mechanics Magazine, at a walking pace, if desired, and, on account of the wide spacing of the two wheels at the back of the machine, it is not easily overturned. The basket at the front can be replaced by one providing a seat for the baby.

Make a Note of These.

In the hot weather a good butter cooler can be made by soaking a brick in cold water, wrapping it in a wet cloth and placing it in the shade. The evaporation of the water will keep the brick cold.

If tiny corks are tacked on the back of the lower corners of picture frames they will prevent the line of black dust forming on the wall paper which so often prevents rehanging pictures.

When baking cakes, particularly where a gas stove is used, the pan which contains the cake should be put inside another tin which has a layer of sand. This will prevent it from burning.

To boil milk without fear of burning, put two or three tablespoonfuls of water in the saucepan; let it boil rapidly for two or three minutes; add the milk, and it will not burn, however fierce the fire may be.

A good cleaning paste for enameled baths, zinc pails, etc., is made of equal parts of shaved yellow soap, whiting and common soda, dissolved over the fire in the least possible amount of water required to keep it from burning.

Not Bothered by the Cry of "Ice, Ice!"

There are often times when the woman who does her own work finds the calls of the various tradesmen very inconvenient. She comes downstairs to see one man and no sooner gets upstairs again than another comes, and by the time the morning is over it seems to her she has done nothing but wear out the stairs.

A woman in a small town who found the iceman her greatest trouble hit upon a scheme to fit his case, which has been a great help to her. She made a small sign, on one side of which she painted the figures "25" and on the other "50." She hangs this card on her back porch before she goes upstairs to do her morning work and indicates by the number shown just how many pounds of ice she needs that day. The iceman puts the ice in the refrigerator without bothering her, and the sign is a great convenience to him as well as to the woman.

Helpful Hint For Preserving Time.

This summer when you are preserving your pineapple be sure you put it through the meat grinder. You will be surprised to find how much time it will save and incidentally your fingers, because every one in grating pineapple has the painful experience usually of grating off part of the skin of the fingers too. It is wonderful what a labor saving scheme this is and you will be overjoyed how quickly the work can be accomplished, and, of course, this is an item to be considered when doing preserving in the hot weather.

When Moving Pictures.

People who stand their family portraits against the walls while packing and unpacking their household goods cause a great deal of broken glass, scratches and dents. The first thing to be done when moving into your new home should be to hang the pictures anywhere, in order to get them out of the way, without waiting to choose a scheme of arrangement. This will prevent a great deal of breakage and other damage.

Smoke Marks on Ceilings.

To remove smoke marks from ceilings mix a thick paste of starch and water and with a clean flannel spread it over the mark. Allow it to get thoroughly dry, then brush off with a soft brush and the marks will have disappeared.

Irish Crochet Shirt Waist Sets.

Pretty sets for the tailored blouse of silk or linen consists of bar and collar pins, belt pin and cuff links, also buttons for front closing.

A Dog Groom.

The dog and the horse often become great friends and are very fond of each other. A gentleman had a Newfoundland dog that always went to the stable to get his horse. While the groom saddled the horse the dog lay with his nose between his paws.

When the horse was ready the dog took the reins in his mouth and led the horse to his master. He then followed him in his ride.

On returning the rein was given to the dog, and he led his friend back to the stable. If the groom happened to be out of the stable the dog barked loudly till he came.

A Ring Trick.

A scientific experiment which will interest young and old is to hang from the ceiling a thread which has been soaked in very salty water and then dried.

To this fasten a very light ring and announce that you are about to burn the thread without making the ring fall. The thread will burn, it is true, but the ashes it leaves are made up of crystals of salt, and they are strong enough to bear the light weight of the ring tied to the thread.

NEW CHANGE IN PARCEL POST RATES.

WENT INTO EFFECT AUGUST 15, 1913.

New Parcel Post rates went into effect August 15, 1913. The new rates effect all parcels shipped for delivery in the first and second zones. The limit of weight for parcels for fourth class mail delivery in first and second zones is increased from eleven to twenty pounds.

The rate for parcels for local delivery exceeding four ounces in weight will be 5c for the first pound and one cent for each additional two pounds.

The rate for the first and second zones will be five cents for the first pound and one cent for each additional pound.

There is no change in the rate or weight limit of the other zones.

It will be noticed that this is quit a reduction in the price of shipment in all parcels for delivery in the first and second zones, also that parcels will be received for delivery in the first and second zones weighing up to twenty pounds instead of eleven as formally.

The usual postage stamp will now be good for Parcel Post packages as well as postal matter.

Read the following table and cut out for reference.

To the Electors and Women Tax Payers having the Qualifications of Male Electors in the Township of Tecumseh, County of Lenawee, Michigan.

Notice is hereby given that a special election has been called and will be held for the purpose, at the time and in the manner stated in the preamble and resolution adopted by the township board of the Township of Tecumseh, at its meeting held on the 15th day of August, 1913, of which the following is a true copy:

WHEREAS; The township board of the Township of Tecumseh, Lenawee county, Michigan, on the 15th day of August, 1913, adopted a resolution or ordinance granting a public utility franchise to the Tecumseh Electric Company, which said resolution or ordinance is in the words and figures following:

AN ORDINANCE OR RESOLUTION.

Granting to the Tecumseh Electric Company, a corporation, its successors and assigns, the right, power and authority to construct, acquire, maintain and use electric lines, consisting of towers, masts, poles, cross-arms, guys, braces, feeders, transmission wires, transformers and other electrical appliances, on, along and across the highways and other public places in and through the Township of Tecumseh, Lenawee county, Michigan, for the period of thirty years.

The township board of the Township of Tecumseh, Lenawee county, Michigan, ordains:

SECTION 1. That whenever the word "grantee" appears in this ordinance, it is thereby intended to designate and shall thereby be held to mean the Tecumseh Electric Company, a corporation, its successors and assigns.

SECTION 2. The right, power and authority is hereby granted to and vested in the Tecumseh Electric Company, its successors and assigns, to construct, acquire, maintain and use electric lines, consisting of towers, masts, poles, cross-arms, guys, braces, feeders, transmission wires, transformers and other electrical appliances on, along and across the highways and other public places in and through the Township of Tecumseh, Lenawee county, Michigan, for the period of thirty years.

SECTION 3. No highway or public place used by said grantee shall be obstructed longer than necessary during the work of construction, and shall be restored to the same good order and condition as when said work was commenced. No part of said highways or public places shall be permitted to remain in a dangerous or unsafe condition by reason of anything done or permitted to be done by the grantee, and it shall be liable for such damages as may be suffered by any corporation or person by reason of its negligence in the use of the highways or public places.

SECTION 4. All towers, masts and poles shall be set and all wires shall be suspended in a careful and proper manner, and in accordance with the reasonable regulations now in force in the township or that may hereafter be adopted by the township board.

SECTION 5. The said grantee shall be entitled to supply the said township and the inhabitants thereof with electric current for light, heat and power, and to charge for such electric current eleven cents per Kilowatt Hour, as registered by standard recording Watt meters, less ten per centum discount on bills paid at the office of the company on or before the tenth day of the month succeeding that in which the service was rendered.

SECTION 6. In consideration of the rights, powers, authority and privileges herein granted, all of which upon the acceptance hereof by the grantee shall, except as herein otherwise provided, become and be vested in it for the full period of thirty years from the date of such acceptance, the said grantee shall faithfully perform all things required by the terms hereof, and such performance by the grantee shall be in lieu of all license fees and charges of every name and nature, except general taxes which the township might otherwise levy or impose.

SECTION 7. The rights, powers, authority and privileges herein granted are not exclusive.

SECTION 8. This ordinance and the acceptance hereof shall constitute a contract by and between the grantee and the Township of Tecumseh. Provided, however, that the same may be revoked by the Township of Tecumseh at any time, unless it shall be submitted to the electors of said township at a regular or special election and shall receive the affirmative vote of three-fifths of the electors of the Township of Tecumseh voting thereon at such election, And

WHEREAS, it is the wish of the grantee named in said ordinance and of this board that said ordinance and proposition be submitted to the electors of the Township of Tecumseh, and women tax payers having the qualifications of male electors at a special election to be called for that purpose, therefore be it

RESOLVED, That a special election of the Township of Tecumseh, Lenawee county, Michigan, be and the same is hereby called to be held at the council building in said township on the 3d day of September, 1913, for the purpose of voting on the approval of said public utility franchise.

RESOLVED FURTHER, That at said special election the polls shall be open at seven o'clock in the morning, or as soon thereafter as may be, and shall be kept open until five o'clock in the afternoon, at which hour they shall be finally closed; that notice of the time and place of holding such election, and the question to be voted upon, be given by the township clerk within four days after this date by posting the same in three public places in this township, and by causing a copy of said notice to be published in the Herald at least five days before the date of such meeting; that the notice may be in the following form:

(See the foregoing.)

Dated, August 15, 1913, Township of Tecumseh. B. J. PULVER, Township clerk.

Hot Cities Have No Chance, Says Mack

The teams in "the two hot cities," as he calls them, have practically no chance to win pennants in the big leagues, said Connie Mack, manager of the Athletics, recently. "A ball team in Washington or St. Louis will have to be 20 per cent stronger than any of its rivals to finish on top," he declared. "The heat and humidity rob the players of their vitality. I caught in Washington three seasons and know. St. Louis is nearly as bad. Even when the Athletics play a brief series in those towns they leave with less life than they entered with. A team that has to play in such weather half the time suffers more, of course. In Cincinnati it's a good deal the same."

Giants, Phillies and Dodgers Big Payers

Only three National league clubs—the Giants, Brooklyns and Philadelphias—are making big money this season. In the west reports indicate a marked falling off in gate receipts in Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Cincinnati and Chicago. The poor work of the Pirates has caused a slump in the Smoky City, which is a hardship for visiting clubs. The turnstiles in St. Louis are growing rusty, while small crowds are paying to see the Reds at home. The Cubs haven't drawn as well as in former years for various reasons. The Boston Nationals will make more money this year than at any time since they were owned by Soden, Billings and Conant.

Lee Tannehill Has New Job.

Lee Tannehill, former infielder of the Kansas City club of the American Association, is now a member of the Minneapolis team. Tannehill was purchased by Manager Joseph Cantillon of Minneapolis from the Kansas City club just before the departure of that team for Milwaukee.

REGISTRATION NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given to the Qualified Electors of the Township of Tecumseh, County of Lenawee, State of Michigan, that a meeting of the Board of Registration of said township will be held at the Council Building, within said township, on Saturday, August 23, A. D. 1913, for the purpose of registering the names of all such persons who shall be possessed of the necessary qualifications of electors at the special election to be held Wednesday, September 3 who may apply for that purpose.

WOMEN ELECTORS

In accordance with Section 4 of Article 3 of the Constitution of the State of Michigan and Act No. 206 Public Acts of 1909, the Board of Registration of said township will register the names of all women possessing the qualifications of male electors who make PERSONAL APPLICATION for such registration; PROVIDED, that all such applicants must own property assessed for taxes somewhere within the county above named, except that any woman otherwise qualified, who owns property within said county jointly with her husband or other person, or who owns property within said county on contract and pays the taxes thereon, shall be entitled to registration. Following are the qualifications of male electors in the Stat of Michigan.

Every male inhabitant of this state, being a citizen of the United States; every male inhabitant residing in this state on the twenty-fourth day of June, eighteen hundred thirty-five; every male inhabitant residing in this state on the first day of January, eighteen hundred fifty; every male inhabitant of foreign birth who, having resided in this state two years and six months prior to the eighth day of November, eighteen hundred ninety-four; and having declared his intention to become a citizen of the United States two years and six months prior to said last named day: and every civilized male inhabitant of Indian desent, a native of the United States and not a native of any tribe shall be an elector and entitled to vote: but no one shall be an elector or entitled to vote at any election unless he shall be above the age of twenty-one years, and has resided in this state six months and in the township or ward in which he offers to vote twenty days next preceeding such election.

Said Board of Registration will be in session on the day and at the place aforesaid from 9 o'clock in the forenoon until 5 in the afternoon for the purpose aforesaid.

Dated this 15th day of August, A. D. 1913,

B. J. PULVER,
Clerk of said Township.

Floral Turncoat.

A novel flower has been found at the isthmus of Tehuantepec. This flower changes its colors during the day. In the morning it is white; while the sun is at its zenith it is red, and at night it is blue. The red, white and blue flower grows on a tree about the size of a guava tree, and only at noon does it give out any perfume.

A Good Reason.

Little five-year-old Lloyd when coming through the yard one evening at dusk bumped into a tree. On his arriving home he explained to his mother his trouble. She asked him if he cried. "No," replied Lloyd, "'cause there wasn't anybody there to hear me."

A Resemblance.

One day last summer little four-year-old Dottie came into the house looking much frightened and exclaiming, "Oh, please hurry and come out to my playhouse to see the Teddy bear bug." There was a big brown furry caterpillar on the porch of her playhouse.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

Coach Courtney Will Surely Retire.

Charles E. Courtney, the veteran coach of the Cornell university crews, will cease work as the head of the Cornell navy when his contract ends three years hence. The fact became known through a statement issued recently by Mr. Courtney. He says he may continue with the navy in an advisory capacity, but will no longer take the full responsibility of fitting the oarsmen for their grueling races. Courtney has been head coach at Cornell for twenty-eight years and has developed many winning crews.

Doyle to Umpire In World's Tour.

Jack Doyle, the former New York first baseman and since then umpire in the National league, has been named as one of the umpires for the Giants-White Sox world tour next fall. Doyle umpired in the International league after leaving the National. There is talk of appointing Kid Gleason as the other arbiter for the trip. If he gets the billet it will be one more experience in a long and varied baseball career. Time was when the Kid was known as Sparrow Gleason. Back in the dim past he was a pitcher and played with the Phillies and the St. Louis club before he became second baseman for the Orioles. He also played second base for the Detroit Americans at one time and afterward for the Giants during the Joyce regime. The last few seasons he has been with the White Sox in the capacity of coach and coacher. There is a difference between a coach and a coacher. One coaches—instructs and advises—the other gets upon the line during games.

PRACTICAL BAKING LESSONS

PUDDINGS

In this lesson we will treat on puddings, both baked and steamed. The secret of getting light, palatable pudding is in not baking or steaming too fast. The pudding must have a slow even heat until it has become light and porous. If directions below are followed failure is impossible.

Nevada Briggs

Marble Pudding

2 cups sifted pastry flour
2 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder
¼ teaspoonful cinnamon
¼ teaspoonful salt ½ cup sugar
Yolks of 2 eggs, beaten light
4 tablespoonfuls melted butter
½ cup cold water
Whites of 2 eggs, beaten dry
1½ ounces melted chocolate

Sift together, three times, the flour, baking powder, salt and cinnamon. To the yolks add the sugar, butter and water, and stir into the dry ingredients. Add the whites of the eggs. Divide the mixture into two parts and add the chocolate to one part. Dispose the two parts in a buttered mold to give a marbled appearance. Steam forty-five minutes.

In mixing egg and sugar, use a rotary egg beater making a light creamy mixture of egg yolks and sugar. In steaming pudding have low blaze under the water for at least the first 15 minutes, giving the pudding time to rise before cooking.

Serve with Vanilla Sauce.

Vanilla Sauce

Boil 1 cup of sugar and ½ cup of water six minutes; add 2 teaspoonfuls of butter and a teaspoonful of vanilla extract.

Cherry Pudding

2 cups sifted pastry flour
2 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder
½ teaspoonful salt ¼ cup butter
2 eggs ¾ cup milk (scant)
Cherries
Salt or 1 tablespoon butter

Sift together three times, the flour, baking powder, and salt and work in the butter; beat eggs, add milk to eggs and stir into the flour. Half fill a baking pan with cherries, add bits of butter and pour batter over top of cherries, and bake slowly for fifteen minutes, then increase heat and bake until pastry is done. Turn on a plate with cherries uppermost, serve with hard sauce or very sweet cherry juice. Other fruits, such as apples, peaches, apricots, berries or bananas may be used.

Hard Sauce

Cream ¼ cup butter with ½ cup sugar and flavor to suit, putting over pudding when pudding is still warm.

Prune Kuchen

2 cups sifted pastry flour
2 tablespoonfuls granulated sugar
¼ teaspoonful salt ¼ cup butter
2 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder
Cinnamon to taste 1 egg
¾ cup milk ½ pound prunes
3 tablespoonfuls melted butter and 3 tablespoonfuls sugar for top of Kuchen.

Sift together, three times, the flour, sugar, salt and baking powder, and work in the butter. Beat the egg; add the milk, and stir into the dry ingredients. Turn into a shallow buttered pan and spread the dough evenly in the pan. Have the prunes cooked tender and remove the stones. Press the prunes skin side down, into the top of the dough.

Brush over with melted butter, dredge with sugar and cinnamon, and bake twenty-five minutes. Serve hot, cut into squares; with hard sauce or stewed prunes.

Baking Helps

Select materials with great care. The best of everything is always the cheapest. To have a perfect finished product we must first have good material for our foundation. In selecting materials for baking, first get a high grade baking powder, for unless properly leavened, food is not palatable. A high grade baking powder is not necessarily a high priced one. K C Baking Powder is medium in price, but of the highest quality, made of the best and purest of materials properly combined to produce the best possible results.

For cakes and pastries a soft wheat pastry flour is preferable. To determine a soft wheat from a bread, or hard wheat flour, press it tightly in the hand; if the flour stays packed in a mass showing the imprints of the fingers, it is a pastry flour; if it falls through the fingers sandy, it is a bread flour, and should be used only with yeast.

Shortening must be fresh and sweet.

Sugar should always be cane sugar.

Water is equally good as milk in all articles where a large amount of sugar is used, except for cookies.

Larger masses of dough require longer time for rising and baking.

Bear in mind that baking rules are as important as measuring rules. Do not bake cakes, pudding and such pastries as short cake, dumplings and meat rolls with a hot fire at the start. Have a slow oven until the dough doubles in bulk; then increase heat to bake and brown.

Biscuits, cut cookies and pie pastry require a hot oven.

Have food thoroughly cooked. Half cooked pastries are hard to digest and injurious, better to over-bake than under-bake.

FOR THE CHILDREN

The Brownies Move.

Billie the Brownie, who lived in a tree,
Was troubled one morning a woodman to see.
The king walked beside him and presently cried,
"Just chop down that tree with the Brownies inside!"

Away galloped Billie to tell the sad news
And panted, "We have not a moment to lose!"
Then back came his friends to the tree in the wood.
And all started packing as fast as they could.

Tables and pillows and bedding and chairs,
Nothing is heavy if every one shares,
And, all being willing, 'tis easy to see
They very soon emptied their house in a tree.

Then Billie set out with his wife, and they found
A pretty new house in a mushroom, all round.
They moved in at once, and that night you should see,
They sat down to supper as gay as could be.

Two Little Caretakers.

"Now, Dot," said mother, "I want you to stand here and take care of Carlo till I come back."

Dot was a very small girl, and Carlo was a very large dog, but they had been friends for so long that both felt quite safe with the other, though Dot did hope that mother would not go far away.

She was, however, too brave to say so and, putting one arm round Carlo's neck, promised that she would not move a step.

Mother was back in a very few minutes. "I took care of Carlo, didn't I?" said the little girl.

"Yes, dear," said mother as she took her up in her arms.

But if Carlo had been able to speak we think he would have said as he leaped and barked at his mistress' side. "I never moved after you left us, and I hope you see that I took good care of Dot."

Muffins

By Mrs. Janet McKenzie Hill, Editor of the Boston Cooking School Magazine.

When muffins are on the breakfast table, nobody cares for meat or eggs and they would be served more often if this meal were not prepared so hurriedly that there is no time to make them. If K C, the double-raise baking powder is used, the batter may be stirred up the night before, put in the pan ready for baking and nothing to do in the morning but bake them.

One-Egg Muffins

2 cups flour; 2 slightly rounded teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder; 1 teaspoonful salt; ¼ cup sugar; ¼ cup melted butter or lard; 1 egg; 1 cup water or milk.

Sift dry ingredients together three times. Add to this the unbeaten egg, melted shortening and water or milk. Then beat all together until perfectly smooth. Oil muffin or gem pans and have oven slow until the muffins come to the top of the pan, then increase the heat to bake and brown the muffins. This recipe makes 12 large muffins. Raisins or currants may be added if desired.

Graham Muffins

1 cup graham flour; 1 cup pastry flour; 2 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder; 1 to 2 level tablespoonfuls sugar; ¼ teaspoonful salt; 1 egg; 1¼ cups milk or water; 2 to 3 tablespoonfuls melted butter; mix and bake as One-Egg Muffins.

Graham batter should always be quite soft to insure light and moist muffins.

"WHERE THE TRAIL DIVIDES"

In casting about for a piece with which to live up to, his reputation as manager and producer, Mr. Primrose ran across Robert Edeson's great masterpiece "Where The Trail Divides" and as a result the patrons of Bradley Opera House will get one of the country's great successes for the first time.

Most theatre-goers are familiar with this play and to them it needs no introduction further than to say that it is in the hands of a most capable company, and that no expense has been spared to make the production, the most pretentious and complete of any Middle West play ever placed before the public. When the late Henry B. Harris made the original production, it was said to be most complete, but from time to time, Mr. Edeson discovered discrepencies and jotted them down, with the result that when the present production was built the managers had the advantage of the late producer and are able to give the public a more thorough and complete detailed production of one of the best Indian plays. Mr. Edeson's play is a partial dramatization of Will Lillibridge's novel of the same name. Where The Trail Divides" and is a compleae and masterful interpretation of all that is good within the Indian nature, bringing to light that which has been hidden for centuries from his brethern, his soul, and his innermost feelings, wherein affairs of the heart are concerned. When an Indian loves, he does it with nobleness and a true virtue, while most white men love with a passion, that brings out all of the animal instincts born of hatred and passion which usually results in unhappiness to both.

"Where The Trail Divides" will be the attraction at the Bradley Opera House next Wednesday, August 27 and is under the management of Mr. Primrose who has had several other good attractions here, among them "Paid in Full" and "The Thief" They carry a complete scenic production.

"CINDERELLA"

The ladies of the Episcopal church are to present the charming 3 act comic opera "Cinderella" this is not children's opera as the name might imply but a comic opera in the truest sense of the word. There are three acts and twenty catchy musical numbers. The comedy is high class and plenty of it. Miss Ruth Weissert under whose direction the opera will be produced make an ideal "Cinderella," she not only sings beautifully but shows unusual talent as an actress. She will be supported by a strong local cast of fifty singers and actors. The costumes are a feature of the production, all of them being made especially for this opera. They are of the type for the men known as the Hose and Doublet made of silk and satine and are rich in the extreme. The ladies costumes are of the same period. Rehearsels are in progress and everything starts well for the ultimate success of this most ambitious undertaking in a theatrical way ever attempted in Tecumseh.

"Miss Ruth Weissert, who took the leading role in the operetta Cinderella given by local talent last April, will go to Tecumseh next week to assist Mr. Dodge [illegible] on the same performance in that town, under the auspices of the Episcopal ladies. Miss Weissert, who spent a year in Virginia college studying dramatic art and who has had considerable practical experience along this line, will take charge of the rehearsals and will sing the principal role when the entertainment is given."—Hastings paper.

TO THE EDITOR

The food and health special, a special train now touring the State, carrying exhibits from the Dairy and Food Departments and the State Board of Health, will arrive at Tecumseh over the L. S & M. S. R. R. Tuesday August 26th at 9:30 a. m. and will remain until 12:00 m.

This train carries educational exhibits in Tuberculosis, Typhoid Fever, Small Pox Summer Resort Sanitation, Sanitary Water Supplies, Babies Health Interests, School Sanitation, Flies, Dairying. Clean Milk, Food Frauds, Deceptive Labeling and Adulteration of Foods, Drug Frauds, Fake Consumption Cures, Beauty Remedies, etc., shorts' Weights and Measures and an exhibit on Tuberculosis in Dairy Cattle from the United States Department of Agriculture. Health and Sanitation Experts. Dairy, Food and Drug Experts and many other special demonstrators will accompany the train to explain the exhibits in full. Quantities of literature pertaining to all the exhibits will be distributed freely.

The exhibits have been prepared by Dr. R. I. Dixon. Secretary, State Board of Health and Mr. F. L. Shannon, State Analyst of the Food Commission, both of whom are experienced in work of this nature. These exhibits have been pronounced as the best of their kind ever gotten up. Business Men, School Children, Women's Clubs,-everybody interested in their own welfare and that of the community should see these exhibites.

The railroads over which this train runs are sufficiently interested in the welfare of the public to provide the transportation and equipment for this train at no expense to the state. Therefore, you should be sufficiently interested to pay the train a visit.

One of the many features will be a display of model school equipment showing how the rural school house can made just as sanitary, as healthful, as comfortable and as attractive as the city or town school building.

You will be shown how the country school house can be properly heated and ventilated, correctly lighted and seated, provided with a sanitary drinking fountain, toilet arrangements and other advantages that will benefit the boys and girls of your districts.

We know that you will co-operate with the Department of Public Instruction in this matter by visiting this special train with your family, by notifying the other members of your board to do likewise, and by urging all your neighbors and friends to fall in line.

ACCIDENT

Horace Lamkin met with quite an accident last Monday p. m. as he and his family and Mrs. Adelaide Kintner and little Clarence and Miss Letta Gilford were returning from Sand Lake, when his colts became frightened and unmanageable and ran down a steep hill crushing two wheels and throwing them all out in a heap, Luckily the whiffletrees broke letting the team free from the surrey which was probably all that kept them from being killed. They escaped with several bruises, but very thankful that they were all alive which seemed almost miraculous. The horses ran up the hill and were found feeding by the roadside. He got Mr. Pawson to take them all as far as B. J. Roberts when they were taken home to Newburg.

A WORD ABOUT WORMS

Don't feed the worms. Ninety per cent of your stock have them.

Worms, like buzzards, are found where there is decay. The food upon which they flourish is the slimy product of undigested food in the stomach and intestines of stock affected with indigestion. The ingredients we have united with salt are especially adapted to stimulate the digestive organs, sweeten the stomach and bowels, neutralize foul gases and deal a death blow to the worms.

Thousands of worm eggs are expelled with the excrement of animals affected with worms, which are then taken up with the feed and water and hatched during process of digestion. If Dr. Holland's Medicated Stock Salt is fed as directed it is ready at all times to deal death to the enemy; and this is the only successful way it can be done.

DR. HOLLAND'S MEDICATED STOCK SALT prevents disease because it is a powerful antiseptic and relieves indigestion. An animal suffering from indigestion is deficient in quantity of blood, which also is poor in quality, and, like the contents of the stomach and intestines, is food for the germs of disease.

DR. HOLLAND'S MEDICATED STOCK SALT is a Conditioner, Blood Purifier and Worm Destroyer. It makes more Flesh, Milk, Wool, Muscle and Energy from the same amount of feed than can possibly be obtained by any other remedy.

Dream on, Kid!

A little girl in Linwood is just about old enough to have a beau, and she is perfectly crazy about any pompadoured, tall, skinny lad that—well, let us tell our little incident without adding adjectives.

The maiden's lovely boy friend went out of town for a week, but she wrote letters. And the maiden's sister started kidding.

"What!" exclaimed sis. "Another letter from Rob? When do you expect to marry him, dear?"

"Oh, very soon," cried the little one, encouraged by such a display of sympathy. "Robert has only two years more in the preparatory school. And then he will go to Harvard and be graduated with the highest honors. After he gets his degree he will go out west and make his fortune, and then we shall be married. Oh, it all seems so beautiful!"

"Dream on, kid!" exclaimed the older sister tenderly. "Do you want to go to another picture show with me this evening? There's a long time to wait, and we've got to put in the time somehow."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Honeymoon Once Chaperoned.

In "Books and Bookmen" it is observed that "in the eighteenth century it was not considered bon ton for a young couple to go on a honeymoon without a chaperon. The practice must have survived into the last century, for in 'Mansfield Park,' when Maria Bertram marries Mr. Rushworth, Julia, the younger sister, goes with them." The custom certainly lingered on, in out-of the way places at least, till the middle of the nineteenth century.

"My mother," writes a correspondent in the Manchester Guardian, "was married in 1853. Before that date she had been the bridesmaid of a girl friend who had married a young lawyer. They both came of middle class families in very comfortable circumstances. She went with them on their honeymoon. She always assured us that in those faraway days it was quite the correct thing for the bridesmaid to form one of the party."

DON'T EXPERIMENT

You Will Make No Mistake if You Follow This Tecumseh Citizens Advice.

Never neglect your kidneys.

If you have pain in the back, urinary disorders, dizziness and nervousness, its time to act and no time to experiment These are frequently symptoms of kidney trouble, and a remedy which is recommended for the kidneys should be taken in time.

Doan's Kidney Pills is a good remedy to use. No need to experiment It has acted effectively in many cases.

Tecumseh Follow the advice of a Tecumseh citizen

E C Brisbine, farmer, N Democrat St, Tecumseh Mich, says: "I began to suffer from kidney complaint twenty years ago and the medicine I took brought me only temporary relief. Often my back ached intensely and the secretions from my kidneys were irregular in passage and highly colored. Doan's Kidney Pills went to the seat of my trouble and did me so much good that I am seldom without a supply on hand." (Statement given December 5, 1915.)

A WILLING CONFIRMATION.

When Mr Brisbine was interviewed at a later date, he said: "You may continue to use my name as a reference for the merits of Doan's Kidney Pills. Whenever I feel in need of a kidney medicine, I take this preparations and effectively."

Trying Hard.

An artist who had a lofty studio on Twenty-third street lately spent two months among the darker dwellings of London, sketching the laborer in the mass, children with dull eyes, houses with broken window panes.

One morning he was in a petty sessions court in the east end and a battered man was before the magistrate charged with drunkenness.

"When you were here thirty days ago," said the magistrate, "didn't you promise to sign the pledge?"

"I'm a-goin' to, yer 'onor," said the culprit, "as soon as I can learn to write. I'm takin' lessons, but I ain't makin' much progress."—New York Times.

CRIMES AND CASUALTIES.

CARROLTON, MO.—Five persons in an automobile were killed and the driver was seriously injured when a Santa Fe passenger train struck the machine at a crossing a mile east of machine at a crossing a mile east. The dead are Carl Forbes and Mrs. Carl Forbes, Sacramento, Cal.; Mrs. Mabel Warner, Brookfield, Mo.; Mrs. William Roberts, Brookfield, Mo., and H. S. Vandevente, Brookfield, Mo. William Roberts was injured, it is believed, fatally. Vandevente was the owner of the car.

SEATTLE, WASH.—About twenty-five passengers and seven seamen were lost when the steamer State of California of the Pacific Coast Steamship company's fleet struck an unchartered rock and was wrecked in Gambier bay, Alaska, at 3 o'clock. Among the dead are Mrs. Nellie H. Ward, wife of Edward C. Ward, assistant general manager of the company at Seattle, and their daughter, Miss Lily Ward, who succumbed to exposure after her rescue.

CHICAGO—Following a hot quarrel with his wife, William Sinda a cabinet maker, 2536 Cortland street, drew a penknife, stabbed her fifteen times, cut their eight-year-old daughter, Anna, a number of times, and then obtained a razor and cut his own throat. He died en route to St. Elizabeth's hospital, where the wife and daughter were taken. The woman has a chance of recovery and the girl is not seriously wounded.

MILLEN, GA. — Judge William S. Godbee, one of the best known men in South Georgia, was instantly killed and his wife, Mrs. Florence Boyer Godbee, formerly of Youngstown, Pa., was so badly wounded that she is dying. The tragedy was enacted by Mrs. Edna Perkins Godbee, a divorced wife of the dead man.

MUNCIE, IND.—Miss Annie Jones, colored, who on Sunday, August 3 shot and killed Dan Daugherty, colored, pleaded guilty to a charge of involuntary manslaughter and was sentenced to from two to twenty years in the penal department of the Indiana Women's Prison department at Indianapolis.

FOND DU LAC, WIS. — Phillip Raeder was burned to death and his son Louis, twelve years old, and an infant son were burned severely at a fire that destroyed Louis Raeder's home at Greenbush. An explosion of a kerosene stove caused the blaze.

NEW HARMONY, IND.—Nola J. Richards, local electrician, was instantly killed while trimming lights during a heavy rainstorm. The city current was supposed to have been turned off, but was still on and the line became short circuited.

DENIAL BY HUERTA

Declares He Did Not Issue an Ultimatum to the United States.

WASHINGTON — Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy cabled Secretary Bryan from Mexico City that President Huerta, through Foreign Minister Gamboa, emphatically denied there was "any foundation whatever" for the statement that Huerta had issued an ultimatum demanding recognition with the alternative of handing Mr. O'Shaughnessy his passports.

Face to face in conference, United States Envoy John Lind and President Huerta are believed to have reached an understanding which may yet prevent the severance of relations between the United States and Mexico and serve to continue negotiations in which Washington may play the roll of mediator.

The conference was undertaken following the report that President Huerta had given the United States until midnight to recognize his administration, under threat of severing all relations.

NEWPORT, R. I. — Bold jewel thieves raided Hermann's big jewelry store on Thames street some time during the night. It is asserted by the police that the plunder taken is valued at $106,000.

THE SECRET OF LONG LIFE.

Do not sap the springs of life by neglect of the human mechanism, by allowing the accumulation of poisons in the system. An imitation of Nature's method of restoring waste of tissue and impoverishment of the blood and nervous strength is to take an alterative glyceric extract (without alcohol) of Golden Seal and Oregon grape root, Bloodroot, Stone and Mandrake root with Cherrybark. Over 40 years ago Dr. Pierce gave to the public this remedy, which he called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. He found it would help the blood in taking up the proper elements from food, help the liver into activity, thereby throwing out the poisons from the blood and vitalizing the whole system as well as allaying and soothing a cough.

No one ever takes cold unless constipated, or exhausted, and having what we call mal-nutrition which is attended with impoverished blood and exhaustion of nerve force. The "Discovery" is an all-round tonic which restores tone to the blood, nerves and heart by imitating Nature's methods of restoring waste of tissue, and feeding the nerves, heart and lungs on rich red blood.

MRS. DOAN.

"I suffered from pain under my right shoulder blade also a very severe cough," writes MRS. W. DOAN, of New Brookland, S. C., to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. "Had four different doctors and none did me any good. Some said I had consumption, others said I would have to have an operation. I was bedridden, unable to sit up for six months—and was nothing but a live skeleton. You advised me to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. When I had taken one bottle of the 'Discovery' I could sit up for an hour at a time, and when I had taken three bottles I could do my cooking and tend to the children. I took [illegible] bottles in all and was then in good health. My weight is now [illegible] pounds."

At Gettysburg the friendship ripened into love through mutual reminiscences, as Miss Wheeler's father was a participant in the battle and served in the same regiment with Mr. Kress. After the celebration the couple went to New Jersey and was married. Mr. Kress is seventy-two years old and is thirty years older than his wife. The announcement of the marriage is just made.

LANSING — Clinging with desperation with one hand to a slender steel rod and battling with the other against a swarm of yellow jackets, De Forest N. Tickner narrowly [illegible] death when he disturbed the nest of the insects in the dome of the state capitol, 275 feet in the air. He was painting the dome. After climbing to the top of the spiral stairway he stepped through a little window and started to scale the outside of the great steel shell. As he ascended, hundreds of yellow jackets suddenly swarmed out of a crevice and attacked him fiercely. Although stung repeatedly and suffering intense pain, the painter fought his way back to the window and safety.

LANSING—The Michigan state securities commission, created by the last legislature is prepared to do business when the new law goes into effect. The commission, of Attorney General Fellows, Banking commissioner Doyle and State Treasurer Haarer, will have an office in the capitol appointed to treasury department, as Haarer by virtue of his office, is secretary of the commission. The body appointed William R. Towne, of Detroit, as chief examiner at a salary of $1,700 ayear. For several years Towne has been employed in the auditor-general's department where he has had supervision of the accounting systems of the various state institutions.

LANSING — Michigan's Labor Commissioner Cunningham, who believes that the 54-hour law for women was intended to include women employed in restaurants will make a test of the statute in the near future. In Grand Rapids, according to information received by the labor commissioner, some of the restaurant proprietors are working the employes 72 hours and arrests will probably be made in that city.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—In the white slavery trial of Maury Diggs, Marsha Warrington, who testified all day, revealed the depravity of herself and her younger chum, Lola Norris, in words that seemed to appeal to the jury of staid fathers of young girls. The girl was on the stand throughout the day and her evidence, extracted by a merciless cross examination of Attorney Coghlin, was a profound surprise to everyone except the defendant and his counsel. Everyone, including her own parents, believed Lola Norris was an innocent girl until she had been betrayed by Caminetti under promise of marriage. Yet, Marsha Warrington admitted that both she and her chum had taken frequent trips to neighboring towns with Diggs and Caminetti and had illicit relations with them.

NEW YORK—The pretty romance which stirred society in Detroit a few years ago, came to its final pinnacle of grief in the supreme court when Justice Blanchard granted alimony and counsel fees to Mrs. Dace Melbourne Charlot, who is suing her elderly French husband, M. Alphonse Charles Charlot for separation. Before the marriage Mrs. Charlot was a Detroit belle, well known in society there and elsewhere. She met M. Charlot there. He was thrice her age but such were his intellectual qualities that he persuaded her to marry him, "mentally conquered" her as the young wife says, but never really possessed her affections. Mrs. Charlot alleges that her husband treated her cruely, seizing her by the throat and choking her. She also states that M. Charlot urged his twenty year old son to shoot her.

WASHINGTON — President Wilson has severely reprimanded Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson for his action in issuing a statement, criticising the British foreign office. During the day the president and Secretary Bryan had seriously considered summarily dismissing the ambassador from the diplomatic service, but finally decided upon the reprimand. The rebuke to the ambassador was in the form of an apology by this government to the British foreign office and a public statement by Mr. Bryan.

PORTLAND, ORE.—Thomas W. W. Lawson, foe of Wall street and its methods and famous as the author of "Frenzied Finance," which stirred the country some eight years ago, and its sequel, "The Remedy" of more recent date, declared at the Oregon hotel, where he had just arrived from Boston, that he would be one of twenty-five men to contribute $100,000 each, if necessary to a huge fund to back Governor Sulzer of New York, in a finish fight with Tammany Hall.

A Chain of Legal Difficulties

Consequent Upon a Youthful Love

By RUTH GRAHAM

Daniel and Mary Longman had been married ten years and had no children. Mary especially longed for a child, and largely on her account Daniel wished for one too. One evening just about dark and before the lamps were lighted Mary heard a queer sound in the hall, just within the front door. Lighting a candle, she investigated and found a basket, in which was a newborn baby boy. An envelope was also found containing $100 in bills.

Mary Longman examined the baby's clothes, which were of fine texture, and found an initial letter embroidered on the slip. She also noticed two moles on its body, one on the right leg near the thigh, the other quite large under the [illegible]. Thinking the slip might be of use some day for identification purposes, she put it away, pinning to it a description of the boy, including mention of the moles.

THERE LAY A BUNDLE WRAPPED IN BROWN PAPER.

They gave him a name—Francis—and adopted him for their son, though not legally, for they were poor persons and had no property to leave him. As soon as he grew old enough to show any bent he displayed a strong inclination to work with tools on wood, making small articles, which he managed to sell in order to get money, which a child always finds needful. When he was fifteen years old he had become quite expert at this kind of work. He became dissatisfied with the quiet life he was leading, and one morning he was missing without leaving any word.

The way Frank had come to be left at the Longmans was this: In the same town lived a gentleman named Fletcher. A daughter, Phoebe, eighteen years of age, fell in love with a young man named Reynolds, who was not acceptable to the girl's parents. Phoebe married Reynolds clandestinely. Before the marriage was admitted he left for parts unknown. Then, it being discovered that Phoebe would become a mother, her parents concluded to keep the whole matter secret, put away the child as soon as born and take their daughter abroad on a plea of ill health.

Before the child was born Mr. Fletcher died, his demise being hastened by his trouble concerning his daughter. When the boy came Mrs. Fletcher, who had heard of the Longmans and their desire for a child, sent one in her confidence with the baby to their house, who, finding the front door unlocked, set the basket in the hall. A few weeks later Mrs. Fletcher sailed for Europe with the mother, who, retaining her maiden name, was supposed to be an unmarried woman.

It was Mrs. Fletcher's intention to send Daniel and Mary Longman from time to time money to pay for the care of the child, and the grandmother had promised her daughter that on her return from Europe she would find a way to get the boy back and bring him up in their home. But the young mother died abroad, and Mrs. Fletcher remained there some time after her daughter's death.

On Mrs. Fletcher's return she was met by a lawsuit on the part of a brother of her late husband, Thomas Fletcher, who claimed that under the will of their father, his brother having left no heirs, he (Thomas) succeeded to the bulk of the estate. Mrs. Fletcher would have produced the foundling but for the scandal and condemnation of her conduct which were sure to follow the act. So she fought the case as owner of her husband's property as his widow, holding the boy in reserve in case the suit went against her.

During the period when the case was in court she was much in need of ready money for legal expenses and sent nothing to the Longmans for her grandchild's use. The case was decided against her several times, but she always appealed from the decisions. At last, worn out by disappointment and anxiety, she fell ill and, realizing that she was about to die, informed her lawyers of her grandson's existence. She died soon after making the confession.

The question of the ownership now turned upon Frank Longman, or, to give him his real name, Frank Reynolds.

As the adopted son of the Longmans he was of no especial importance, but as the heir to a valuable estate he was of a great deal of importance, for he was keeping his uncle, Thomas Fletcher, out of the property. The latter saw at once that his best chance to secure it was to prove his nephew dead. He put detectives to work on the case, who found stains of blood on clothing that Frank had left behind when he went away. This was really of no importance, because the boy had been constantly cutting himself with the sharp instruments he used in the articles he made, but it was quite enough to bring a charge of murder against the Longmans, especially since an analysis of the stains showed them to be human blood.

Longman and his wife were brought to trial for murder. The detectives employed, paid liberally by Thomas Fletcher, brought testimony from neighbors that about the time Frank disappeared they had heard cries, in the voice of a boy, emanate from the Longmans' abode. This, together with the blood stains and other corroborative manufactured testimony, made a strong case against the accused. Thomas Fletcher sent a messenger to them to say that if they would give him evidence that the boy was dead he would see that the charge of murder was withdrawn. This meant that they should make affidavit that Frank had been drowned and his body never recovered.

The Longmans, although they saw the gallows staring them in the face, declined to testify falsely to save themselves. Besides, they had no reason to suppose that Frank was dead, and if he could be found they wished him to come to his own. When the trial was over, and the case submitted to the jury there was a disagreement. The accused had been in jail for a long while and had the prospect of remaining there for an indefinite time. But attorneys who were interested in producing the heir to the estate had been advertising largely for Frank, and when after the trial the prisoners were being led out of the courtroom to the jail they were astonished to meet their foster child coming in.

All three were at once locked in an embrace.

This ended the murder trial, but did not restore Frank Reynolds to his own. The attorneys of Thomas Fletcher entered a denial that he was the son of Phoebe Fletcher, and he was required to produce proof that he was. His foster mother had years before put away the garment in which the baby had been brought to her house and the description of him, including the marks on his body. During her imprisonment she had been much broken down. She had remembered where she had placed these articles of identification for a number of years, but since no one came to claim the foundling and she had come to regard him as her son she gradually let the place of safe keeping pass away from her. In her enfeebled condition she found it impossible to recall where she had put them.

However, she remembered what articles she had put away, and she was sure she had never destroyed them. All depended upon their being somewhere in the house. That she had hidden them she also remembered, for she had feared that if she put them with other articles in ordinary use they might be destroyed or given away without its being known what they were. The house was searched from top to bottom, but the proofs were not found. It seemed that, after all, the boy must lose an estate that was his by right for the want of a child's shift.

At times memory requires a starter. Daniel Longman was in the garret looking for the lost articles when in a corner he stepped on a board that creaked. That creak brought to life the germ, so to speak, of a memory. It came slowly, but it came surely. It was so vague that at first he considered it as nothing. But that creak continued to work in his brain. The same evening while at supper he told his wife that he had a faint remembrance of his hiding the articles for her. Later he said he believed he had taken up a board in a floor, she had put the things in and he had nailed the board down. Suddenly he arose from his half finished supper, seized a screwdriver and hammer and, taking a lamp, went up into the garret. His wife and Frank followed him to the corner where he had stepped on the board that creaked. In a minute the board was taken up, and there lay a bundle wrapped in brown paper. Opening it, he took out a baby's garment, to which was pinned a bit of paper.

For a second time the three embraced.

The next morning the proofs were taken to the lawyers who had conducted the case for Mrs. Fletcher, completing a chain of evidence which established the boy's identity, and in due time he was put into possession of his estate. He took his foster parents to live with him in the house where his own mother had been born, and as they had suffered greatly they needed rest, of which they got a-plenty.

Alexander Dumas said duty is something that we exact from others. Your duty to yourself is to take Allen's Cough Balsam when you have a deep-seated cough or cold. Nothing will give you quicker and more permanent relief. Try it. Does not contain anything harmful. 25c., 50c. and $1.00 bottles at all dealers.

DES MOINES, IOWA — Federal officials and the police of half a dozen counties are scouring southeastern Iowa in the hunt for three daring bandits who, after blowing open the postoffice safe at West Liberty before daylight shot and probably fatally wounded L. W. Swem, mayor of the town, who engaged in a hand-to-hand conflict with the robbers after they had turned lose a veritable arsenal of firearms in bombardment of the village.

NORTHAMPTON, MASS. — The big elm planted in 1728 by Jonathan Edwards, the great preacher, in front of his house in King street, fell into the street, carrying with it the electric light and trolley wires. This was one of the most famous historic old elms in Massachusetts. Granolithic sidewalks and paved streets are believed to have cut off the moisture from the roots, which rotted away.

WASHINGTON—The small banks throughout the country are protesting to Secretary McAdoo through their congressmen that unless the government distributes its $50,000,000 or more for crop moving to the small banks directly, the big banks will send the money to Wall street for speculation or force them to pay high rates of interest for the money intended for the farmers.

Suffered Eczema Fifty Years—Now Well.

Seems a long time to endure the awful burning, itching, smarting, skin-disease known as "tetter"—another name for Eczema. Seems good to realize, also, that DR. HOBSON'S ECZEMA OINTMENT has proven a perfect cure.

Mrs. D. L. Kenney writes:—"I cannot sufficiently express my thanks to you for your Dr. Hobson's Eczema Ointment. It has cured my tetter, which has troubled me over fifty years. All druggists, or by mail 50c."

PETER YOUNG.

Peter Young, for many years a resident of Tecumseh, passed away Friday after a brief illness from paralysis, aged 70 years.

Mr. Young was born in County Antrim, Ireland, coming to America when quite young. His wife and six daughters and several grandchildren are left to mourn his loss. His daughters were all here for the funeral: Mrs. Sarah Linton of Jackson, Mrs. Nellie Luce of Tipton, Mrs. Lettie Button of South Rockwood, Mrs. Stella Weigart of Douglas, Miss Ida Hill of Jasper, Miss Anna Young, of Tecumseh.

The funeral was held at the home Sunday afternoon, Rev G. H Whitney of the Methodist church officiating. Mrs. Bert Poucher and Miss Alma Luce sang two selections. A large number were present to pay their respects to their friend and neighbor. The burial was in Brookside cemetery.

HUDSON WANTS LAKE SHORE

We note in an exchange that "Hudson" is pricking up its ears with various rumors that the Lake Shore will take over the Cincinnati Southern railroad. Both Hudson and Bryan, Ohio, residents are calling attention to the fact that their respective towns are junctions points for the roads. Hudson residents insist also that the Lenawee city is much more conveniently located as a center for car shops round house etc.

Byron's "First Spring."

Byron worked fast. He once told a publisher that he was like a tiger and if he missed his first spring went "grumbling back to his lair." Many of his works were written at fever heat when the first spring did not miss. "The Corsair" occupied ten days, and two rainy days at Ouchy were sufficient to produce the "Prisoner of Chillon." The "Bride of Abydos," though revised afterward, was at first the work of only four nights, and most of his poems, in fact, were impromptus.

Hopeless.

First Lawyer—I hear you are having trouble in getting a jury for that automobile case? Second Lawyer—Yes. We object to everybody who owns a car, and the other side rules out all who don't.—Puck.

See Real Menace in Federal League.

President Chivington of the American association recently had a hasty conference with Ban Johnson in Chicago that resulted, it is said, in determining the line of action against the new Federal league. The outlaw circuit is considered to have developed into a real menace to the big minor league. It has a greater patronage in Indianapolis and has just invaded Kansas City. Toledo, Milwaukee and Louisville capitalists are clamoring for franchises. The taking of Secretary Lloyd Rickart from the Browns, the signing of several American association players and also the bare fact that the new league is making money are additional causes of concern.

SPORTING AFFAIRS.

WASHINGTON — One hundred thousand dollars has been offered by Clark Griffith, manager of the Washington baseball club, for the release of Tyrus Cobb, of the Detroit club. This is the world record price for a baseball player and it is even said that if the Detroit club turns down the offer Griffith will increase the figure.

JERSEY CITY, N. J.—Jersey City and Toronto broke all International league records as well as all records for this season in any league by fighting through twenty innings at West Side park, without a score either way.

Cochineal.

Cochineal, so much used for coloring table jellies and also given to infants as a domestic remedy for whooping cough, is the whole insect of a class called coccus, but only the females are used. Why? Because the insects are captured by suffocating them with the smoke of fires below the trees on which they live, and as the males have wings, while the females have none, the gentlemen take to flight when the atmosphere becomes unpleasantly warm, leaving their ladies to their fate.

Japan's Earthquakes.

Nearly 1,400 earthquakes are recorded annually in the whole of the Japanese empire, and in Tokyo alone there are on an average fifty earthquakes that can be felt during the year, or about one a week.

AMUSEMENTS

"WHERE THE TRAIL DIVIDES,"

The offering at the Bradley Opera House next Wednesday, August 27, will be C. S. Primrose's masterful production of "Where The Trail Divides." In a way Robert Edeson's American play in four acts justifies the unhappy close of "Strongheart." At the end of that drama the Indian gave up the white girl he loved and went hopelessly back to his people. Equally pitiful if we may believe "Where the Trail Divides" would have been his fate had he married his sweetheart of the alien race. How Lander, an Indian, marries Bess Lander, the adopted daughter of his own foster father. He marries her despite the sneers of the rough settlement in Dakota and the threats of her unscrupulous cousin. He takes her far from the so-called civilization of Coyote City out upon the dreary plain to live. She frets in loneliness and compares herself to the wild animal How has chained in his yard, and listens at last to the pleas of her cousin. [illegible] out her discontent and there "the trail divides." He sends her away with her new lover, who proves to be a cad. He deserts her. How hears of it and creeps upon the despoiler of his home at night, there is a shuffle in the dark, a shot is heard and the Indian stands hopeless a pitiful sight in the midst of a great desert alone.

"Where The Trail Divides" is a big play of the West. Its central figure, "Ma-Wa-Xha-Sa", is a character that is real and who cannot fail to fascinate and interest. The play is presented under the direction of C. S. Primrose with a scenic mounting that is both beautiful and massive.

CIRCUS DAY IN TECUMSEH.

The great Sparks Show arrived at Tecumseh early Saturday morning, August 23d, with the usual crowd of grown-ups who had small children to bring to witness the unloading and pitching of tents, in attendance.

By noon the streets were well filled with people who had come to watch the street parade which was pulled off on schedule time. The parade was unusually attractive with good music, fine horses, new costumes; in fact everything looked clean and new and was well received by the crowd in attendance.

An afternoon and evening performance were given and the tent was well filled at both performances. Everyone seemed to be well pleased with the show and comment was very favorable. Many new features were given. The acts were all good. The aerial acts, trained seal act, trained elephants, trick riding, tight wire performers and trained lions were all worthy of mention, while funny clowns kept the crowds laughing at their antics. The management was courteous and everything about the show was neat and clean. We are sure the people of this community would welcome a return date of the Sparks show.

MOORE RE-UNION

The 17th annual re-union of the decendents of John and Mary Moore, was held at Pontiac, Mich., Aug. 21. There were 62 relatives and 6 invited guests present. The day was pleasant up to noon, when a shower came which laid the dust and cooled the air.

After all had partaken of a bountiful dinner a business meeting was called. Mrs. Hannah C. Moore aged 83 years, was the only aunt who survived of the nine children and their wives. There were 10 first cousins with their children, grandchildren ann great grandchildren present. J. Wilmer Moore of Bath, N. Y., Joseph S. Moore, Galena, Kansas, Mary E. Kumkel, Springfield, Ohio, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hanley, Tecumseh, Mich. Adrian, Bellevue, Ann Arbor and several other towns were represented. The next meeting will be held in Ann Arbor. John and Mary Moore were the grandparents of and Mrs. Thomas Hanley of Tecumseh, and were born in 1794 and lived in Pennsylvania.

THE KNUPP SIGNAL

We have before us a copy of the Knupp Signal, a newspaper published in Knupp Grant Co., Washington. This is an 8 page 11x15 inch paper with four pages of local matter and four of patent news. The type is clear and distinct. It has 23 ads embracing hardwares, groceries, blacksmiths, meat markets, pharmacy, saloon, restaurant, carpenters, draymen, barber shops, garages, lumber company, flouring mill, one physician, one dentist, one lawyer and one auctioneer, but we no where find any dry goods or clothing stores mentioned. The Farmers Bank of Knupp has a capital of $10,000.00 with a surplus of $250,000.

The reporter took dinner with some friends the Sunday previous and was taken over a good share of the 500 acre farm. An oat field of 120 acres is expected to average 80 bushels to the acre. Knupp marketed 500,000 bushels of wheat in 1912.

Queer Ways of Eating.

Spiders chew their food with hard, horny jaws.

The jellyfish absorbs its food by wrapping itself around the object which it seeks to eat.

The butterfly pumps nectar through a tube into its body, and bees and flies suck their food with their long tongues.

The woodpecker has a three barbed tongue, like a Fijian's spear, with which it draws out the worm of insect.

The cuttlefish does not chew its food with its mouth, but with its gizzard.

The horseshoe crab chews its food with its legs. The little fellow grinds its food morsels between its thighs before passing them to the mouth.

Sturgeons draw in their food by suction and are toothless.

NOTABLES IN THE LIMELIGHT

Rev. Charles Stelzle, Labor Preacher and Sociologist.

Rev. Charles Stelzle, for ten years in charge of the social service work of the national Presbyterian church, has resigned his position as superintendent of the bureau of social service of the board of home missions in order to enter the broader field of general social service and church efficiency upon an undenominational basis. Mr. Stelzle will become a "consulting sociologist" for national church organizations, social service agencies and industrial enterprises. This is probably the pioneer effort in this direction, particularly with regard to religious organizations.

Mr. Stelzle is the machinist who became a preacher after twelve years' experience in the shop, for the purpose of trying to break down the antagonism existing between the workingman and the church, and to introduce in the church in a national way the principles of industrial efficiency. He organized the department of church and labor for the Presbyterians, the first bureau of its kind to be established by any denomination. Similar departments have since been organized by nearly a dozen of the leading denominations in the United States.

One of the enterprises that he established for the purpose of talking out with workingmen their own problems is the Labor temple in lower New York, in the most densely populated section in the city.

BIG AWARDS FOR POTATOES

State Fair Alters Conditions of "Spuds"—More Liberal.

A change in the manner of awarding premiums for superior potatoes will be instituted at the Michigan State Fair this year.

In the past there has been no end of annoyance occasioned by "pothunting" exhibitors. It is not the intention of the Fair to encourage any such practice.

This year the real growers have got together and expressed a desire for reform in the matter of awarding prizes, and the Fair officials have responded to their appeals. If the present method of judging and awarding prizes works out all right this fall greater reforms will be inaugurated next year and seasons to come.

T. F. Marston of the Michigan State Fair board of superintendents had this to say in regard to the new order of things: "The method of awarding $20, $15, $10 and three prizes of $5 each for superior products in early and late potatoes may not seem like such a sweeping reform to some; but as a matter of fact it is a big step in the right direction.

"If the winner of a State Fair prize happens to reside in northeastern Michigan he will be entitled to an additional award of $20 from the Northeastern Michigan Development Bureau. In every case the products will be judged with regard to their cooking and eating excellence as well as appearance.

"The increasing of the rewards for perfected products in this and other lines will act as an incentive for Michigan growers to produce the best foodstuffs. Any institution which elevates the standard of food products is deserving of the support and encouragement of right thinking citizens of the state."

DON'T EXPERIMENT

You Will Make No Mistake if You Follow This Tecumseh Citizens Advice.

Never neglect your kidneys.

If you have pain in the back, urinary disorders, dizziness and nervousness its time to act and no time to experiment. These are frequently symptoms of kidney trouble, and a remedy which is recommended for the kidneys should be taken in time.

Doan's Kidney Pills is a good remedy to use. No need to experiment. It has acted effectively in many cases in Tecumseh. Follow the advice of a Tecumseh citizen.

E. C. Brisbine, farmer, N. Democrat St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I began to suffer from kidney complaint twenty years ago and the medicine I took brought me only temporary relief. Often my back ached intensely and the secretions from my kidneys were irregular in passage and highly colored. Doan's Kidney Pills went to the seat of my trouble and did me so much good that I am seldom without a supply on hand." (Statement given December 3, 191-.)

When Mr. Brisbine was interviewed at a later date, he said: "You may continue to use my name as a reference for the merits of Doan's Kidney Pills. Whenever I feel in need of a kidney medicine, I take this preparations and effectively."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Riches.

He is rich or poor according to what he is, not according to what he has.—H. W. Beecher.

Sometimes the symptoms of kidney and bladder trouble are so plain no one can mistake them. Backache, weak and lame back with soreness over the kidneys, shorp pains, rheumatism, dull headache, and disturbed sleep, are all indications of a trouble that Foley Kidney Pills will relieve quickly and permanently. Try them. For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

Wisdom.

A wise wife soon learns to manage her husband, while a wise husband never tries to manage his wife.

Mothers! Have Your Children Worms?

Are they feverish, restless, nervous, irritable, dizzy or constipated? Do they continually pick their nose or grind their teeth? Have they cramping pains, irregular and ravenous appetite? These are all signs of worms. Worms not only cause your child suffering, but stunt its mind and growth. Give "Kickapoo Worm Killer" at once. It kills and removes the worms improves your child's appetite, regulates stomach, liver and bowels. The symptoms disappear and your child is made happy and healthy, as nature intended. All druggists or by mail 25c.

What the Fair Is.

A gigantic convention of Michigan's agricultural and industrial interests.

A postgraduate course for successful farmers and a primary summer school for the boys and girls.

An educational outing for the entire family, whether from the city or rural districts.

An annual proof of the greatness of the Wolverine State.

A Reminder.

Don't forget to take a ride on the new giant roller coaster at the Michigan State Fair Sept. 15-20. It is absolutely safe. Let the children have the time of their lives.

Horse Department

By N. P. HULL,

Vice President of the Michigan State Fair and Superintendent of the Horse Department.

N. P. HULL

ESTIMATES place the value of Michigan's farm horses alone at $80,000,000. In this the horses in the cities are not taken into consideration. Then they say that the death knell of the horse was sounded with the coming of the steel steeds, the autos. What the State Fair is endeavoring to do is to encourage the breeding of those types which give the greatest service on the farm. We are making every effort to secure the most attractive exhibit of heavy horses the Fair has ever known this year.

There has been a steady increase in this class the last ten years, and there is every indication that the 1913 roster will [illegible] previous year.

There will be unusual features in this year's horse department to attract the attention of western breeders. Liberal prizes under distinct classifications are offered for some of the following well known and approved types: Percheron, Clydesdale, Shire, Belgian, French and German coach.

Special prizes are also offered for stallions, "bred, owned, in service and registered in Michigan." In addition to the many handsome awards presented to successful competitors by the Fair, there will be several valuable medals and cups given by the horse breeding associations.

America should be proud of its superior bred horses, and nowhere in these United States are there better grade animals than in Michigan. The recent sweeping victory of the American polo team was due more to the superior mounts possessed by the Yankees than to their superiority of play. The English came here supposedly with the mounts valued at $100,000, and yet the American ponies were far tougher and more agile and intelligent than the animals from over the seas. This is but one instance where American bred horses have proved their right to be classed as the best in the world.

STARS TO RACE AT STATE FAIR

$40,000 In Purses Offered For Grand Circuit.

THE LARGEST ENTRY LIST.

All Leading Turf Performers Will Compete For Rich Prizes — State Breeders' Futurity Decided For First Time—Foremost Reinsman to Drive.

This year the Michigan State Fair will hang up no less than $40,000 for trotters and pacers, which will unqualifiedly attract the biggest fields of any classic ever decided at the Detroit oval.

The Michigan stake alone returns $10,000 to its winner, and forty-five owners have signified their intention of competing for this rich award.

Second in importance will be the 2:12 pace, which boasts of no less than twenty-five nominees, while the 2:05 has seventeen and the 2:16 has twenty-three. These numbers are larger than in any grand circuit city.

On top of these headliners there will be sixteen late closing classes, with awards of $1,000 or over, exclusive of the first Futurity of the Michigan Trotting Horse Breeders' association. This last named event promises to blossom into a State Fair racing institution. It will unquestionably bring together the best three-year-olds in the Wolverine State and is creating interest in all parts of the state, as there are about forty eligibles.

As Frank B. Walker will do the starting and A. J. Keating will act as presiding judge, the State Fair races will be conducted on the highest possible plane.

MUSIC BY PRIZE BAND.

Weber's Gifted Artists at the State Fair.

All music lovers will welcome the announcement that John C. Weber's prize band has been secured for the open air concert at the Michigan State Fair.

This internationally known collection of musicians, gifted soloists and instrumentalists will offer an afternoon and evening program the selections of which will be arranged to please all classes of music devotees.

The Fair officials are very enthusiastic over the acquisition of the famous Weber band, as it looked for some time as if the demand for this organization abroad would prevent its appearing at the Fair.

Auto Building to Be Revamped.

Because of the large display from manufacturers and accessory firms the Fair management decided to improve the facilities of the auto building. This year the exhibitors and visitors will be treated to a fine display of Michigan's leading manufacturing industry.

BAY CITY—The arbitration committee of the Michigan Industrial compensation board met here and considered the case of William Scott, a miner, who contracted tuberculosis, which he claims was due to neglect on the part of the Royal Coal company. It seems that the coal company used vitiated air in the mine up until last January, when an air shaft was put in following an explosion. Scott contracted pneumonia, which developed consumption, and he is now at the Howell sanitarium. His physician, Dr. S. A. Gustin, testified that the ailment was due entirely to the artificial ventilation. Chairman Kinnane ruled that the point taken by the miner was clear and right, but said he did not believe the compensation law broad enough in scope to cover the case. President Smith, of the mine workers, who represented Scott, will appeal to the board. If established, the case will have a far-reaching effect.

THE SECRET OF LONG LIFE.

Do not sap the springs of life by neglect of the human mechanism, by allowing the accumulation of poisons in the system. An imitation of Nature's method of restoring waste of tissue and impoverishment of the blood and nervous strength is to take an alterative glyceric extract (without alcohol) of Golden Seal and Oregon grape root, Bloodroot, Stone and Mandrake root with Cherrybark. Over 40 years ago Dr. Pierce gave to the public this remedy, which he called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. He found it would help the blood in taking up the proper elements from food, help the liver into activity, thereby throwing out the poisons from the blood and vitalizing the whole system as well as allaying and soothing a cough.

No one ever takes cold unless constipated, or exhausted, and having what we call mal-nutrition, which is attended with impoverished blood and exhaustion of nerve force. The "Discovery" is an all-round tonic which restores tone to the blood, nerves and heart by imitating Nature's methods of restoring waste of tissue, and feeding the nerves, heart and lungs on rich red blood.

MRS. DORN.

"I suffered from pain under my right shoulder blade also a very severe cough," writes MRS. W. DORN, of New Brookland, S. C., to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. "Had four different doctors and none did me any good. Some said I had consumption, others said I would have to have an operation. I was bedridden, unable to sit up for six months—and was nothing but a live skeleton. You advised me to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. When I had taken one bottle of the 'Discovery' I could sit up for an hour at a time, and when I had taken three bottles I could do my cooking and tend to the children. I took fourteen bottles in all and was then in good health. My weight is now [illegible] pounds."

Sure to Be Michigan's Greatest Exposition

This Year's State Fair Bound to Prove the Biggest and Best Ever Staged In the Wolverine State.

WHEN the portals of the Michigan State Fair roll back on Sept. 15 it will mark the opening of the sixty-fourth annual holiday of the Wolverine State and incidentally usher in the most complete and best balanced exposition ever presented in the west.

With an array of attractions never before exhibited in the west, and the show buildings packed to the guards [illegible] will be surpassed, and the 1913 Fair will be known as the nearest approach to a perfect community reunion ever staged. Here will be exhibited the handiwork of Michigan's soil, hands and brains—the agricultural and industrial wealth of the richest commonwealth in the Union, displayed in a highly attractive manner.

Not only will there be exhibitors, but there will also be actual practical working demonstrations which will aid both the farmer and city man to apply his knowledge more profitably. The aim of the Michigan State Fair of 1913 is not merely to amuse, but to instructively entertain and educate.

More than ever this year the State Fair will be the people's holiday, the state's big educational outing. It has taken a lot of money to bring this about, $100,000 in premiums and prizes being hung up to secure attractions and act as a magnet for exhibitors.

This huge sum has attracted the leading live stock, vehicle and industrial exhibitors in America and abroad, to say nothing of furnishing clean, wholesome amusements, such as horse racing, auto speeding, biplane demonstrations and free outdoor attractions.

In brief, the 1913 management wishes to eradicate the idea that the Michigan State Fair is a promoter of frivolity in the shape of light, superficial entertainment, but rather that the Fair exerts an enlightening influence throughout the Wolverine State.

Remember that Sept. 15-20 are the days set apart for the big commonwealth reunion, and it is your duty to contribute your part to the success of the same by being present.

Fair's Policy

By the Hon. D. D. AITKEN, President of the Michigan State Fair.

HON. D. D. AITKEN.

EVERY scientist agrees that in order [illegible] duce the cost of living the production must be increased.

This being granted, it is obvious that in order to accomplish it measures for increasing the yield must be shown the producers. Every means of effecting this end, aside from actual demonstration, have proved failures. Demonstration of ways and means of improved farming has been of immediate benefit in enlarging the annual yield.

Demonstration work is the mission of the Michigan State Fair, and just how well it performs its mission is up to its patrons.

We may secure all the best experts and the most modern devices for scientific farming, give suggestions as to land rotation and its good, analyze soil and do the many other things which we will do from Sept. 15 to 20, and it will be largely thrown to the winds if visitors do not throw off their "you'll convince me over my dead body attitude" and be open to honest conviction.

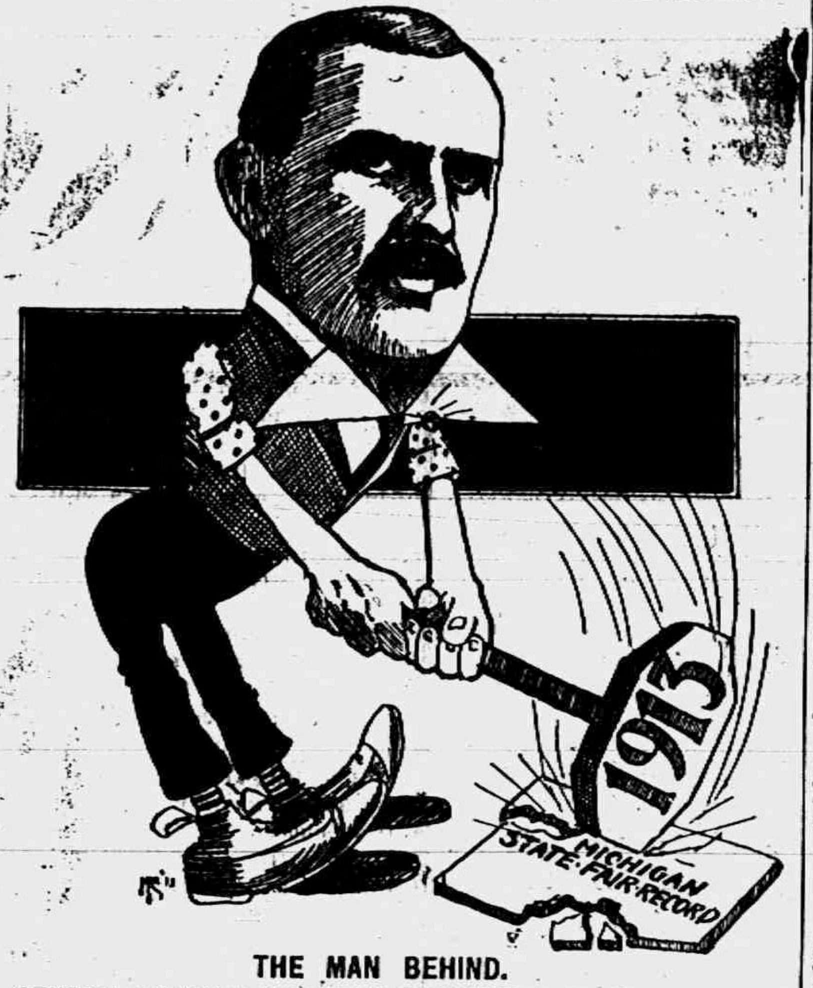
The idea that the Michigan State Fair is a place to come to and gawk around, toss a few rings at the canes, see the races and go home is an unprogressive one. Don't get me wrong on this.

All these things are instructively entertaining; that is what we have them there for. No one is a firmer believer in the time honored axiom that "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy" than I am. It is the combination of education and pleasure that we aim for.

This year when you come to the Fair talk with the successful men in your special line of endeavor. Ask them what methods they used to produce such fine, sleek stock as they have on exhibition. They will be proud to tell you if you are sociable enough to inquire. Talk to the implement men. They will explain the good points of their vehicles.

Look around and see if there isn't something you could add to your household equipment which would make the duties of your wife lighter.

We want the Michigan State Fair to be a benefit to the entire family. We want it to be the family convention. When we have accomplished these things we will have the greatest institution for educational good extant. We can only do this with the whole souled co-operation of the people of the state of Michigan.



THE MAN BEHIND.

GENERAL MANAGER GEORGE W. DICKINSON, WHO IS DOING MUCH TO MAKE THIS YEAR'S MICHIGAN STATE FAIR A RECORD BREAKER IN EVERY RESPECT.

ANIMAL SHOW ENGAGED.

Wortham and Allen's Organization to Give Daily Performances.

Wortham and Allen's Carnival and Animal Shows have been secured at a big cost for this year's Michigan State Fair Sept. 15-20. This remarkable organization enjoys the full confidence of every big fair management because it furnishes clean and wholesome amusements.

The Wortham and Allen feature enables patrons to visit the Fair and enjoy a circus at the same time—a circus that is instructive as well as interesting. The famous troupe of trained ponies, which always furnish no end of delight for the children, will be more comprehensive than ever.

These ponies will be hitched to chariots and raced like their big thoroughbred cousins. The children may visit the Shetland pony tent whenever the little fellows are not performing and give them a few loving pats.

GO AFTER SOUTH BEND P. M.

Political Enemies Seek Scalp of Cadmus E. Graybill on Charges.

Washington, Aug. 18.—Notice has been received here that charges are being prepared against Cadmus E. Graybill, postmaster of South Bend, and that his removal from office will be requested. The basis of the charges has not been made public.

J. F. Beldon was removed from the postmastership of Teegarden, Marshall county, and Charles Lemert was appointed to succeed him.

HEAD HITS SUBMERGED ROCK

L. Huxley, Sylva Lake, Dives and Is Instantly Killed.

Pontiac, Mich., Aug. 18.—Lavender C. Huxley, sixty-four year sold, proprietor of a shooting gallery at Sylvan lake, dived into the Clinton river and was killed when his head struck a submerged rock.

His body was recovered, but he was dead when taken from the water. He leaves a widow and several children.

Crater Lake.

Crater lake, National park, is situated on the summit of the Cascade range in south central Oregon. It has an area of 159,360 acres and is located in the midst of a beautiful mountain country, the principal attraction being Crater lake, a body of water having an area of twenty and one quarter square miles (water surface), which is situated in the caldera of an extinct volcano. The lake is surrounded by unbroken cliffs which range from 500 to nearly 2,000 feet in height. The coloring of the water and of the surrounding cliffs presents some of the most striking pictures seen in the western mountain country.

THAW NOT AFRAID

Fugitive Declares He Has Braved the Death Chair Twice.

SHERBROOKE, QUEBEC — Behind an iron grilled window of the Sherbrooke jail, Harry Thaw still fretted and fumed and talked erratically. He is still confident in himself and exclaimed more than once.

"I am not afraid of Matteawan. I have braved the death chair twice. There is nothing to fear."

Thaw is absolutely certain of his sanity. He remembers the word "reasonable" and used it a hundred times. It was reasonable, he thought, to map out a colossal campaign of publicity. He spent the day doing so.

He was still worried because the note he had sent to the Associated Press telling it to warn papers throughout the country not to call him a fugitive from justice had been lost in transit.

NEW YORK — John D. Archbold and Mrs. Archbold sailed for Europe on the Olympic. Mr. Archbold said he had kept his name off the passenger list because he did not want to be interviewed.

GENERAL NEWS.

WASHINGTON — The state department conveyed an unofficial intimation to the British ambassador, Sir Arthur Spring Rice, that the United States would be pleased if Canada will deport Harry K. Thaw who is being held by the Canadian authorities as an undesirable immigrant. The intimation was carried in a telegram to the ambassador at his summer home at Dublin, N. H., and was sent in response to a request from Acting Governor Glynn and Attorney General Carmody. The telegram was marked personal in order to signify that it was not an official communication to the representative of the British government. The inference is that the United States desired the Matteawan fugitives be returned into the jurisdiction of the United States so that its domestic authorities may determine upon whether or not he shall be returned to the prison.

NEW YORK—The pretty romance which stirred society in Detroit a few years ago, came to its final pinnacle of grief in the supreme court when Justice Blanchard granted alimony and counsel fees to Mrs. Dace Melbourne Charlot, who is suing her elderly French husband, M. Alphonse Charles Charlot for separation. Before the marriage Mrs. Charlot was a Detroit belle, well known in society there and elsewhere. She met M. Charlot there. He was thrice her age but such were his intellectual qualities that he persuaded her to marry him, "mentally conquered" her as the young wife says, but never really possessed her affections. Mrs. Charlot alleges that her husband treated her cruely, seizing her by the throat and choking her. She also states that M. Charlot urged his twenty year old son to shoot her.

LONDON, ENG.—There is a possibility that Mr. Jack Johnson, the American negro pugilist, will not be allowed to appear on the stage in this city. The announcement that he would do a turn next week at one of the smaller west end music halls brought a number of remonstrances to the manager to the effect that the London public after the revelation of Johnson's violation of the "white slave" laws of the United States would not stand for the negro pugilist as an entertainer.

NEW YORK — Mrs. William L. Velle, wife of the president of the Velle Motor company, oof Moline, Ill., and her companion Miss Mary J. Lilly, were arraigned before United States Commissioner Edward R. Stanton at 91 River street, Hoboken, charged with attempt to smuggle jewelry and wearing apparel into this country. Customs officials believe that Mrs. Velle's undeclared jewels and clothing may amount to $10,000.

SHERBROOKE, QUEBEC—Harry K. Thaw sent messages to the two highest personages in the official life of the two countries involved in his case. He cabled King George of England asking for royal protection while in a British dominion. He also telegraphed President Wilson asking that his rights as a private citizen of the United States be safeguarded in a foreign land.

Confidence.

Jackson—Heaven bless him! He showed confidence in me when the clouds were dark and threatening. Wilson—In what way? Jackson—He lent me an umbrella.—London Telegraph.

ASKS MORE TIME

Huerta Government Make Request from Washington.

WILSON ACCEDES TO APPEAL

Postpones the Delivery to Congress of His Message on the Mexican Situation—What President Wilson Will Demand of General Huerta in Regard to American Citizens.

WASHINGTON—At about 10 o'clock in the morning an official message was received from the Huerta government asking President Wilson to delay his message to congress for another twenty-four hours. It was taken under consideration at a conference between the president and Secretary Bryan.

Within a short time it was announced that the president had postponed delivery of his Mexican message to congress.

Ban on Shipment of Arms.

The message makes it plain that no faction or government in Mexico will be allowed to receive munitions of war from the United States. If necessary the president proposes to increase the American border patrol to enforce this policy.

The president cites in his message as a precedent for the policy he proposes to pursue, the action of President Hayes in withholding recognition from Diaz for more than a year, after the latter had gained control of the Mexican government.

All the resources of the government will be used to assist those Americans who desire to retire from the southern republic.

Having thus offered safety to Americans and having closed the door for future shipments of munitions of war the President will follow a policy of non-interference leaving the Mexicans to struggle between themselves and work out their own salvation.

Will Demand Protection.

With the announcement of this new policy, however, will come sharp demand upon the Huerta government and all the revolutionary leaders in Mexico to safeguard American life and property. President Wilson will let Huerta and his enemies know in very positive terms that they will be held responsible for any acts committed against Americans or their properties.

President Wilson outlined this new program at a conference at the White House with twenty-one members of the foreign relations committee of the two houses of congress.

Lind Acknowledges Failure.

The entire new program was of course contingent upon the belief that all chance of Huerta accepting the president's mediation proposals had disappeared. When President Wilson was conferring with the members of congress, he had practically given up hope and a message received from John Lind, the president's special envoy, after the conference had adjourned, practically acknowledged the failure of his mission.

Up to that time the president had been holding out his special message to congress but the moment the Lind dispatch was received the message was hurried to the public printer.

Mr. Lind reported that Huerta had shown no disposition to yield from the stand that he had taken against the mediation program.

COURT SETS SEIBERT FREE ON $1,000 BAIL

New Angle to Shooting of Chicago Woman.

MUSKEGO, MICH. — George W. Siebert, the Fruitland township farmer who shot Mrs. Charles Roselle of Chicago, accidently he says, was released on $1,000 bail after be had been araigned in court charged with assault with intent to do great bodily harm.

The police say they have learned that bad blood existed between the Roselles and the Sieberts for some time previous to the shooting. Siebert's plea that he shot the woman accidently may be broken down, in view of this new angle in the case.

Both families had been given notice to keep off the premises of the other, it was said.

The wife of the man now held in the county jail, although questioned almost continually since the time of the shooting, has given few details of the affair. It was only after hours of examination that she admitted at all that her husband had fired the gun.

SPEED THROUGH FOREST FIRE

Autoists Have Thrilling Experience, but Hardly "Joy Ride."

PETOSKEY, MICH.—After a most thrilling ride through a forest fire John Quinlan and Edward Overlay, of Onaway, arrived here in an automobile, which was burned to the frame, but still running.

The fire, which flanked the road on each side, was encountered between Onaway and Petoskey. The autoists were surrounded before they realized the situation. In order to escape they were obliged to wrap themselves in robes and speed through a big sheet of flame at a mile a minute clip, facing certain death if any trouble arose with the machine.

They were badly scorched, but nevertheless left for home at night by another route.

WASTED CROPS FOR CHARITY

Committee in Buchanan Negotiates to Feed Chicago's Hungry.

BUCHANAN, MICH. — Through a movement started some months ago by Thomas J. Tormey, a local newspaper man, the Associated Charities of Chicago, have taken up a proposition with a committee of this city, whereby the waste crops can be taken care of, by special agents, and turned over to the support of Chicago's poor.

A well devised system for the undertaking is under way. The plan involves utilization of all the waste crops in Berrien county.

BURIES SON IN FRONT YARD

Neighbors of William Cooper, Shiawassee County, Protest.

OWOSSO, MICH.—William Cooper, a man living in Owosso township, just below the city limits, is being made the object of a severe attack by neighbors because he buried his son, Fay V. Cooper, twenty-eight years old, who died in Detroit, in his front yard.

The neighbors declare that every time they go to their front doors the fresh grave meets their view. An appeal has been made to the township board to compel Cooper to transfer the body to the cemetery.

ALBANY, N. Y.—Governor Sulzer confided to friends that whether he is found guilty or acquitted by the court of impeachment, he will enter the mayoralty campaign in New York city and make the fight of his life against Charles F. Murphy and Tammany candidates.

MICHIGAN YACHTMAN IS SERIOUSLY INJURED

W. C. Sterling Probably Fatally Hurt in Auto Wreck.

MOROE, MICH.—William C. Sterling, sixty-eight years old, former commodore of the Monroe Yacht club, and well known throughout Michigan, was probably fatally injured, and Joseph Lazett, sixty-five years old, dangerously hurt when an auto in which they were riding was struck by a Lake Shore train, near the station.

The train, due here at 8:15, was obscured from the view of the men by a passing freight, and they were on the tracks before a warning reached them. Both were thrown twenty feet against a fence and when picked up were unconscious from factured skulls.

They were rushed to their homes, where physicians attended each. Mr. Sterling's skull is believed to be the more dangerously shattered, and no hope is expressed for his recovery.

Mr. Sterling has been engaged in the fuel and lumber business here for many years, with his son, William C. Sterling, Jr.

DRIVES FAMILY TO COWSHED

Foreigner at Saginaw Faces Deportation for Abuses.

SAGINAW, MICH. — Andrew W. Kukroka, who came to Saginaw from the northeastern part of Austria Hungary six years ago, is serving ninety days for nonsupport and because of his arrest it is possible that he and his wife and their three children may be deported.

Mrs. Kukroka and the children, whose ages range from eight to eighteen, came here last April. Soon after their arrival Kukroka ejected them from their home and they were forced to live in an erstwhile cow shed in Buena Vista. Kukroka then made an attempt to take the money which they earned weeding sugar beets and his wife reported it to the sheriff.

Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Vincent has reported the whole affair to Immigration Agent Frick in Detroit with the purpose of having the family deported.

STORM REVEALS A TRAGEDY

Throws Up Body of Harry Dupont, Drowned in Pine Lake.

PETOSKEY, MICH. — Harry W. Dupont, thirty-five years old, formerly of Petoskey, was drowned in Pine lake while on his way home to Oyster bay, half way between Petoskey and Charlevoix, after making purchases for his family in this city, according to word which has just been received here. No report of the death was made public until the body was found by a fisherman after a storm.

Dupont fell overboard from a gasoline launch when he stood up to pay his share to the owner for taking him and a party home.

Two Martyrs.

"What's the matter, old man?"

"Brain fag. Been presiding at the graduation exercises of a grammar school. Had to listen to forty high brow essays. But you seem played out too."

"Yes; indigestion. I took in a cooking school. Had to taste forty different messes."—Kansas City Journal.

After the Fire.

"You don't mean to say that Spender is on his uppers. Why, I thought be had money to burn."

"So he did have; but, unfortunately for Spender, he carried no fire insurance."—Brooklyn Life.

CRIMES AND CASUALTIES.

DUBUQUE, IOWA — After he had murdered his wife and three children Henry Sternweis, a wealthy farmer of Jefferson township, set fire to all the buildings on his farm and then hanged himself to a beam in one of the blazing barns. Neighbors extinguished the flames before the bodies had been burned.

At noon Sternweis quarreled with his wife and left the house. After the farm hands had gone back to the fields Sterweis is believed to have called his children from their play and beaten them to death after he had killed his wife with an ax.

BUTTE, MONT.—Falling over 600 feet down the sheer precipices of solid rock that border on the Blackfoot glacier, the largest glacier in Glacier National park, which lies at the foot of Mount Jackson at the very peak of the continental divide, Dr. Calvin I. Fletcher of Indianapolis was dashed to death in the park according to word received in Butte.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—Another daring Black Hand atrocity was added to Milwaukee's already long list when John Sorce, twenty-four years old, was shot and instantly killed by a myst[illegible]s assassin in front of his home [illegible]e Italian district.

DANVILLE ILL. — Harry Clara, a Chicago aeronaut, was arrested here charged with murder of Islah Avery of Jefferson county, Ind. Avery's body was found lying in the rear of a saloon with the skull crushed. His pockets had been turned inside out.

BURLINGTON, IOWA—Herman W. Riepe, one of the best-known men in Des Moines county, was kicked by his horse and died instantly. He was postmaster at Sperry and a prominent Democrat. He was sixty-seven years of age.

JANESVILLE, WIS. — Mrs. Barbara Bankes, aged fifty-six years, is dead from burns caused by the explosion of a can of gasoline while she was lighting the stove. Her son, Henry, was badly burned in trying to save his mother.

FOND DU LAC, WIS. — Leo Fisher, aged nineteen, son of W. H. Fisher, a farmer, was kicked by a horse, his neck being broken. He had just returned from this city and was unharnessing the horse when it kicked him.

ATLANTA, GA. — Leo M. Frank has been found guilty of outraging and murdering fourteen year old Mary Phegan. Two ballots were cast before an agreement was reached.

SPORTING AFFAIRS.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—The purchase of Pitcher Watson, a left hander, for the Chicago Cub slab staff is announced by President Murphy in Chicago. Watson has been pitching for the Fond du Lac team of the Wisconsin-Illinois league but was purchased from the Milwaukee club, which possessed a string on him.

OSHKOSH, WIS. — The Chicago sailors had a great day of it on Lake Winnebago when Graham Bullen and a crew of Chicago sailors won the Gilbert cup race in the Inland Yachting association regatta with William Pelouze's yacht La Belle II. of Oconomowoc.

LOS ANGELES, CAL. — John W. ("Bull") Young, Jr., the Chicago pugilist who was sent to a hospital following his defeat by Jess Willard in the Vernon arena is dead from injuries received in the fight and Willard has been arrested.

HER TWELVE COUSINS

The Myths of a Kindly Heart

By CLARISSA MACKIE

"I am selling 'The Old Homestead Cookbook,'" began the dusty looking man at the side door. "It contains a thousand tested recipes and twenty four illustrations."

"You are not going to sell one here," broke in Mrs. Denton crossly. "Books can't teach me nothing. I'd like to see the printed book that can show me how to mix up a cake or a batch of biscuits! Humph! I should think a strong, able-bodied man like you—"

But the agent had lifted his hat and was now beyond reach of Almira Denton's jarring voice.

She closed the screen door and hooked [illegible] energy that characterized all her actions. This habit of flying at the slightest task with overstrained exertion had earned for her a reputation as an extraordinary housekeeper and a tireless worker.

Now she bounced into a rocking chair, picked up a pan, pounced on a luckless potato and peeled it furiously.

"Cookbooks!" she sniffed scornfully.

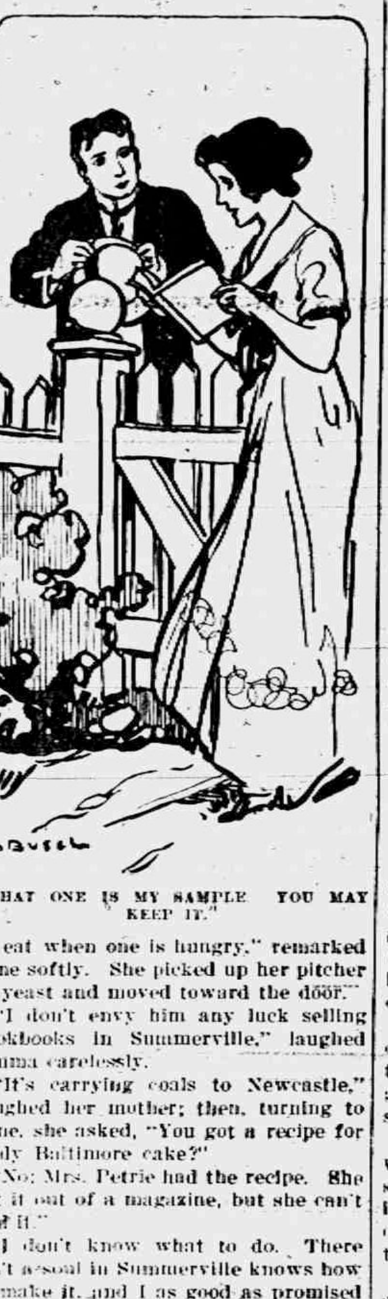
Jane Wade, who had run over to buy some yeast, looked out of the window at the departing agent.

"He looks hot and tired," she said.

"And hungry," added Emma, Mrs. Denton's thin, pale daughter.

"Humph! He better get a man's job, then," commented Mrs. Denton, pouncing upon another potato.

"It must be tantalizing to sell cookbooks and to talk about good things



"THAT ONE IS MY SAMPLE. YOU MAY KEEP IT."

to eat when one is hungry," remarked Jane softly. She picked up her pitcher of yeast and moved toward the door.

"I don't envy him any luck selling cookbooks in Summerville," laughed Emma carelessly.

"It's carrying coals to Newcastle," laughed her mother; then, turning to Jane, she asked, "You got a recipe for Lady Baltimore cake?"

"No; Mrs. Petrie had the recipe. She cut it out of a magazine, but she can't find it."

"I don't know what to do. There ain't a soul in Summerville knows how to make it, and I as good as promised I'd make a big one for the fair. You know how Mrs. Petrie's cake set everybody by the ears last winter."

Jane nodded, and a malicious little twinkle came into her blue eyes. "I reckon that recipe was in 'The Old Homestead Cookbook,'" she said very sweetly.

"I want to know."

"You shouldn't been so hasty, ma," laughed Emma. "If you'd brought the book inside and pretended to look it over I might have copied it off."

"Maybe he will come back this way. If you see him, Jane, send him back. Tell him I'll look at his book," said Mrs. Denton eagerly. "At any rate I'll find out if he has sold any in the village, and if he has I can borrow it. Like as not Mrs. Petrie will buy one."

"He may not come back. Perhaps you have convinced him that the housewives of Summerville can't learn anything from books," remarked Jane demurely as she went away.

Jane looked up and down the road as she neared her own gate, but the book agent was not in sight. As she went around to the back door she looked across the garden, where the fence separated the garden and orchard from the strip of sandy beach bordering the little bay.

Sitting on the beach in the shade of a misshapen cedar tree was the cookbook agent. His straw hat was tossed aside, and his head was bent in his upturned hands.

"Discouraged," whispered Jane to herself, and she crept into the house, where the cool dimness reproached her for the tired man sitting in the hot sand.

She went about getting dinner, glad that her Aunt Hester was spending a few days in Roselen. Aunt Hester shared Mrs. Denton's prejudice against agents, only in a milder degree.

"That dinner must smell good to a hungry man," thought Jane, and then, with one of the impulses that marked her warm heart, she flew down the garden path to the beach gate. The man was still there, in the same attitude. At his feet was a thick volume bound in white oilcloth.

"Oh, I am so glad that you have not gone away!" piped Jane over the fence.

The man lifted his head and looked at her with faint interest. His face was pale and haggard, and his eyes were dull. Jane hastily decided that if he were well fed and sunburned he would be remarkably handsome. His dark hair was lightly flecked with gray about the temples.

"Did you speak to me?" he asked, rising to his feet.

"Yes," said Jane, a little breathlessly. "You see, I heard some one was selling cookbooks, and I wanted one, and I was afraid you had gone past. I happened to see you sitting here."

He smiled patiently and brought the book to her, opening the pages, displaying the pictures and drawing her attention in a half hearted way to the excellence of the type and the new arrangement of the classified recipes.

"I want one," said Jane in a businesslike way, drawing out her little purse. "How much is it?"

"One-fifty."

He accepted the money and gave the book to Jane, thanking her in a tired voice.

"Is this the last one you have?" she asked.

"It's the first one," he smiled. "I've got a dozen more at the express office. That one is my sample. You may keep it. I—I haven't sold another one in this village, and I've been here two days. I shan't need the sample. I'm through."

"You haven't been at it long?"

"No. I'm a bookkeeper in the mills at Townton. I've been sick for ten weeks, and the doctor suggested my taking up canvassing with the idea of keeping me out of doors all summer. I couldn't afford to be idle any longer. My job will be ready for me in October if I'm strong enough to take it again."

"I am sorry," said Jane, thoughtfully turning the leaves of the book. "I've been thinking that these cookbooks would make splendid Christmas presents for women I know. I do believe I'll take the whole dozen, and then I won't have to puzzle over what to get my twelve cousins [illegible]

"Do you mean it?" asked the man in a relieved tone.

"Of course. If you will bring the books here some time this afternoon I will pay you for them."

"Thank you. I don't know what to say. It seems too good to be true after such a run of bad luck. I will get the books here before sundown. You are very kind."

Jane evaded his wistful glance and hurried back to the house. Once there she looked at her reflection in the kitchen glass. "Jane Wade, you're a goose—goose—goose!" she said deliberately, but a little smile crinkled the corners of her lips.

At 6 o'clock that night Paul Sherman gave the twelve cookbooks into Jane's hands and went away with $18 tucked in his pocket, not knowing that it represented Jane's taxes for the year. Jane's eyes, Jane's smile, the touch of her hand, lingered with him and perhaps had to do with his securing a job to drive a delivery wagon for the Summerville grocery the rest of the summer.

Often when he drove by Jane's house she would be at the window or on the porch and would give him a smile and he would take off his hat to her in a courtly way that did not at all coincide with his work. One afternoon when he drove by he stopped and told her that he had made all his deliveries. He wished his wagon was a buggy and he would take her to drive.

At this she said there were a horse and buggy in the stable that he was welcome to use any time he wanted to. He said Saturday afternoons in summer the store closed at noon and he would consider it a favor if she would let him drive her out the next Saturday.

She assented, and the next Saturday he called, dressed in a very different suit of clothes from what he delivered goods in, and they went to drive together. When they returned Jane asked him to tea the next evening (Sunday), and this was the beginning of a number of drives and Sunday evenings passed together that lasted for the whole summer.

By this time it was noticed by the Dentons and others that Jane had taken up with the cookbook man, but none of them dared tease her about it. During the fall she was seen with him as much as ever, and the village was agog to know if there was anything in it, but Jane said nothing, and no one cared to ask the man in the case.

It was December before he found courage to ask Jane to marry him. By this time he was back at the mill, grown brown and strong and handsome.

"All due to you, my dear," he said, with his arms around Jane. She had said "Yes." "You put new courage into me that day. I was down and out. By the way, where are the twelve cookbooks, Jane?"

Jane blushed guiltily and did not answer.

"I was wondering, because, you see, I've discovered that you haven't got a cousin in the world nor any relation except Aunt Hester."

Whatever explanation Jane had to make was whispered so softly that no one save her sweetheart heard it, and it appeared to be entirely satisfactory to the "cookbook man."

MONROE—Mrs. Van Miller, who is the president of the Civic Improvement society, dropped a small bomb at council meeting when she advocated the extermination of the city's squirrels. These squirrels were imported about eight years ago and have since been carefully guarded by citizens. There are now hundreds here. City officials are puzzled as to what legal method to follow, as squirrels are protected by both state and city laws, and a Monroe ordinance prohibits discharge of firearms in city limits.

BATTLE CREEK — Since a number of local swimmers disobeyed the circuit court injunction, which prohibits swimming in Goguac lake, the city's water supply, the city commission has turned the task of enforcing the order over to City Attorney Cavanagh. Although the bath house has been closed, it has been learned that the son of a passenger boat captain has been selling suits for fifty cents, and buying them back for twenty-five cents, after his customers had taken their daily swim.

LANSING — Michigan's Secretary of State Martindale has received articles of association of the "Beakes-For-United-States-Senator Company." The principal office of the company is in Saugatuck, Allegan county, and the corporate existence is given as five years. As set forth in the articles of association the purpose of the corporation is political and is to "promote the candidacy of Congressman Samuel W. Beakes, of Ann Arbor, for the Democratic candidacy for United States senator."

CALUMET — Michigan cavalry was called out to disperse a mob of copper mine strikers who gathered at a nonunion boarding house and threatened the landlady and boarders with violence. The troops escorted the non union men to their work. Arrests were made by the deputy sheriffs after the arrival of the troops but this did not end the trouble. At the jail where no troops were stationed, the wife of one of the arrested men landed a blow on the jaw of an officer.

IMPROVEMENTS AT WILLIAMSON BROTHERS

Refrigerating Plant Being Installed

For the last few weeks Williamson Bros. have been busy installing a Refrigerating Plant. It is a Hartford Automatic and is being put in by the Automatic Refrigating Co. of Hartford, Conn., and when completed will be one of the finest plants in this part of the country.

A room 30x16x9 has been fitted up, walls and ceilings being constructed of cork and cement. Two layers of cork 2 inches thick is being used with a layer of cement a quarter of an inch thick between while the inside and outside face of the wall is made of cement half an inch thick.

The refrigerator is cooled by the use of coils of pipe filled with ammonia gas. The ammonia is pumped into the pipes by a compressor fed by an electric motor. It is pumped from a storage tank to an automatic expansion valve where the fluid is changed to a gas and then forced through the coils of pipe hung to the ceiling of the refrigerator.

A thermostat is placed on the inside wall which is set at the desired degree of temperature and the temperature can be held at about this point will not vary but a degree above or below. When falling below this point the machine is stopped when rising above it is started again. This is done by an electrical attachment connecting the thermostat with the motor. The thermostat can be adjusted to maintain any temperature even down below zero. This means that power is being consumed only when temperature requires it.

The plant is quite simple in construction and requires very little attention. An electric bell registers a kick when the current or water supply is insufficient.

The plant is a needed improvement and will mean a great saving to the firm. It will be completed in a few days and ready for use. Two car loads of their product can be stored in the refrigerator at one time and can be kept for weeks without any harm being done.

Williamson Bros. are doing a fine business and buy and ship yearly about 500,000 lbs. of poultry, about 400,000 doz. eggs and about 50,000 lbs. of butter and cheese. Most of this finding its way to Eastern markets.

CALUMET—Shortly after returning from his conference with Governor Ferris, General Abbey's first act was to seek for John H. Walker, president of the United Mine Workers of Illinois and representative of the mine and metals department of the American Federation of Labor, for an explanation of the latter's public charge that militia men were guilty of "fiendish acts," and they "ravished girls," and "assaulted and beat strikers and also their families." Walker, who was here representing, he says, the mining division of the American Federation, has been particularly rabid in his attacks on the militia. He and Joseph Cannon, an organizer, who is accompanied by his wife, also a federation speaker, have accused the militia of crimes that pall those of Turk and Bulgar, overwhelming a defenseless village. No complaints have been made to civil or military authorities, and General Abbey says he will put it up to Walker to explain why he has not reported such serious crimes if he knows of them.

Fox in the Ring.

All the players form in a ring except the "fox." He sneaks around outside and taps one of the players on the shoulder. The one tapped starts to run around the outside of the ring in one direction, while the "fox" runs around the ring in the other direction, both making for the place vacated by the tapped child. If the "fox" gets there first the other is "it." If not the "fox" is "it" until he succeeds in getting into a "den."

AMUSEMENTS

"WHERE THE TRAIL DIVIDES,"

A very good house greeted the presentation of this play at the Opera House Wednesday evening.

The story was one of deep interest and was well sustained throughout, each character being perfectly at home in their various parts. Ralph Burt as the old man Bob Manning, was certainly fine. Bud Smith the Marshall, Clayton Craig the cousin, Mrs. Jim Burton who kept the hotel, all deserve special mention, but the real interest centered around Ma-wa-cha-sa or How Lander the Indian and Bess Lander who have grown from childhood together who loved and married, despite the threats and sneers of those around them.

Poor Bess however yields to the pangs of loneliness and becomes an easy victim of Craig her cousin who in the end deserts her and is avenged by the wronged and heartbroken How.

How, is such a real character that it is hard to believe that he is not the Indian that he protrays, he fascinates and holds ones interest from first to last, and as he stands alone after he has laid the destroyer of his happiness at his feet ones heart goes out in pity for him in his desolation.

Mr. Marks certainly has made a good beginning for the season's entertainments keeping up his reputation of former years.

Baking Powder Biscuits

Light as a Feather

By Mrs. Janet McKenzie Hill, Editor of the Boston Cooking School Magazine

Baking Powder Biscuits made by this recipe are so far ahead of ordinary baking powder biscuits that, if once tried, you will never use any other recipe. Try it the next time you run short of bread. Save this recipe. 29

K C Baking Powder Biscuits

Three cups flour; ¼ to ½ cup shortening; 3 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder; about 1 cup milk or water; 1 teaspoonful salt.

Sift three times, the flour, salt and baking powder. Work into the flour the shortening, using lard or butter for shortening. Then mix to a very soft dough with the milk. The softer the biscuit enters the oven, the lighter it comes out. Never knead baking powder biscuits; press the dough into shape and roll lightly. Cut in small shapes and bake on a sheet or very shallow pan in a hot oven. In placing biscuits in the pans place well apart, not allowing edges to touch. Small biscuits are better than large ones. Large biscuits do not have the proper amount of time to raise and bake.

Have you seen the new K C Cook's Book? Brimful of appetizing recipes that simply must be successful every time if the few simple directions are carefully followed. You would gladly pay 50 cents for this valuable book, yet we send it absolutely free upon receipt of the colored certificate packed in every 25-cent can of K C Baking Powder. JAQUES MFG. CO., Chicago. Small cans do not have Cook's Book certificates.

LANSING—Because Marie Romun, a young Hungarian woman who was employed by the Malleable Iron company, of Detroit, fainted when she was compelled to stand between another employe and a country woman armed with a revolver, the Romun woman has asked for two weeks' compensation from the company and the company official wrote to the industrial board, asking if the company were liable for an injury not occupational. According to alleged facts, one of the Hungarian women, also an employe of the company, became enraged at another and chased her with a loaded revolver, threatening to take her life. The pursued woman took refuge behind the broad back of Marie Romun, who, it appears, was compelled to call a physician several times, to assure her that she wasn't shot and to calm her nerves. After being able to return to work, she asked that the company compensate her in proportion to her scare, and temporarily hazardous occupation of protecting another employe.

PRACTICAL BAKING LESSONS

SHORT CAKES AND APPLE DUMPLINGS

From the opening of the strawberry season until peaches are gone, there is no dessert that seems to fit every occasion or is more generally liked than the short cake. The rest of the year its place is filled very acceptably by the apple dumpling. These recipes I have tested many, many times, and I can guarantee success if directions are followed closely.

Nevada Briggs

Strawberry Shortcake

For small families, half of this recipe will be sufficient.
2¼ cups sifted pastry flour
2¼ level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder
½ teaspoonful salt ½ cup shortening
About ¾ cup milk Butter
2 baskets strawberries
Between 1 and 2 cups granulated sugar
1 cup or more double cream

Hull, wash and drain the berries; reserve a few choice berries to garnish the top of the cake; cut the rest in halves and mix with the sugar. Beat the cream and set aside to chill. Sift together, three times, the flour, baking powder and salt; work in the shortening; then mix to a soft dough with the milk. Spread the mixture in two layer cake pans. Bake about twenty minutes. Turn one cake out on a hot plate, spread liberally with butter, pour on part of the berries; cover with the second cake, also spread with butter, pour over the rest of the berries and put the whipped cream above, with the whole berries here and there. Other fruits, such as pineapple cut in small bits, bananas, peaches or any kind of berries may be used with the pastry. To insure a flaky pastry have all ingredients cold and mix very lightly.

Raspberry Shortcake

2 cups sifted pastry flour ½ teaspoonful salt
2 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder
1¼ cup butter Yolk of 1 egg
½ cup milk or more as needed
1 cup raspberries ¼ teaspoonful salt
½ cup sugar
Raspberry Sauce.
¼ cup butter 1 cup sugar
1 cup raspberry pulp White of 1 egg

Sift together, three times, the flour, salt and baking powder, and work in the butter. Beat the yolk; add the milk and stir to a dough, using more milk if needed. Divide into two parts; knead the larger part slightly and roll to fit a pan; spread over it the berries, salt and sugar; knead the second piece and place on top of the berries. Bake about half an hour. Serve hot with the sauce. For the sauce, cream the butter; add the sugar; then gradually the mashed-and-sifted berry pulp; and lastly, the white of egg, beaten dry. This makes a light, fluffy sauce. Try this pastry and sauce with peaches, blackberries, pineapple or apples.

Asparagus Shortcake

2¼ cups sifted pastry flour
½ teaspoonful salt ½ cup shortening
2¼ level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder
Sweet milk Butter
1 large bunch asparagus ¼ cup butter
¼ cup flour ½ teaspoonful salt
¼ cup butter (another) Asparagus liquid
2 hard-cooked eggs

Make dough as for Strawberry Short Cake. Knead slightly and roll to fit a layer cake pan. Bake about twenty minutes. Split the cake and spread each half with butter. Have the tender portion of the asparagus cut in inch lengths, cooked tender. Make a drawn butter sauce of the flour, salt, butter and asparagus liquid, heating in the last fourth cup of butter after the sauce is taken from the fire, and add the asparagus. Pour part of the asparagus and sauce over one layer of the cake; set the second layer in place and pour over the rest of the asparagus. Finish with two hard-cooked eggs, cut in quarters. Serve very hot. Canned asparagus may be used. This pastry is also excellent with green beans or peas.

Baked Apple Dumplings

A New Way

1½ cups sifted pastry flour
¼ cup shortening ½ teaspoonful salt
3 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder
About ½ cup milk Apples

Fill the cups of a buttered muffin pan with pared and sliced apples, sprinkle with salt and pour two or three tablespoonfuls of water into each cup. Sift together, three times, the flour, salt and baking powder; work in the shortening, and mix to a soft dough with the milk. Drop the dough from a spoon upon the apples in the cups, smoothing the tops. Bake about twenty-five minutes. Invert the pan on a large serving dish. Put a spoonful of hard sauce over the apple in each dumpling and finish with a grating of nutmeg. Other fruit, as peaches or cherries, may be used in the same way, serving with cream or hard sauce.

Hard Sauce With Egg

Beat ½ cup of butter, 1½ cups powdered sugar and 1 egg until creamy and smooth, flavor and serve as a sauce.

Helpful Hints on Baking

For mixing pastry for Short Cake and Apple Dumplings, mix very lightly, only enough to mix the moisture with the dry flour, using a knife or fork for mixing, never a spoon, for a spoon packs and mashes the batter. Pastries should be loose and flaky and to insure this, keep the batter loose in mixing; it should have a rough appearance before baking.

For baking short cake pastry have a moderate oven to start, giving the pastry time to loosen and rise before baking.

Always spread with butter as soon as taken from the oven.

Never put fruit on pastry until ready to serve to avoid soaking with fruit juices.

In all baking be assured of success every time by carefully measuring each ingredient. No guess cook ever succeeds every time. It requires a certain amount of every article named in a recipe, and an over or under measure is sure to make a failure of the recipe.

K C Baking Powder is a wonderful aid to successful baking. It is always uniform in strength and action, giving uniformly perfect results. Use K C Baking Powder according to directions—never more than the recipe directs. K C will keep perfectly for years, the last spoonful being as strong as the first. I have used K C Baking Powder for years under all circumstances in both high and low altitudes. In high altitudes there is greater trouble with cakes falling, but where a double-raise baking powder, such as K C is used there is absolutely no danger of food falling.

PHONE STRUCK BY LIGHTNING

A phone owned by the Tecumseh Electric Co. and located at the home of Mrs. A. K Waldron, was struck by lightning during the storm Thursday noon August 21st

The lightning struck the wires jumping an open switch, tore off the induction coil and blew the door off its hinges landing it across the room, in fact completely wrecking the telephone. Next an oak table standing near was split, and from the table the lightning seemed to follow a partition until it finally passed out along a water pipe which lead to a tank.

The family were all at home but luckily were in a different room and no harm was done to them. One should be extremely careful while handling a phone during an electrical storm

HEALTH AND PURE FOOD SPECIAL.

One of the greatest educational features ever offered people of this vicinity is the health and pure food special which stopped in Tecumseh while on its tour of the lower peninsula. This train is sent out by the Michigan state board of health and the dairy and food commission and brings a most forcefel message to the hundreds who visit it The train arrived here at 9:30 a. m and left at 12 m, and was visited by a large number of the citizens of Tecumseh.

Great stress was laid on the necessity for the prevention of tuberculosis with charts, cartoons and statistics. The danger of the public drinking cup, the careless ignorance in the care of infants and the sanitary condition of our schools were all forcibly illustrated, The adulteration of food and patent medicines were all discussed and illustrated by specimens of the various adulterated articles. In fact from start to finish it was a lesson to be well considered by everyone.

It is with a great degree of pride that the report of Daniel E. McClure on the conditioh of Tesumseh is recorded. He spoke in great praise of the cleanliness of Tecumseh and its sanitary condition, and complimented Dr. Bregel our efficient health officer on the good work he has been doing, speaking in an earnest hearty manner before the crowded car of people.

WATER WORKS FOR DUNDEE

We see that Dundee, Mich., has turned down the proposition for a water system by a vote of 8. We wonder how the people of Dundee can feel that they can get along without it. The one item of fire protection let alone the sanitary benefits that will follow the installing of a plant, will outweigh any increase in taxation.

We of Tecumseh would be very loth to return to the old ways, before we had such a good system of water works It is to be hoped that Dundee will reconsider its vote.

LARRO=FEED

The Guaranteed Feed.

Would you try a new Dairy Feed if you knew it would increase the milk and decrease the cost? We are sure you would, as it is a business proposition. We have taken the agency for LARRO-FEED, a guaranteed balanced ration for dairy cows. This feed is composed of bran, middlings, beet pulp, dried distillers' grains, cotton seed meal, gluten feed and salt mixed by machinery in exact proportions and fed with hay or corn fodder without other grain. It comes in 100 lb. sacks with analysis on each sack and sells for $1.70. Take a sack home and test it and if not satisfied that it makes more milk with less cost than the feed you now use, return empty sack and your $1.70 will be refunded.

The Tented Village

By GEORGE W. DICKINSON,
General Manager of the Michigan State Fair.

GEORGE W. DICKINSON.

GRAVE disappointment has always been expressed by Michigan State Fair visitors over the lack of accommodations in the way of sleeping quarters when attending the state's outing in Detroit, and I firmly believe I have partially solved the problem this year with a tented village.

A big area has been apportioned off at the Woodward avenue grounds, and preparations are now under way for the completion of the countless canvas abodes which will house visitors during Fair week.

These will not be merely tent shelters, but will contain all the necessary comforts of sleeping quarters. The district will, of course, be properly policed, and propriety will be severely insisted on.

The innovation is but another step in the working out of the new Fair management's idea that the Michigan State Fair should be a family gathering and not strictly limited to the members of the sterner sex. It was this very absence of adequate sleeping accommodations which prevented the entire family partaking of the pleasures of the Wolverine State's holiday in the past.

The farmer's housewife always dreaded the crush on the cars and the trouble of finding a place to stay while in the city and consequently could not figure on bringing the children to town.

This year rural Michigan can figure on getting to the Fair, say, in the morning and spending the entire day on the grounds and seeing everything worth seeing and never be annoyed with the attendant jam on getting a town bound car after it is over. Then, again, as is often the case, the visitor does not feel that he can see the Fair properly in one day. By sleeping at the grounds he can get up bright and early and start in sightseeing again without extra gate tariff.

THINK OF OTHERS.

No man can live happily who regards himself alone, who turns everything to his own advantage. Thou must live for another if thou wishest to live for thyself.—Seneca.

DON'T EXPERIMENT

You Will Make No Mistake if You Follow This Tecumseh Citizens Advice.

Never neglect your kidneys.

If you have pain in the back, urinary disorders, dizziness and nervousness, its time to act and no time to experiment. These are frequently symptoms of kidney trouble, and a remedy which is recommended for the kidneys should be taken in time.

Doan's Kidney Pills is a good remedy to use. No need to experiment. It has acted effectively in many cases in Tecumseh. Follow the advice of a Tecumseh citizen.

E. C. Bristine, farmer, N. Democrat St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I began to suffer from kidney complaint twenty years ago and the medicine I took brought me only temporary relief. Often my back ached intensely and the secretions from my kidneys were irregular in passage and highly colored. Doan's Kidney Pills went to the seat of my trouble and did me so much good that I am seldom without a supply on hand." (Statement given December 5, 1912.)

A WILLING COFIRMATION

When Mr. Bristine was interviewed at a later date, he said: "You may continue to use my name as a reference for the merits of Doan's Kidney Pills. Whenever I feel in need of a kidney medicine, I take this preparations and effectively."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Riches.

He is rich or poor according to what he is, not according to what he has.—H. W. Beecher.

Sometimes the symptoms of kidney and bladder trouble are so plain no one can mistake them. Backache, weak and lame back with soreness over the kidneys, sharp pains, rheumatism, dull headache, and disturbed sleep, are all indications of a trouble that Foley Kidney Pills will relieve quickly and permanently. Try them. For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

Wisdom.

A wise wife soon learns to manage her husband, while a wise husband never tries to manage his wife.

Mothers! Have Your Children Worms?

Are they feverish, restless, nervous, irritable, dizzy or constipated? Do they continually pick their nose or grind their teeth? Have they cramping pains, irregular and ravenous appetite? These are all signs of worms. Worms not only cause your child suffering, but stunt its mind and growth. Give "Kickapoo Worm Killer" at once. It kills and removes the worms, improves your child's appetite, regulates stomach, liver and bowels. The symptoms disappear and your child is made happy and healthy, as nature intended. All druggists or by mail 25c.

Kidney Trouble began with a lame back

J. L. Hackl, 915 Eighth St., Lincoln, Ill., was recently cured of a bad case of kidney trouble that started with a lame back, and says: "I am certainly thankful to getting a cure of my kidney trouble by using Foley Kidney Pills." Try them yourself. For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

Pilgrims and Puritans.

The pilgrims, or, as they are often called, the "pilgrim fathers," were the seventy-four men and the twenty-eight women, members of the John Robinson's church, who sailed in the Mayflower from Leyden to North America and landed at Plymouth rock, where they founded a colony Dec. 25, 1620. The Puritans were the English nonconformists who came over later, the name being given to them on account of their supposed great purity of doctrine, life and discipline.

NELLIE BLAKE'S COURTSHIP

It Brought a Result She Least Expected.

Nellie Blake was a very nice girl. The only trouble with her, a trouble common with most girls whose parents are abundantly able to support them, was that she hadn't enough to do to keep her out of mischief. Having finished her education, there seemed nothing more for her to do but to wait for her affinity and be married. This was not to her taste, and she proposed to her father to study—well, something, anything, so that if she should be left without—

"Nonsense," said the father. "I'll not permit anything of the kind."

Then Nellie considered matrimony. The only man who wanted her, so far as she knew, was Fred Langley. But Fred was too matter of fact. He was a plodder. He had plodded at college, at the law school and was now plodding in his profession. She thought over a number of others, but they all had something about them unsuited to her taste. She gave up the matrimonial problem, but one day, on reading a matrimonial advertisement, just for fun she thought she would advertise for a husband and see what kind of answers one receives in such cases.

Sitting down at the desk in the library, she wrote in a large hand (her own was very delicate) with a stub pen and very black ink a communication in the usual form. Then lest some one should find out that she was so absurdly engaged she took it to the newspaper office herself.

A correspondence sprang up between Nellie and an unknown gentleman who called himself Alonzo Courtney, Nellie writing as Clarissa Varian, the letters growing in length till near the end an average letter covered twenty-four pages. Nellie had expected to have a good laugh at her replies. She was mistaken. The first was so delicate and deferential that no one but a thoroughbred could have written it. All denoted extreme refinement. Then the original and attractive ideas the man had! And how those ideas appealed to her! It was marvelous that one who had never seen her should have such an insight into her most hidden feelings. His letters became more and more impassioned till at last he begged for a meeting.

Had not Nellie Blake fallen in love with a soul she had seen expressed on paper she would not have granted such an interview. As it was, taking advantage of an evening when her parents would be out, she wrote Mr. Courtney that she would receive him at 8 o'clock. When the hour arrived, she was in the drawing room in her most becoming costume. When the doorbell sounded, her heart went up in her throat. Then came the card of Mr. Alonzo Courtney, and while he was getting off his coat and hat in the hall she thought she should faint. The drawing room door was pushed open and in walked the matter of fact Fred Langley.

To say that Nellie was angry gives no idea of her condition. She was too enraged to say anything for a few moments. Then she hissed:

"Impostor!"

"Is it an imposture for a man to transcribe his inner self in words to one he loves?"

"How did you know that I advertised?"

"One morning, doubtless soon after you wrote your advertisement, I called on you when you were not at home. The maid, who did not know that you were out, showed me into the library and went upstairs to deliver a message from me. While waiting for her return I noticed some large black letters in reverse on the blotter on the desk. I amused myself deciphering what made an excellent puzzle and had nearly finished before it occurred to me that I was reading a secret. For this I must apologize. Will you forgive me?"

"And then?"

"It occurred to me that you had written the duplicate. I wanted to discover under cover what of strength or weakness, good or evil, there might be in you. I watched for your advertisement and answered it."

"Had you a right to do so?"

"No. One has never the right to lie in concealment for a friend. Yet had I not been your friend I should have had a perfect right. A girl who advertises for a husband is open to all the world. Would you deny me the right you had given millions of strangers?"

Nellie winced.

"Nevertheless," he went on, "the indiscretion has brought a revelation to me. I had no idea of the depth of feeling there is in your nature, your noble conceptions and especially your desire to be something more than a drone."

He could have said nothing that would have so well pleased her. She turned away to harmonize her conflicting emotions. The Alonzo Courtney she had pictured in her imagination was giv[illegible] to the plain Fred Langley. [illegible] being who had been photographed in his letters—there he was waiting for her to speak again.

Without turning she reached her hand backward. Langley sprang forward and took it. She looked for some of the impassioned similes she had read so often and received into her heart. Instead there was but one word:

"Sweetheart!"

Nevertheless it was the word she wanted.

Even Lambs May Turn.

It appears that the lamb can turn as well as the proverbial worm. At Lampeter a flock of sheep was being driven along, and the accompanying dog threw a little extra ardor into the job of hurrying the animals. In doing so he paid special attention to a lamb, whereupon, to the delight of the onlookers, the lamb turned on his assailant. The dog took to his heels, and the lamb rushed after him into a shop, and no one knows what would not have occurred to the collie had not the farmer arrived and interfered.—Cardiff Western Mail.

SPIRITUAL SUNSHINE.

The harvest of grains and fruits is not more regular or abundant than the yield of human affections, sympathies, fellowships, but here also there are differences of seasons and of soils. We must improve our spiritual husbandry; we must enrich the ground from which good qualities spring; we must expose our inmost life to the quickening sun.—Charles G. Ames.

FOR THE WOMAN WHO THINKS AND FEELS.

Some women complain that they periodically suffer from dull and heavy feelings, or dizziness in the head, nervousness, pain and bearing-down feelings which should not occur to the normal healthy woman. But most every woman is subject to these pains at some time in her life, due to abnormal conditions in life, such as corsets, over-taxed strength, bad air, poor or improper food, wet feet, sluggish liver, etc. A regulator and female tonic made from native medicinal roots with pure glycerin, and without the use of alcohol, called has proven its value in thousands of cases, like the following:

MRS. MARTIN.

MRS. DONA M. MARTIN, of Auburn, Nebr., Route 1, Box 84, says: "I thought I would write and let you know what your medicines have done for me. I have used them for thirty years for female trouble and general weakness with the very best result, and they have saved me hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. I buy the 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery' and take them together. I never was disappointed in your remedies and I take pleasure in recommending them to any suffering lady. I am now almost fifty years old; at forty-five I took your medicines, both kinds, and I passed that period very easily and left me [illegible] and healthy. I feel like a young girl. If any lady cares to write me, I will gladly tell her more about the good work of your medicines."

MRS. H. F. BARNES.

Arsula J., daughter of Chauncey and Elizabeth Dibble, was born in the Township of Ridgeway September 1st, 1853. Here she grew to womanhood and, soon after her marriage to H. F. Barnes on September 1st, 1870, was united to the Ridgeway M. E. church.

To Mr. and Mrs. Barnes were born three children Ervin C. Barnes of Ridgeway, Estella M. Mapes deceased, and Mrs. Wm. E. H. Miller of Adrian.

After their marriage they built a house in the woods and cleared up their tract of land, bringing up their children and meeting the pioneers' hardships none of which were too great for her to bear for her loved ones. In 1893 the family moved to Ridgeway so the children could attend school.

On November 11th, 1905, Estella M. passed away, leaving two children, Lavere then seven years of age and Corinne five days old. Here again she showed her devotion by caring for these children for over six years, when on account of failing health she was obliged to give them up. For a couple of years she was a great sufferer and finally on August 20th she passed peacefully away surrounded by husband, children and grandchildren.

Besides the immediate family she leaves five children and two brothers, Chas. Dibble of Ridgeway and Cornelius Dibble of Milan.

The funeral service was held August 23rd from her late home and was attended by a large concourse of friends and neighbors. The remains were laid away in the village cemetery.

They are gathering in another home.
Silently gathering one by one;
The circle is larger there than here,
And still they are going, one by one.

We hinder and hold them with clinging hands
With hands that can scarcely let them go,
But from our clasp into viewless air
They must vanish from our sight and go.

We follow their footsteps to their new home,
From dear ones here to loved ones there;
There are longing looks, a sigh, a smile,
As we near the home of loved ones there.

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to tender our sincere thanks to the many friends for their kindness during the sickness and death of our loved one, also for the many floral offerings and the music rendered.

MACON

Mrs. Frank Satterlee is quite ill at the present writing.

Mrs. Jesse Frost is having some serious trouble with her ear and head. The attending physician thinks the mastoid bone is becoming affected.

Master Walter Harring is staying with his grandparents, Jacob Harring and wife for a time.

Mrs. Wm. Osgood is still quite poorly.

Little Kenneth Allen has been ill with cholera infantum since last Friday.

The Lindsley district school reunion which was held last week Thursday, was well attended and proved a success. A sumptuous dinner was served to which all did ample justice, and afterward a good program was given. As the roll was called each teacher responded with one remark. Miss Julia Hough being among the number responded in a happy manner, referring to her work as teacher in the summer of 1856. Mrs. Rachel Howell was another of the first teachers, and in her remarks she spoke of the ones who "have gone on." Mr. John Jackson was there and being one of the oldest scholars, related some interesting reminiscences of school days in the old log school house. It was voted to make the organization a permanent one, and the following officers were elected.

MAN KILLED UNDER HARROW

Henry Selsma, of Near Hudsonville, Meets Tragic Death.

HUDSONVILLE, MICH.—Henry W. Selsma, who has been employed on the farm of Henry Husting across the Allegan county line, was killed, his body being terribly mangled by a spike-toothed harrow.

He was caught under the machine when the team ran away and dragged nearly a quarter of a mile before the horses stopped. His home is in New Jersey.

FLINT—The city police officials and Coroner Taylor are trying to identify an aged man whose dead body was found in a room at the Sherman hotel. He had hanged himself. He was recognized as one who had fainted on the street a few days ago. To Poor Commissioner Wells he asserted his name was A. L. Rogers and to the desk sergeant in the police station he said his name was A. L. Johnson. He said he had come here to visit the Kline brothers, Samuel, John and George. At the hotel he was registered under the name of O. Clark Abrams, of Lapeer.

SPEED TESTS AT THE STATE FAIR

World's Foremost Auto Drivers to Compete.

MOST POWERFUL MACHINES

Oldfield, Disbrow, Burman, Mulford and Others to Perform on Sept. 20. Will Be Actual Competitions and Not Exhibitions—Electrial Timing Devices—Races Are Sanctioned Ones.

This year's Michigan State Fair auto races will easily take precedence over any similar tests ever held in connection with the Fair if not in the middle west.

Saturday, Sept. 20, is the day set for this year's speed carnival. Those who have seen such daring performers as Ralph Mulford, Louis Disbrow, Teddy Tetzlaff, Barney Oldfield, Bill Endicott and "Wild Bob" Burman in action can well realize what a treat is in store for Michigan State Fair visitors this year.

Not one of these men but is the possessor of some national record or distinction, and with the rich prizes hung up by the Fair authorities some dirt track records are sure to be crumbled by the winners.

It will be remembered that Ralph Mulford, Burman and Louis Disbrow finished well in the money in the big Indianapolis speedway contest on Decoration day. These pilots are in themselves enough to insure the success of the races, not to mention such internationally known men as Barney Oldfield, Teddy Tetzlaff and Endicott.

To whirl around a circular mile track in a minute is a thrilling exhibition, but State Fair visitors are sure to see much faster miles than this, for the auto speeding this year will not be demonstrations, but actual competitions.

General Manager Dickinson will take every precaution to have the Fair oval in the best possible condition. This precaution also will apply to the handling of the spectators, and every measure will be taken to prevent accidents.

The blinding dust on the turns which has sent many a daring pilot to his grave will be eliminated by a scientific oiling system and the track rolled hard and firm so that the giant machines will have solid footing for the big speed tests.

As the Michigan State Fair course is regarded as one of the fastest tracks in the country it was not hard to get these drivers to compete. They know that their delicately adjusted iron steeds will not be shaken apart and perhaps put out of commission by the rocky traveling, as is the case on [illegible] [illegible] smooth fair surfaces.

This year's auto speeding is sanctioned by the national auto organization, so that any records made will be official in every way. Electric timing devices will be used so that the spectators will know that any time announced is absolutely right.

Remember this big racing feature comes on the last day of the Fair, Sept. 20.

OLD SOLDIERS AT FAIR.

Veterans Will Mingle With Youngsters This Year.

Monday, Sept. 15, will this year be known as Grand Army day at the Michigan State Fair. All the Michigan veterans who wear the regular Grand Army badge or the reunion medal will be admitted free of charge.

Various tents about the grounds will be set aside where the veterans may convene and discuss old times and have a good time in general.

As Monday will also be Children's day, there will be a remarkable contrast in the majority of the patrons. The old soldiers are in the majority granddads and will certainly welcome young America, for whose happiness they endured such hardships in the stirring days of the sixties.

ARCHBOLD, OHIO, IS SWEPT BY FLAMES

Loss Is Estimated at Several Hundred Thousand Dollars.

Toledo, O., Sept. 1.—With the east business section a total loss and its only fire engine out of commission, Archbold, O., was saved from destruction by assistance from Toledo and nearby towns. The fire started in a dry good store of Theoboldt and Gype.

When the fire engine broke down a bucket brigade was formed but flames spread rapidly and soon enveloped the business district. Fifteen business houses were destroyed.

The origin of the fire is unknown. The loss will reach several hundred thousand of dollars.

Archbold is a town of about 1,500 inhabitants, forty miles west of Toledo.

EVIL IN TRAIN OF SUFFRAGE

California Suffragist Leader Repudiates Cult.

WORKING HAVOC WITH WOMEN

Monster Is Created, She Declares, That Has Turned on Sex with Appalling Results—Women No Better Than Men—California Is a Horrible Example.

Washington, Sept. 1.—Miss Annie Bock, who was one of California's most active suffragists for more than a year, is astounded by the evils which she says she has found in equal suffrage in her own state. She has now turned against the suffrage movement and has issued a notable statement through the headquarters of the National Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage here.

Working Havoc Among Women.

"'Votes for women' described by its advocates as the panacea for all political evils," says Miss Bock, "is working havoc among those very women who have persuaded the men voters of their state to give them the suffrage. Women who have obtained the franchise are Frankensteins, creators of a political monster that has turned upon the sex with appalling results.

"It takes some fortitude," Miss Bock adds, "to come out and acknowledge that one has been wrong. After due observation, study and deliberation, I am willing to make such a confession. As Secretary of the California Equality league, the largest suffrage organization in California, I gave without remuneration over a year of my life working for suffrage. And now all I have to say is that, if I had it to do over again, I would work twice as hard, if that were possible, against it.

Failure In California.

"As a member of ten clubs and organizations, also as registar, precinct captain, worker at headquarters, and at the polls, I have had more than ordinary opportunity to observe and watch the working of suffrage, and I consider the result not only unsatisfactory and dissappointing, but disastrous. It is most unsatisfactory because what was surmised had been demonstrated that the majority of women not only do not care to vote but have no interest whatever in suffrage. The New York woman who came out to Caliofrnia an dfound that women did not turn out well at the polls—that suffrage is a failure—found out the truth.

Women No Better Than Men.

"Just recently the California suffragists sent out workers to initiate the New York women into the California modus operandi. Suffragists assert that women will purify politics. On the contrary, I have found that women in politics are no better than men The women of Colorado have had suffrage nearly twenty years but from what I have seen I do not believe the women of Colorado are any better off economically or in any other way than the women of the worst anti-suffrage state."

BATTLES POLICE HALF HOUR

Kenosha Man Defies Seven After Luring One to Possible Death.

Kenosha, Wis., Sept. 1.—Intrenched in his house in Brockett street, Frank Spina for a half hour hel doff seven policemen in a battle in which more than fifty shots were fired. Spina had shot and seriously wounded John Cyzak, a police officer, who had entered Spina's residence after hearing several shots fired in a second story room.

Police officers suspect that the luring of Cyzak to the house was a deliberate plot to kill him because of his activity in tracing crime in the foreign settlements here. Physicians state that his condition is critical.

William Maher, an officer, was slightly wounded in the left shoulder by a bullet fired by Spina.

FEDERALS ARE LEAVING JUAREZ

Americans In Southern Provinces Reported In Danger—Both Federals and Rebels In Northern Districts Guarantee Protection and No Fear Is Felt.

El Paso, Sept. 1.—General Francisco and his 600 remaining federal troops left Juarez for Chihuahua to reinforce General Salvador Mercado in his efforts to prevent the combined forces of Pancha Villa and Governor Carranza from taking the northern state capital. The troop train was made up Saturday night but did not leave until early Sunday morning. Only the home guards were left to defend the town against attack from the rebels who are in the vicinity. The emergency movement of the border troops was the result of a report from the south that Carranza was repairing the Conchos river bridge at Ortiz and was preparing to advance on Chihuahua from the south while Villa was advancing from the west.

Villa recently administered a decisive defeat to General Felix Terrazas at San Andres in which large numbers of troops were killed and the troop trains on which Villa is now advancing were captured.

Orozco Breaks with Mercado?

A report was received in Juarez that Pascual Orozco had broken with Mercado because of this battle and that they were about to take arms against each other. This was not to be confirmed as the wire was not working.

Refugees continue to arrive in automobiles and mule carts with tales of hardships enroute.

A train is now being made up in Chihuahua to bring the remaining Americans, numbering 300 to the border. Americans are being mistreated in Chihuahua, they report, and the feeling is especially bitter against them in this city.

Americans Do Not Fear.

In Sonora little or no effort is being made by Americans to comply with the president's orders to evacuate the republic. The rebels have assured the officials of the foreign corporations that they will be given protection and none are leaving. Reports from the west coast say that a battle between 1,000 federals and a superior force of rebels has been in progress at Topolobamp. No verification has been received of the engagement by the junta here.

ZONE CITIES FOR ILLINOIS

A. W. Beilfuss Hopes Legislature Will Pass Act for Residence Districts.

New Yorw, Sept. 1.—Chicago hopes to steal a march on New York by making itself a zone city, according to a letter from A. W. Beilfuss, chairman of the special park commission of Chicago. A zone city is one where the residence district is the residence district and not a medley of villas, apartments houses, a distillery and moving picture shows.

Mr. Beilfuss says that a commission of the Chicago city council has prepared a bill empowering all cities and villages in Illinois to establish districts restricted to homes and other restricted to industries. This bill will be offered to the Illinois legislature at the next session. By its terms no business can enter a home section except by the consent of a large majority of the landowners.

SCIENTIST CAN MAKE SUPERMAN

Philadelphia Doctor Completes Unusual Experiment.

GUINEA PIGS GET TRIPLE SIZE

Small Boy, It Is Claimed, by Treatment with Ductless Glands, Can Be Made to Show Remarkable Results—Old Age, It Is Said, Can Be Postponed.

Philadelphia, Sept. 1.—Dr. Frank R. Starkey of 2,105 Chestnut street declares he can make the physical man superman. Dr. Starkey had just completed some unusual experiments on guinea pigs by the use of ductless glands and has been able to make the little creatures grow almost three times their normal size. He asserts that he could take a small boy and achieve results which, while they would not be approximately the same would at least be unusual.

Grow to Three Times Normal Size.

Dr. Starky's experiments with the ductless glands of lower animals have been watched with interest by physicians all over the country. About nine months he secured a litter of normal infant guinea pigs. Each pig weighed about the same. At the end glands had been injected in which the glands had been injucted weighed almost three times as much as the healthy but untreated pigs.

That Dr. Starkey's discovery may revolutionize things in the medical world is admitted by many physicians who are in a position to know. Dr. Starkey combines the four principal glands by making them into a liquid. He had used them successfully in fighting disease. Not only can a race of giants be bred by the use of the new discovery but it is declared that old age can be put off for some length of time by the extract of glands.

BEE STINGS MAY BE FATAL

Farmer Mows into a Veritable Community of Bumble Bee Nests.

Anderson, Ind., Sept. 1 — John Bock, a wealthy farmer, living near Perkinsville, is in a dangerous condition as a result of having been stung by hundreds of bees. Mr. Bock started with his machine to mow weeds and before he had proceeded once across the field had stirred up several nests of bumble bees. The horses ran away. The bees swarmed about the farmer and all seemed intent on stinging him. When he finally half blinded, groped his way to the house, neighbors were notified by telephone and war was declared on the bumble bees.

Armed with flails and with their heads protected by wire screening, a number of neighbors entered the field and began the extermination of the bees. They found more than thirty nests and each contained more than 1,000 bees. Physicians are doubtful as to whether Bock will recover.

Fire Does $125,000 Damage.

Creston, Ia., Sept. 1.—Fire believed to have started from a spark from a passing engine caused a loss of $125,000 here and for more than an hour threatened the residence section. The blaze started in an icehouse and spread to a poultry, butter and egg plant, which it completely destroyed.

$44,000 IS STOLEN AS OWNER SLEEPS

Rich Iowa Bachelor Refuses to Help Police.

Waverly, Ia., Sept. 1.—Henry Woodford, eccentric bachelor and one of the wealthiest men in this section of the state, was robbed of $44,000 in cash and securities. The room in which he had been sleeping and where the money and bonds were hidden was looted.

The robbery was discovered by Miss Nellie Falls, Woodford's housekeeper, who went to make up his room while he was at breakfast. The robbery was reported to the authorities immediately.

Woodford denied himself to the authorities and his housekeeper was the only one who would give any information. She said that the money had been taken from Woodford's bedroom and that the plunder had been hidden in the mattress and the bed had been overturned in search of the money and securities.

A package of bonds valued at $18,000 was found on the floor just inside the window. Much of the plunder was in securities which were not negotiable. Miss Falls, according to Woodford, is a cousin of Delilah Falls, convicted sixteen years ago for the murder of Jerome Kern.

She was paroled and recommitted on a charge of robbery, and when released married an ex-convict.

Killed Man and Paid for Him.

Topeka, Kan., Sept. 1.—Fred Keehn, sentenced to the penitentiary for ten years for the murder of William Bleisher at Corning, has bought his way out of prison. Keehn, in return for a parole, agreed to pay the widow of his victim $2,000.

The Emerald Eye

It Proves Too Much of a Temptation

By CLARISSA MACKIE

In the Shanghai club the electric fans were humming drowsily, and Chinese boys stepped silently to and fro with trays of cooling drinks.

Frank Oakley moved indolently in his long wicker chair as another man sank into the seat beside him.

"Hello, Oakley!" said the newcomer pleasantly, at the same time lifting a beckoning finger to a passing servant.

"Ah, Langham! How are you? Thought you were in Hongkong." Frank sat up in his chair and scanned the other's dark, blunt featured face.

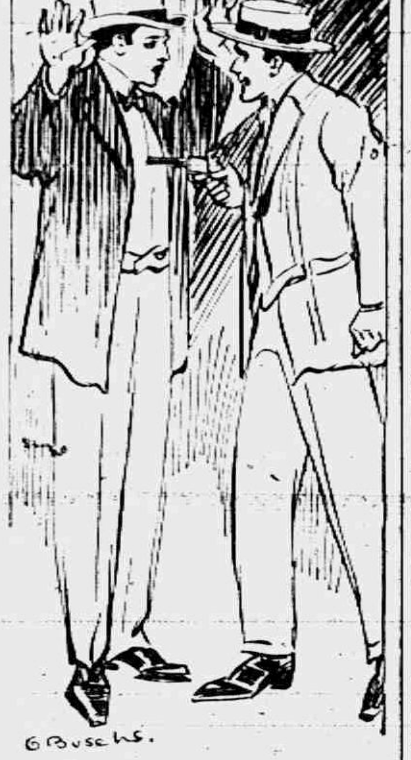
"Was," said the other tersely.

"What's the trouble now? Must be something up or you wouldn't be here. You seem to camp on the trail of old man trouble," [illegible] Frank, pushing his chair close across the table.

"Something is up. Can you spare time to be in on it? I've got to have an assistant."

"It happens to be my dull time. Count on me. What is it this time?"

"Oh, these rascally natives can't keep their hands off the temple treasures, as you know. Now they've got to robbing foreigners down in Hongkong. You know Mrs. Desbrow? She has a bungalow on the peak."



"I'LL GIVE YOU JUST FIVE MINUTES TO RESTORE THE EMERALD EYE."

Frank blushed hotly. "Oh, I know her," he mumbled.

Langham's face was blank. He did not want Frank Oakley to know that he had guessed that the American was in love with the handsome Englishwoman or that in her refusal to marry Frank had been found a motive for a jewel robbery at her bungalow. If he was going to trail Oakley it would be in his own way.

"Well, Mrs. Desbrow has lost a valuable gem from her collection. It's one that her husband bought from a south China mandarin, a pure and priceless emerald that once formed an eye in the forehead of a statue of Buddha. She has worn the emerald as a pendant, and a week ago last night it disappeared from the strong box in her bedroom."

"A week ago last night? Why, I was there then," said Oakley thoughtfully. "I don't remember anything about it."

"It was not discovered until after your departure."

Oakley started and glanced sharply at his companion, but Langham's face was expressionless.

"You've asked me to assist you in your search. What can I do?" asked Oakley after awhile.

"I've got to go over into the native city, I expect. They say you know it pretty well, that you have made surveys of it and so forth."

"That's true."

"Let us begin the first thing in the morning. The only clew I have is that the same night the robbery occurred a trusted servant vanished and has not since been seen."

"Have you any trace of him?"

"I've been sent to Shanghai by one who claimed to know."

Frank Oakley was thoughtful for awhile.

"It is my impression," he said at last, "that if you were advised to come to Shanghai the emerald has gone in the opposite direction."

"Why?" asked the other skeptically.

"Oh, just knowledge of the Asiatic character," returned Oakley vaguely, and Langham was the more convinced that the American was concerned in the gem robbery. He determined to permit the younger man to lead in the search for the stolen gem, but he determined to control the situation himself.

"Then you won't come into the old city with me?" he asked after a painful silence.

"Certainly, now or tomorrow morning."

"Suppose we go now. We might want to go south tomorrow."

They arose and left the club, taking jinrikishas to the gate of the old walled city crouching on the outskirts of the newer modern city.

"Your clew?" asked Oakley as they went down the narrow, crooked, ill-paved streets.

"A Chinese named Sun Yat said that Lin Wah, the missing servant, was seen to offer the emerald eye to a dealer in the gold beaters' street."

"I know three goldsmiths in that street. It's this turn to the right," said Oakley, leading the way.

The first goldsmith professed ignorance of the emerald eye; the second one had seen it, but disparaged its value, and the third said it had been offered him by a Cantonese two days before and that the man had been seen running out of the city.

"I said to the south," was Oakley's comment.

"My impression is that it's nearer," said Langham doggedly, and something in his tone told the truth of the situation to Frank Oakley.

"Out with the whole thing, Langham," he said shortly. "What is it? Are you trailing me, or what?"

"Well, you were there, you know."

"Did Mrs. Desbrow"— Oakley choked on the words.

Langham shrugged his perfectly fitted shoulders. "No, indeed, old chap. She wouldn't listen to a word against you. But the house boy"—

Oakley laughed scornfully. "The house boy! Do you mean to say that you are holding the word of a Chinaman against mine, Langham?"

"He said he saw you," retorted the other shortly.

"Saw his grandmother!" was Oakley's cheerful reply. "You take my advice, Langham. If Mr. Desbrow got that emerald from one of the temples in south China it stands to reason that the worshipers will try to get it back.

"Those old things mean more to the native Chinese than they do to the decadent mandarins. They will fight for the emerald, and they will steal it again and again until it finally remains where it originally belonged—only they will leave a trail of blood in its wake."

"Very well," said the other sharply. "Go ahead and I will follow."

"Find out for me where the temple is located and the name of the mandarin. Tomorrow morning we start for Canton and from there we will travel cross country to the temple. Once there we can scout around and see if the emerald is there."

"Good. Let us go back."

* * * * * * *

The next morning they were on their way to Canton via Hongkong.

As the journey progressed there grew up between the two men a vague inexpressible feeling of distrust.

At last they came into the province of the mandarin who had sold the emerald eye to Mr. Desbrow and here received permission to inspect the temple.

"This man will direct you to the temple of the green idol," he said suavely, and the two young men made their adieus.

In the wake of the wooden faced servant they crossed the grass grown courtyard and entered the dark arch of the temple. Here their footsteps waked the sleeping echoes, and the guide grumbled because the lantern sputtered in sudden drafts of air.

"We will look at the Buddha first, for if the stone has been returned it should be resting in the left eye socket. Odd that they should make the eyes of such precious gems and then cover them with lids of bronze or gold." Frank Oakley made this remark as he walked close behind Desbrow, now his openly avowed enemy.

"I'll have to see it there to believe it," said the other man obstinately.

By standing beneath the massive face one could look up and see that one half closed eye contained a sparkling emerald, while the other one was quite empty.

"Well?" questioned Langham, with a nasty smile.

"Well," retorted Frank, suddenly drawing a revolver and pressing it against the other's breast. "I'll give you just five minutes to restore the emerald eye to the idol," he said grimly.

"Me! What do you mean?" shouted Langham.

"What I say. I may as well tell you that I know where it is, and I congratulate you on having distracted attention from yourself."

"Where is it?" demanded Langham.

"Up with your hands!" ordered Frank sharply. And when the other's hands were out of the way Oakley's fingers passed deftly over the other's form. There were a bundle of letters and a cigarette case. A gold match safe disgorged the missing jewel, and Langham did not smile when Frank drew it from its hiding place and slipped it in his own pocket, for he had determined to restore it to Mrs. Desbrow.

They separated that afternoon, Frank Oakley traveling on ahead to claim his reward and Langham to make other plans for the uncertain future.

Frank Oakley took the emerald eye back to its rightful owner, and when she mentioned a reward he talked again about love and marriage until he persuaded her to name the wedding day.

"The emerald eye is our talisman of luck," he said to her on their wedding night.

"It was the means of poor Langham's temptation and fall," murmured the lovely bride. "It is like all talismans the good or evil in the wearer have to do with its influence."

TO THE VOTERS OF TECUMSEH TOWNSHIP.

There appears to be an erroneous impression in reference to the question of franchise asked for by The Tecumseh Electric Co., many of our citizens thinking it is for the Village of Tecumseh when, as a matter of fact it is for the Township of Tecumseh making it possible for the farmers to use electric current.

Also some Tecumseh people fear the Electric Company have not the equipment to take care of business outside of the village. To correct this idea the Tecumseh Electric Co. wishe to inform its users that they have power enough to supply every town and village in the county outside of Adrian.

TRIPLE FATALITY

John Welsh who resides on a farm near Tecumseh returned Monday afternoon from Waterville, Ohio where he had been attending the funeral of William and Ella Temple and Gertrude Temple sister of William Temple.

All three were killed by a fast Wabash train a mile west of Maumee, O. They were driving to town Wednesday evening August 27th and did not see the train until to late. They were thrown some distance from the track and death came instantly. The horse they were driving was also killed.

It is claimed that there was no head light on the engine nor did they give the warning whistle as they approached the crossing.

It is estimated that over 600 neighbors and friends attended the funeral for the three at the M. E. church which was held at Waterville, Ohio Sunday where the caskets were placed side by side.

The cigar factories, barber shops and the American Steel and Wire Co.' plant were closed yesterday so the employes could enjoy Labor Day.

Walter Ager and Jimmy Jackson arrived Sunday night from Rochester N. Y. to visit the former's relatives. They were met in Detroit by Charles Hanna and Glen Kemp.

Dwight Clarkson spent Sunday and Monday with his parents, Mr and Mrs. Frank Clarkson. His wife has been here for a week helping to care for his father who is very low.

Mr and Mrs. Ernest Pangburn entertained a party of relatives at dinner on Sunday to honor her brother and wife, Mr and Mrs. Roy Van Winkle who left last night for their new home in Hannibal, Missouri. In the evening Mr and Mrs. Pangburn also entertained at supper, covers being laid for Mr, and Mrs. Lester Coller Mr. and Mrs. Ed Lowry and Mr, and Mrs. VanWinkle.

Miss Stelzer left this morning for a vacation visit at Adrian, later going on to Cleveland. Mrs. Minnie Goethe of Ann Arbor is taking her place as night operator on the telephone exchange.

On account of the prayer meeting room of the Presbyterian church having recently been redecorated, rededicatory service willl be conducted in the prayer meeting Wednesday evening.

Roy J. VanWinkle left this morning for Hannibal Missouri where he has a position in the High School teaching Science and assisting in the Commercial Department. His wife will join him later.

When John Pyle went to his barn Monday morning to feed his milk wagon team, he found the roan mare gone, bridle, rope and all. Reports come to the officers of a man seen riding north on such an animal at 2 o'clock Monday morning, but no certain trace of the animal has been received as yet.

The reunion of the Patterson family was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Lowery in Bridgewater Saturday. There were 68 present and a roast pork dinner was served. Members of the family were there from Toledo, Belle Center, Ohio, Britton, Macon and Tecumseh. Those from here attending were Samuel Stewart and family, Mr. and Mrs. Willis Schreder, Leon Schreder and family.

Messrs. and Mesdames Herbert Waring, Ira Rogers, Joseph Smith and Wade Jones were in Onsted yesterday attending the birthday party given for their mother, Mrs. Susan Rogers, to honor her 80th birthday. They were a little slow getting home as the engine on the 8 o'clock train broke down and the train did not arrive until after 2 o'clock this morning but they had a happy time never the less.

ST. PETERS CHURCH TO PRESENT "CINDERELLA"

Rehearsals are Progressing Under Direction of Miss Ruth L. Weissert with a Competent Cast.

The beautiful and tuneful opera of "Cinderella" will be given at Bradley opera house, Thursday evening September 4th for the benefit of St. Peters church. The rehearsals for the opera are well under way and going finely and there is surely a great treat in store for the large audience that will hear the final rendering.

The pretty little story of Cinderella is carried out in the most attractive way. The children have always loved this story and for all the older people the attraction is no less strong. The lesson taught is a moral one and that is one reason why the old, old fairy tale has lived in our hearts through so many years. The music is lovely, it fairly bubbles with witching, catchy songs fanciful steps and pretty dances, while the costumes are bewilderingly pretty.

The cast of characters is as follows:
Cinderella—Miss Ruth L. Weissert.
Sir George Oliver, Cinderella's father—Levi Hayden.
Lady Oliver, Cinderella's stepmother—Miss Nellie Mingay.
Vesta and Mora, Lady Oliver's charming daughters—Miss Marion Rosacrans, Mrs. Eugene Rosacrans.
Prince Leo—Fred Dickinson.
Jasper Farrell—Ralph Smith.
Victor Kenyon—Ernest Church.
Bodkins—Don Heesen.
Fairy Godmother—Miss Louise Erskine.

Many copies of Mora's Violet Song will be given away and you will want one as everyone will be singing and and whistling it. There are 20 of as catchy and tuneful songs and choruses as you will ever hear and the chorus of fifty voices is very fine.

Tickets may be had from the ladies of St. Peter's church and will be exchanged for reserved seats without extra expense, at Hay's bakery. 35c and 50c admission.

FAIR AT TOLEDO

The Toledo Fair Association announce that the Fair this year will run the entire week, September 8 to 13 and are planning to make this Fair the greatest ever produced in Toledo or Northwestern Ohio.

Novelty and sensational areoplane flight, automobile races, speedy horses and numerous free attractions will be seen.

The purses for the speed program aggregate nearly $8000.00.

Of interest will be the greater exhibits of grain, stock, produce, modern machinery and motor vehicles.

Friday, September 12 is designated as "All Children's Day" at the Fair. All children accompanied by parents or guardian will be admitted free.

Wednesday September 10 will be Civil War Veterans' Day.

Saturday the last day will be the occasion of some of the most sensational automobile races ever seen in Toledo. Chief among the entries is Louis Disbrow with his 290 horse power car "Jay Eye See" claimed to be the most powerful racing automobile in the world.

All that is good of the old-fashioned fair is retained and all that is modern and up-to-the-minute will be presented.

The following is the speed program:

PRACTICAL BAKING LESSONS

BAKING POWDER BREADS

Baking Powder Breads have three things in their favor which are making them more and more popular. They are an agreeable change from yeast bread, they are quickly and easily made and are especially useful in emergencies, and they are often prescribed by physicians when yeast bread continues to ferment in the digestive tract. Baking Powder Breads may be made in almost endless variety. A few of the most popular recipes are given below.

Nevada Briggs

Nut Bread

2½ cups white flour ½ cup sugar
2½ level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder
½ teaspoonful salt 1 egg beaten light
¾ cup nuts (pecans or walnuts chopped rather fine) 1 cup milk

First sift together, three times, the flour, baking powder, sugar and salt, add nut meats. Beat the egg, add the milk and stir into the dry ingredients, mixing thoroughly to make a stiff drop batter. Grease a small bread pan, drop the batter into this, turn a pan of the same size over the top and bake one hour. The first half of the time have the oven very slow, then increase the heat. This bread is excellent when several days old.

This bread can be baked in any empty cans that have close-fitting lids. To bake in a can fill the greased can half full of the batter, put on the lid and shake batter to the side of the can, lay it on its side in the oven. Bake slowly the first half hour, turn the can to the other side and bake last half hour with a hotter oven.

Plain White Bread

4 cups sifted flour 1 teaspoonful salt
4 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder
2 tablespoonfuls sugar (if desired)
2 cups milk (or water)

Sift together, three times, the flour, baking powder, salt (and sugar if used), stir in the milk or water to make a dough. Use exactly same baking directions as for Nut Bread, baking in cans or a bread pan.

Colonial Loaf

2½ cups of flour 1 teaspoonful salt
½ cup chopped nuts 1 egg
1 cup milk ½ cup sugar
3 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder
¾ cup chopped raisins, currants or citron as desired.

Mix and bake as directed for Nut Bread.

Rye Bread

1 cup of white flour 2 cups of rye flour
3 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder
2 teaspoonfuls sugar 1 teaspoonful salt
2 tablespoonfuls of caraway seeds (if desired)
1½ cups of sweet milk

To mix, sift flour, baking powder, salt and sugar, three times, add caraway seeds and milk and mix and bake by rules for other breads. This is excellent for sandwiches.

Graham-Nut Bread

1½ cups white flour 1½ cups graham flour
2 teaspoonfuls sugar 1 teaspoonful salt
½ cup chopped nuts or raisins
4 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder
1½ cups sweet milk

To mix, sift white flour, baking powder, salt and sugar, three times, add the graham and nuts. Stir to stiff batter with the milk and bake as nut bread above. This is an excellent bread for those who cannot eat white bread or meats.

German Coffee Cake

2¼ cups sifted flour 1 egg
3 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder
1 level teaspoonful salt Milk
2 tablespoonfuls butter, melted
2 tablespoonfuls sugar

Sift dry ingredients together, beat the egg, add milk and butter to the egg to make one and one-quarter cups; stir all together with inverted spoon to a stiff batter. Turn into biscuit pan and spread even. Brush top lightly with melted butter. Sprinkle sugar and ground cinnamon over top. Bake in moderate oven.

Corn Bread

1 cup wheat flour 2 cups yellow corn meal
3 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder
1 egg, beaten light 2 tablespoonfuls sugar
½ teaspoonful salt 1¼ cups milk
2 tablespoonfuls melted butter or lard

Sift together, three times, the meal, the flour, baking powder, sugar and salt. In another dish combine the egg, milk and melted butter; stir in the meal and flour prepared as above, beating rapidly until the dough is smooth, after which let stand. Bake in moderate oven.

Helpful Hints on Bread Making

Have materials all at hand.

Sift three times, flour, salt and baking powder, mix thoroughly.

Bake slowly enough to allow the bread to rise before it crusts over, using a covered pan to keep the surface soft. Remember that baking powder breads do the greater part of the rising in the oven and that baked bread can not rise. Let it rise before baking.

K C Baking Powder is particularly adapted to bread baking on account of its long sustained action. It begins to rise as soon as moisture is added, and under the influence of a gentle heat, it continues to give off its leavening gas for fully half an hour. You cannot expect the same results from old fashioned quick-acting baking powders. With K C Baking Powder you are assured of a light, palatable loaf.

Never, never knead baking powder bread as one does yeast bread. Turn from the mixing bowl into the baking pan.

Follow mixing and baking directions carefully. Remember failures are not simply bad luck, but bad ways. There is a correct, scientific way for building baked foods the same as for building houses, and unless these rules are followed, results cannot be perfect.

Deering Corn Harvester.

Will do nearly as much work in a day as eight men.

Has both ball and roller bearings with self-aligning boxes.

The power is distributed direct, eliminating undue strain and lessening the draft.

Wheels are of the same height, which lessens side draft, neither wheel runs on the stubble, which is left clean and even.

Lightness of draft is secured as the corn is bound lying down like a grain binder, thus saving the power required in elevating as on other binders.

The only corn binder that will work equally as well in tall or short corn, as there is 21 inches of adjustment for the band, 8 inches in shifting the binder, 18 inches in adjusting the butt adjuster. Compare with other binders which have an 8 inch raise of a pan, which when raised the corn will clog.

The balance wheel allows the binder to run steady when cutting hill corn.

THE IMPERATOR FIRE

Largest Vessel Afloat Was in the Command of Capt. Ruser.

The Imperator, the largest vessel in the world, which was seriously damaged by a fire, in which two men were suffocated, is a new ship. It is 919 feet long and ninety-six feet at the beam. Commodore Hans Ruser, veteran captain in the employ of the Hamburg-American line, was in command of the vessel at the time of the fire. Fire boats from New York city and the Hoboken fire department responded promptly to the alarm and fought the flames for four hours before it was announced that the blaze was under control. It was expected to burn all day, however.

Doan's Kidney Pills go right at it;

Reach the cause; attack the pain.

Are recommended by many Tecumseh people.

A. C. Aylesworth, W. Chicago St. Tecumseh, Mich., says: "About four years ago I had an acute attack of lumbago and my kidneys were disordered. I at length heard of Doan's Kidney Pills and procuring a supply at C. A. Wright & Son's Drug Store, I began using them. In a short time I was relieved and I have had no return attack of the trouble. I hope other kidney sufferers will read my statement and be led to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial."

The [illegible] Old Jokes.

A popular humorist on his deathbed called his son to him and said:

"My son, I can't leave you any money, for my money I spent as fast as it came in. I can't leave you any fame, for fame cannot be shared. But there's an heirloom I can and will leave you—an heirloom handed down from my great-grandfather to my father and from him to me, and this heirloom, properly utilized, will keep you in affluence and honor, my son, even as it has kept me and my forbears these many generations."

So saying the humorist placed in the young man's hands a worm eaten and dog eared copy of "Joe Miller's Joke Book" and passed quietly away.

Sawdust as a Fire Extinguisher.

Every one knows how hard it is to extinguish a fire of certain inflammable liquids, such as varnish, lacquer and gasoline. People generally use sand, but some one lately discovered that sawdust is better. In several trials even a thin layer of sawdust proved to be sufficient, and it did not make any difference whether the sawdust was wet or dry or from hard wood or soft wood. To put out the same fire with sand took a larger quantity of material and a longer time.—Exchange.

"Buffalo Bill" Will Try to Start Another "Wild West."

© 1911, by American Press Association.

COL. CODY WANTS NEW SHOW

"Buffalo Bill" Is Planning for Another "Wild West" Venture.

Chicago, Sept. 1.—Colonel W. F. Cody came to Chicago with H. H. Tammen, proprietor of the Denver Post, who is trying to bring some semblance of order to Cody's financial troubles and start him in the show business again. His plans call for a new "Wild West" show to go on the road next year with Cody as its head. By that time it is expected the troubles which closed up the "Two Bills show" this year will have been adjusted.

PROGRAM AT STARVED ROCK

Dedication and Presnetation to State Set for Saturday.

Galesburg, Ill., Sept. 1.—Plans of the Illinois Daughters o fthe American Revolution for dedication and presentation services at Starved Rock were announced by Mrs. G. A. Lawrence, state regent. The ceremonies will take place next Saturday afternoon.

The presentation of the flagstaff, flags, and pennants to the state will be made by Mrs. Lawrence. They will be received by Governor Dunne's representative, Charles F. Clyne. Addresses will be made by Mrs. Adlai E. Stevenson and Mrs. Matthew T. Scott of Bloomington, Mrs. John C. Ames of Streator, Mrs. Frank B. Orr, LaVerne Noyes, and Mrs. Samuel W. Earle of Chicago.

The committee will be assisted by members of the Illini, Chicaog, and Peoria chapters.

Explorer Stefansson.

Another attempt to penetrate the mysteries of the ice framed north is now under way, Vilhjalmur Stefansson's expedition to explore the unknown arctic region bordering on the north pole and to define the limits of the new continent which Stefansson believes to exist there having sailed on June 17 from Victoria, B. C. The vessel is in command of Captain Robert Bartlett, who commanded Rear Admiral Peary's vessel, the Roosevelt, on Peary's journey to the north pole. With Captain Bartlett on the steam whaler Karluk, on which the expedition sailed, was Dr. Robert Anderson, codiscoverer with Stefansson of the blond Eskimos on Stefansson's last journey in the arctic.

VILHJALMUR STEFANSSON.

Explorer Stefansson, who will join the Karluk at Nome, Alaska, her first stopping place, is enthusiastic over the expedition and the outlook and says that, while every reasonable precaution will be taken to safeguard the lives of the party, it is realized both by the backers of the expedition and the members of it that even the lives of the party are secondary to the accomplishment of the work. The expedition expects to be absent in the arctic probably three years and in that time to make discoveries of importance to several sciences.

FOR THE WOMAN WHO THINKS AND FEELS.

Some women complain that they periodically suffer from dull and heavy feelings, or dizziness in the head, nervousness, pain and bearing-down feelings which should not occur to the normal healthy woman. But most every woman is subject to these pains at some time in her life, due to abnormal conditions in life, such as corsets, over-taxed strength, bad air, poor or improper food, wet feet, sluggish liver, etc. A regulator and female tonic made from native medicinal roots with pure glycerin, and without the use of alcohol, called

MRS. DONA M HARTIN, of Auburn, Nebr., Route 1, Box 84, says: "I thought I would write you in regard to what your medicines have done for me. I have used them for thirty years for female trouble and general weakness with the very best result, and they have saved me hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. I buy the 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery' and take them together. I never was disappointed in your remedies and take pleasure in recommending them to any suffering lady. I am now almost fifty years old; at forty-five I took your medicines, both kinds, and I passed that period very easily and left me fat and healthy. I feel like a young girl.

Kitchen Kinks.

Do not add salt to cabbage, cauliflower or Brussels sprouts, for it will darken them.

Carrots and beets should be cooked whole, then sliced.

To whiten scorched linen dampen with soapsuds and lay in the sun or boil in a gallon of milk into which has been placed a pound of shaved white soap.

A little lard added to starch will keep it from sticking.

Empty fruit into jars before placing in the refrigerator if you do not wish it to scent butter and milk.

Banana Pudding.

Lady fingers or stale cake, two large bananas sliced, half cupful seeded raisins, two eggs, two tablespoonfuls cornstarch, one and one-half pints of milk. Line deep baking dish with cake. Lay sliced bananas and raisins in bottom. Make custard of eggs (yolks only), milk and cornstarch. Pour hot custard over bananas. Make meringue of egg whites, spread on top of pudding and bake a few minutes until well flavored and brown.

Mexican Pinocha.

This delicious candy is made by cooking one and one-half cupfuls brown sugar, one-half cupful granulated sugar, three-fourths cupful milk or cream together until it reaches the point where it will form a soft waxy ball in cold water when tested. Remove from fire, add one cupful of nut meats, one teaspoonful vanilla and stir till creamy; then turn on greased dishes and when cool cut in squares.

Orange Rings.

Boil two cupfuls of granulated sugar and one-fourth cupful of water until it will form a ball in water. Remove and add the stiff white of an egg and a half cupful of orange pulp. Beat until creamy and turn on a greased board. Grease the rolling pin and roll the mixture out thin. Cut in rings with a small baking powder can lid and dip each ring in grated almond meats.—Woman's Home Companion.

At the Palace Inn

Where a Good Cook Scores a Success

By ALBERTA HARWOOD

Mrs. Bassett appeared in the doorway dressed in street costume. Her husband, smoking moodily in the glow of the evening lamp, looked at her inquiringly.

"I'm going now," she said coldly.

"Going where?" he asked blankly.

"I told you I was going away where—my—my cooking would be appreciated. You just laugh at me," quavered his wife as she buttoned her glove.

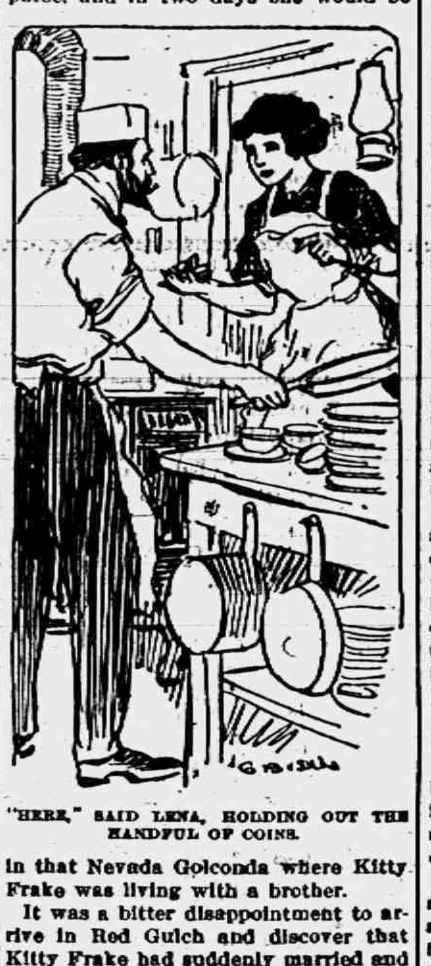
"Lena!"

"You did laugh, and you were sarcastic. You said you couldn't understand why a woman should take up the responsibilities of housekeeping without the slightest knowledge of how to cook. You said I c-couldn't boil water without burning it!" Without another glance at his stunned face she slipped out of the door and was soon walking down the three flights of stairs that led to the street door of the apartment house.

In the entrance she paused uncertainly and then, grasping her traveling bag more firmly, went to the corner and, hailing a car, rode to the railroad station. A half hour spent at the information bureau resulted in her boarding the 9:30 for the west, and soon Chicago was a city of fairy lights far behind. To Lena Bassett it was the city of disillusionment.

"I am so glad that I remembered Kitty Frake's address," she murmured to herself. "I can remember her letter word for word: 'If ever you are left alone come out to Red Gulch and help me run the Palace Inn. I am making piles of money. It's nothing like the old days in the department store.'"

The ticket to Red Gulch was in her purse, and in two days she would be in that Nevada Golconda where Kitty Frake was living with a brother.



"HERE," SAID LENA, HOLDING OUT THE HANDFUL OF COINS.

It was a bitter disappointment to arrive in Red Gulch and discover that Kitty Frake had suddenly married and gone to San Francisco to live. The Palace Inn was waiting for another incompetent to come forward and offer food and lodging to hungry men.

So Lena Bassett met with a warm reception after all. Bob Frake put her in the way of getting hold of the Palace Inn and found her a good Chinese cook and two waitresses.

"The rest is up to you," he said.

Lena Bassett squared her shoulders, called pride to her aid and sent east for a box of cookbooks.

• • • • • • • •

The train from the east sneaked out of Red Gulch leaving a long trail of smoke to settle in the sagebrush. The solitary passenger shouldered his rusty suit case and, avoiding the careening stage which flew past him empty, set his face toward the postoffice and hotel.

He was a tall, broad shouldered man with a pointed soft brown beard and mustache. His face was sunburned, and his hands showed signs of hard labor.

At the postoffice he stopped and spoke to Link Benson.

"Anybody name of Frake live in this town?" he asked anxiously.

"Nix. Bob Frake and his sister were here, but the gal got married and went away, and Bob he's struck it rich and gone to Frisco to spend it," replied Link curiously. "Any kin of theirs?"

"No. I thought they kept a hotel."

"Miss Frake did, but she sold out. That's it at the end of the row, the Palace. Widder Bassett's place."

"Bassett's?" The stranger pricked up his ears. "A widow, did you say?" he demanded eagerly.

"Guess so. Don't know whether it's grass or sod though. She's a mighty good cook just the same. Her biscuits are that light that you'd float to heaven on 'em, sure thing!" exclaimed Link, with enthusiasm.

"I guess she's not the one I'm looking for," murmured the stranger in a disappointed tone.

"If you're looking for a widder woman, why, there's the Widder Callahan over to Cottonwood," suggested Link jocosely.

"No, thanks; merely looking for the Frakes. I thought they still lived here. You said the Palace Inn, didn't you?"

"Yep; at the end of the street."

"Thanks." The stranger went on down the straggling street to the red painted door of the Palace Inn. It was a pretentious title for such a warped and shabby old wooden structure, but the veranda was filled with comfortable chairs and scattered potted plants, and the window curtains were snowy white. There was the odor of baking cake from the kitchen in the rear.

The stranger went into the cubbyhole of an office and, finding it empty, walked through the long dining room to the hot kitchen. He stood there for five minutes watching Mrs. Bassett as she flew from one task to another, plump, rosy and pretty, but with a strained look in her dark eyes. She was directing the movements of a stupid looking German waiter and scolding a panic stricken Chinese.

"Now, Carl, see that the table is properly set before you ring the bell. understand! Yesterday you forgot to put a bit of silverware out, and you lost a half hour running in and out after forks and spoons. Wah Lee, I will show you what to do in a moment. No, you can't do the cooking! If Sam Lee had not left me in such a hurry! Oh, dear, I would give anything for a cook that could broil a steak and"—

"He's here, ma'am," said the stranger calmly.

Mrs. Bassett whirled around and stared at the newcomer. Her rosy cheeks grew pale and then red, and her eyes were first flaming yellow and then dark brown. Her hands shook as she placed a newly baked pie on the kitchen table.

"You? What do you want?" she asked bluntly.

"A job. I can cook," said the other.

Lena Bassett hesitated. "Very well," she said suddenly. "My Chinaman left yesterday and there isn't a soul here can do a bit of cooking except myself. Wah Lee, take Mr.—what did you say your name was?" she asked.

"I didn't say, but it's Dick," said the stranger as he gave his suit case to the little Chinese.

"Well, Dick, suppose you get into one of Carl's white coats and aprons and make yourself a paper cap, and get to work. This is the day we have beefsteak and it's got to be cooked right."

"I can do it," said the other grimly, and he set to work.

Three hours later Lena Bassett sat on the kitchen doorstep talking to the waiter, Carl.

"Then they liked the new cooking?" she asked curiously.

The German nodded his blond head.

"Yah. All say vot is dis we eat—Broadway stuff?"

"Where is—he?" asked Mrs. Bassett diffidently.

"He has went to bed—dog tired."

Mrs. Bassett went into the parlor and sat by the open window. Her pretty face was a study in emotions.

At supper time the boarders took up a two bit collection for the new cook as a mark of gratitude for a wonderful Dutch apple cake he had concocted.

"Here," said Lena, holding out the handful of coins.

The new cook hesitated, reddened and then took the coins and put them in his pocket. "I'll give them to my wife," he said gravely.

"You are married?" asked Lena quickly.

"Yes."

Mrs. Bassett smiled oddly and went to eat her supper alone in the empty dining room. When the new cook brought his own tray of food and retired to a distant corner to eat it she gave no sign that she noticed his intrusion. Carl, who ate in the kitchen, peered fearfully at the bold cook though a crack in the pantry door.

"He vill get himself fired," he murmured regretfully, "und he can such eggs cook!"

A week passed by uneventfully. The recreant Sam Lee did not return, and the boarders at the Palace Inn to a man declared that they would leave in a body if Mrs. Bassett did not keep the new cook.

The fame of the Palace Inn's table spread throughout the county, and the dollars rattled into the office drawer with astonishing rapidity. The red haired cashier was warm in her praise of the new cook, and she paid him little attentions that brought down upon her frivolous head the wrath of Mrs. Bassett.

"He's a married man," admonished Lena Bassett coldly.

"It can't matter to you so long as he isn't married to you," said the cashier saucily, and she was disconcerted at the effect of this remark upon her employer.

Mrs. Bassett reddened, then paled, and without another word marched away to the kitchen, where she flung herself upon the shoulder of the startled cook and burst into tears.

"Dick," she wailed, "if you don't speak to me I shall go crazy!"

"My own dear!" cried Dick, dropping a spider of fried potatoes to fold her in his arms.

At that moment the cashier poked her ruddy head into the room in search of her employer. She found her in the embrace of the new cook. At the sight she scuttered back to her desk.

"Heavens," she muttered emotionally; "the meanness of her! Afraid I'd flirt with him because he was married! And look at herself!"

But of course she didn't know that Dick Bassett and his wife had a perfect right to the happiness they had acquired by way of Chicago, Red Gulch and the cookery books.

SEPTEMBER MORN

Burnadette Barrett, Aged Three, Prize Winner at Baby Pageant.

More than 100,000 persons turned out to witness the pageant of babies held at Asbury Park, N. J. No less than 648 babies lined up to pass in review of their admiring mothers, fathers, friends, brothers, sisters and cousins. Miss Hazel Reumane of Brooklyn was queen of the pageant. Burnadette Barrett, age three, daughter of William H. Barrett of Arlington, attired as September Morn, won first prize for having the most attractive float.

CRIMES AND CASUALTIES.

SHELDON, ILL. — Two persons were killed and another was probably fatally injured in a grade crossing accident three miles southeast of this city. An automobile containing five passengers was struck by a fast running Big Four passenger train. The dead are Mrs. Jacob Rediger of Chenoa, Ill.; Elnora McMullin, adopted daughter of Mrs. Rediger.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—Many thousands of spectators attending the Erie county fair at Hamburg saw Albert Gersner, twenty-three years old, of Gloucester, N. J., a balloonist, lose his grip on the trapeze of his parachute and plunge 200 feet to his death.

MASON CITY, IOWA — When a peanut lodged in the throat of Mildred Larsen of St. Ansgar she was seized by a paroxysm of coughing which sent it into her lung. She was rushed to a hospital here. She died a short time later.

MONROE, MICH.—George W. Kutitch, forty-five years old, an Australian section hand, was struck by a south-bound Pere Marquette freight train at Steiner, six miles northwest of here, and killed.

ELY, NEV.—At least one man was drowned and many thrilling escapes occurred when a wall of water from a cloudburst swept through Ely. The town is without lights, water or telephone service.

THAW LOSES IN COURT

Judge Says Habeas Corpus Proceedings Must Go On.

SHERBROOKE, QUEBEC.—Over violent objections from Thaw's counsel, Judge Matthew Hutchinson of the superior court ordered that the habeas corpus proceedings brought by John Boudreau, chief of police of Coaticook, in the interests of New York, should proceed.

Aime Geoffrion, who represented the prime minister, and attorney general, had intervened and that "this matter announced that the attorney general must be decided at once."

"If he is not liberated on the writ," Mr. Geoffrion said, "other means will be taken. Thaw must not be harbored in a Canadian jail."

Thaw's face fell, and his lawyers, declaring that the writ was irregular, spoke in turn, pleading for adjournment until Friday.

"We must go on," said the court.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

PEARL BEACH—After being dumped from a flat bottom boat in which they were fishing, Charles Kleinsmith, thirty years old, his sister, Sarah Kleinsmith, thirty-three and their nephew, Lawrence Cohen, seventeen, all of Detroit, drowned in fifty-feet of water. The Kleinsmiths were occupying the "Oneita" cottage, owned by Lieutenant Benjamin High, of Detroit, for the last month. Two weeks ago their nephew came to visit them. The three started fishing at noon in an old flat-bottomed scow that was leaky and unsafe. When they reached the bank, a choppy sea was encountered and the boat soon filled with water. Their cries were heard by William Blessing, 1275 Harper avenue, who was passing in his motor boat. He hurried to their rescue and threw life preservers to them but they were too excited to grasp them and sank. The bodies have not yet been recovered but the Algonac harbormaster is dragging for them.

LANSING—Ray Cather, a resident of Louisville, Ky., wants the state of Michigan to redeem a "wildcat" note for $5, issued by a Ypsilanti bank in 1837, at its face value with compound interest at six per cent for a period of seventy-six years. This modest request was received by Governor Ferris in a letter from Cather. Secretary Nisbett offers to exchange a number of confederate bills for the $5 note. Compounded annually for seventy-six years the interest on the $5 note amounts to $419, according to calculations. If the state should purchase the "wildcat" note Cather would be entitled to $424, but it is not thought the board of auditors will indulge in any extravagance in that direction.

OWOSSO—"Here, Reed, is a good chance for a wife," was the comment made by John Luckhurst, a farmer near Owosso, to Chester Reed, his efficient hired man, as he read to the latter a matrimonial advertisement form a weekly newspaper. Reed laughed, but showed little interest. Luckhurst was unsuspicious when his hired man asked for a few days off a little later. Reed returned the last of the week and passing the cigars announced he had married the woman of the ad, Mrs. Carrie Green, a Pontiac widow with four children. Reed will go to Pontiac to live with his bride, and Luckhurst will lose a good farm hand and farm hands are hard to get in this vicinity.

MUSKEGON — Placing in an entirely new light the recent Duck Lake shooting affair, in which Mrs Charles Roselle of Chicago, a resorter there, was shot by George Seibert, a Fruitland township farmer, three property owners in the township have reported to Prosecuting Attorney Galpin that they have made investigations and are convinced that Seibert, standing where he himself claims he did when the shot was fired, must have seen Mrs. Roselle. Each of the three parties was unaware of the other's investigation. Seibert reported that he took Mrs. Roselle for a hawk.

HILLSDALE — A distressing auto accident fatal to the six-months-old daughter of Mrs. Horace Sayles, wife of a Reading minister, happened when an automobile in which C. H. Burlingame was taking Mrs. Sayles and her four children from Reading to Pittsford turned turtle over an embankment. Mrs. Sayles and her baby were pinned beneath the machine. The baby's skull was fractured and death was instantaneous. Mrs. Sayles suffered a dislocated elbow, and Burlingame, who had jumped, a sprained back.

JACKSON—Three Jackson policemen had a very narrow escape from death when the automobile patrol smashed into a standing freight train at the Mechanic street crossing. Patrolman Frank Timmons suffered a wrenched leg, and Patrolman Ray Neideman and Driver Leon Emens were cut and bruised. [illegible] Driver Emens turned the machine and went into the train from an angle is believed to have saved the men's lives.

SAGINAW — Between 175 and 200 members of the Michigan Horseshoers' association were present when the twentieth annual convention opened. J. C. Buckley, the editor of the Horseshoers' Journal, offered information to show that within the last ten years the number of horses had increased 100 per cent, and although the motor had crowded the animals for a time, they had come back to their own.

TROOPS ARE CALLED TO QUELL RIOTINGS

Women Take Leading Part in Attacking Workers.

CALUMET, MICH.—Company F of Saginaw, Mich., stationed at the Wolverine mine, was called out to protect a party of deputies at No. 3 shaft, by a large number of copper mine strikers and women. The women were particularly active, spitting in the faces of the deputies and otherwise defying them.

The soldiers also rescued an Allouez mine fireman, who was attacked by strikers while on his way to work. The strikers took him from a street car and were beating him when the militia arrived.

Strikers and women sympathizers at the Champion mine resumed their attacks on nonunion men, striking them with brooms dipped in filth and throwing missiles. One man was badly beaten and three women were arrested. Another big parade of strikers was held in Calumet.

GIRL SHOT IN STRIKE RIOT

Clash Between Deputies and Men May Result in Fatality.

CALUMET, MICH.—In a bloody armed clash between deputy sheriffs and strikers at the North Kearsarge mine a girl with the strikers, Margaret Fazakas, aged fifteen, was shot and probably fatally wounded.

The strikers attacked the deputies to drive them off the property of the mining company, using stones and clubs. A squad of militia from Wolverine restored order and returned to their post after which the deputies were again attacked.

The officers drew guns when driven hard, when the strikers also showed arms and shots followed. The Fazakas girl was shot through the throat. She is being taken care of in the military field hospital at Calumet, and it is stated there is chance for her to live.

SHORTAGE MAY BE $142.000

No Charge Has Yet Been Made Against Cashier Jossman.

PONTIAC, MICH.—That the real shortage of the E. Jossman State bank of Clarkston will amount to $142,800 was the word sent from officials in Lansing. No complaint has as yet been made against Jossman, but he is still at the county jail. Prosecutor Doty stated he believed he would not be told what charge to make until the investigation had gone a little further along.

Jossman is still holding levees at the jail. The turnkey estimated that 400 people called in one day to see the bank cashier. At times there was a waiting line and the overflow was taken care of in the jail office. Visits were limited to a few minutes each.

HASTINGS TO TEACH "FARM"

Schools Will Open Tuesday with Course in Agriculture.

HASTINGS, MICH. — The Hastings city schools will be opened Tuesday under the superintendency of W. E. Cinkling. A force of thirty teachers has been employed.

For the first time in the history of the schools a course of agriculture will be open for students. The introduction of this course was secured through the efforts of members of the Hastings grange, at the instance of Professor P. G. Holden, of Chicago, who conducted an alfalfa campaign in Barry county in June.

SPORTING AFFAIRS.

KENOSHA, WIS.—All the heavyweight matches will be barred from the arena of the new Kenosha Athletic club, which has made application for a state permit. John B. Keating, head of the club, has declared he will not put on a match between Carl Morris and another "white hope." The death of "Bull" Young in Los Angeles has caused such a decision. Keating says that he has been advised that heavyweight matches will be barred by a majority of the clubs in Wisconsin.

OSHKOSH, WIS.—Baseball Pitcher Cantwell, the Chicago high school baseball star, who set the Wisconsin-Illinois league afire with his brilliant playing early in the season on the Oshkosh team, has been paid off and probably will never pitch again. Cantwell sustained an injury to his pitching arm on July 4. Blood poisoning set in and a long rest has failed to bring back his former agility.

Three Killed in Iowa Wreck.

CEDAR RAPIDS, IOWA — Train 444, south bound on the Decorah division of the Rock Island railroad, was wrecked two miles from Maynard. The entire train rolled down an embankment. Three persons were killed and thirty-five injured. The dead are John Proctor, Kansas City, Mo.; I. Hepworth, Oelwein, Ia., and Mrs Cora Debow, Oelwein, Ia.

16 DIE IN WRECK

Collision of Two Sections of Bar Harbor Express.

TRAINS BOUND FOR NEW YORK

Both Sections Were Heavily Loaded with Returning Excursionists from Fashionable Resorts in Maine and the White Mountains—Second Section Hits First at Wallingford.

NEW HAVEN WRECKS.

Following are the more serious wrecks on the New Haven railway in 1911:

June 7—Five dead and seven injured.

July 12—Fourteen killed and forty-four injured.

Aug. 27—One killed and fifty injured.

Wrecks in 1912:

July 8—Eight killed and seventy injured.

Oct. 3—Seven killed and fifteen injured.

Wrecks in 1913:

June 12—Six killed and twenty injured.

Sept. 2.—Twelve or more killed and many injured.

WALLINGFORD, CONN. — The second section of the Bar Harbor express crashed into the first section just outside this town. Thirteen persons were killed in the wreck and three died later in the hospital.

The wreck occurred on the New Haven railroad. Both trains were bound for New York and were loaded with returning excursionists from fashionable resorts in Maine and the White mountains.

The first section, from the White mountains, was due in New York at 7:36 a. m., and the second at 7:52.

The List of Dead.

Among the dead are R. A. Hotchkiss, son of a New Haven broker; Albert Green, New York; William Altschul, Norfolk, Va.; Frank B. Rutter, vice president Scranton Bolt and Nut company, Scranton, Pa.; Harald Avery, New York; Robert Yahn, Philadelphia; H. F. Martin, Bryn Mawr, Pa.; Harry K Iami, Charles W. Place, broker, New York; three unidentified women; one unidentified man.

Many Wrecks on the Road.

The enormous number of wrecks on the New Haven road led recently to a government inquiry, the United States commerce commission finding that the system, under the management of former President Mellen, was so neglected as to become a menace to the traveling public.

The report, which was submitted after an investigation covering a period of more than one year, declared that the company had squandered its money on "outside" enterprises to the general neglect of its own lines. Owing to public pressure President Mellen was forced to resign.

LINDLEY M. GARRISON

Secretary of War Pays an Inspection Visit to Fort Sheridan.

CHICAGO — Secretary of War Lindley M. Garrison and his party of United States army officers arrived at 9 o'clock a. m. from St. Paul and inspected Fort Sheridan with the idea of enlarging it to a division post. The cabinet officer has been inspecting the army posts throughout the west and northwest and is now returning to Washington.

CHIEF CLEARED OF CHARGES

Truant Officer Vindicates Lansing's Police Head—Girls Lied.

LANSING, MICH.—After Governor W. N. Ferris had probed the authenticity of the affidavits filed against Chief of Police Henry Behrendt of Lansing last week, in which three young girls charged the chief with improper conduct while they were being questioned in his office, Truant Officer Palmer, who was present at one of the interviews, declared there was not one word of truth in the girls' affidavits.

Chief Behrendt demanded a complete and official investigation by the police and fire commission.

Rev. James S. Williamson, one of the committee who visited the executive office when the affidavits were filed last week, asserted his belief in the chief's innocence and declared that he was through with the whole thing.

The attorney general advised the governor that his investigation of the charges would have no official standing, but Behrendt's friends feel that although he has been vindicated his name should be cleared in an official manner. The police and fire commission will therefore conduct an official investigation.

VICTIM OF HIS OWN SPEED

Policeman's Car Skids As He Attempts to Overtake Another.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—Just in order to reach Herald square at a scheduled hour, A. M. Carter, [illegible] Scotten avenue, Detroit, drove the pathfinder car of the Detroit Motor Cycle endurance run down Cherry street at a terrific speed.

Policeman Frank Stegenga set on Carter's trail at once and while speeding in pursuit, his machine skidded throwing him to the pavement.

Carter stopped his machine and picked up Stegenga, who had been rendered unconscious, and took him to a hospital. He then went to police headquarters, was arrested and let out on bail.

Stegenga, although badly bruised, is not thought to be seriously injured

GENERAL NEWS.

LAPORTE, IND. — In an effort to stop the drink habit among the employes the Lake Shore Railroad company has employed several photographers to snap men while drinking. When a trainman is seen entering a saloon the camera man adroitly gets a "shot" of him in the act of taking a drink and follows him to other saloons. Forces of detectives using the cameras have been sent to Laport, South Bend and Elkhart. The road men are the employes the company are particularly after. They want to stamp out the drink habit from men who have charge of trains. In instances where photographs are taken the trainmen are called before the officials, and when they deny taking drinks in saloons, the photographs are given to them and they are asked if they recognize themselves in the act of drinking.

NEW YORK—William T. Evans, a well known merchant and art connoisseur, who is suing William Clausen, the art dealer, to recover $5,600 as the amount paid for two paintings sold to him, as genuine Homer Martins, but which Mr. Evans alleges are bogus, filed an application in the supreme court for the appointment of a commission to take the testimony of Ralph Martin of Ocean Park, Cal. the artist's son, and Cornelius P O'Brien, a Pinkerton detective of Chicago. Martin said he'd prove by Ralph Martin that he was with his father constantly from childhood, during his working hours, and that he never saw his father paint the pictures sold to Mr. Evans and is convinced that they are not his father's work.

ABERDEEN, SCOT.—While Premier Asquith and his daughter were playing golf at Lossiemouth, between Inverness and Aberdeen, they were attacked by two suffragettes. They first knocked the prime minister's hat off and banged his head with a book. They they clutched his coat and dragged him to an dfro. The premier tried to shake the women off and his daughter grappled with one of them but was not strong enough to hold her. The struggle continued for several seconds, the women clawing the premier and screaming the usual "Votes for Women" fustian.

NEW YORK — Labor day was observed with union leaders asserting that the day marked the passing of the 2,000,000 point in the membership of the American Federation of Labor, the largest number of union workers in the history of the country. One feature marred the day—the absence of Samuel Gompers, the aging president of the organization, who is at Atlantic City recovering from an illness that attacked him last winter. It is the first time in thirty-five years that the leader has not made a Labor day speech.

NEWPORT, R. I. — Maurice E. McLoughlin of San Francisco retained his title to the national lawn tennis championship by defeating R. Norris Williams, second, of Philadelphia, in the final round of the all comers tournament on the main turf court at the Casino, three sets out of four. The scores were 6-4; 5-7; 6-3; 6-1.

VINCENNES, IND. — Mrs. William Grigg and Miss Eva Muchmore, a stenographer, were fatally injured, and nine others severely injured, when a natural gas explosion wrecked the Grigg restaurant and three adjoining buildings at Lawrenceville, Ill., causing a loss of $15,000.

Saginaw Stores to Close.

SAGINAW, MICH.—Saginaw retail merchants adopted resolutions fixing the store hours from 8:30 to 5:30. This will take effect January 2, 1914. Stores will not open Saturday evenings. The hours on Saturday then will be from 8 to 6.

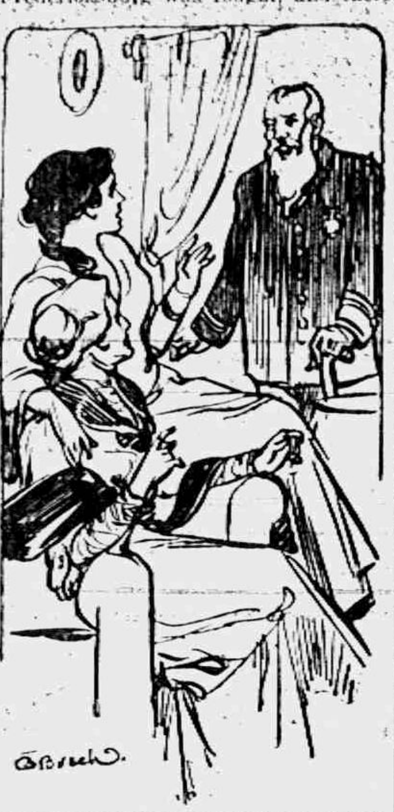
A Birthday Story

The Scene Is Laid In the War Between the States

By Captain F. A. MITCHEL

"Grandma," said Alice, "this is my birthday. I am, as you know, sixteen today. Mamma says that you were just sixteen the day the battle of something or other—I don't remember what—was fought. I wish you would tell me something about the great war, something that you were interested in, for my birthday."

"You'll have to ask grandpa to do that, for, while he was a soldier boy of 61, I never heard a shot fired. But I can tell you an incident with which I was remotely connected which may interest you. It is true that I was sixteen years old the day the battle of Fredericksburg was fought, and there are reasons why the name of the battle should be more deeply impressed on my memory than on yours.



"THERE HE IS," SAID THE STORY TELLER.

"Of course we of the north devoured the accounts of the battles of the war, and I, in reading an account of Fredericksburg, was interested in a soldier in the ranks of one of the Union regiments who, when all the officers were killed off, took command and led the remnant of the men clear up to the southern line. There he fell and was carried away by his comrades. We were much more apt to be impressed by a single act of heroism like this than by a great victory of a whole army, and I thought a great deal about this soldier who had stepped out from the ranks to lead a handful of his comrades, who had been spared from the awful shower of bullets and shells and cannon balls which had a clean sweep over that unbroken incline from the river to the ridge. I pictured him tall and slender, with a resolute face, coal black eyes and wavy black hair. I suppose I pictured him dark because we usually associate strength and will power with dark complexioned persons and mildness with blonds.

"Two or three months after the battle of Fredericksburg I was visiting some friends in Pennsylvania. I was told that there were several soldiers on the place who had been wounded in the battle, on leave of absence, recovering from their wounds. I was anxious to see one of them, just as any one is interested in seeing a curiosity. One of them was a colonel, and I think the others were soldiers in the ranks.

"One day I went to return a call a lady had made on me as a stranger, for those were the days of hospitality, and on being shown into a room a man, or rather, a boy, for he didn't look to be more than seventeen or eighteen years old, was reading a book. He didn't rise as I entered, though he made something of an effort to do so, but he greeted me with a pleasant smile, and since the hostess was quite awhile coming down we fell to talking.

"'I fancy,' I said, 'that you are an invalid.'

"'I'm not exactly an invalid; I'm a convalescent,' he said. 'But I think a couple of weeks more will let me up.'

"'This is not a good season for one to be sick,' was my next remark. 'Last spring about this time I was obliged to be away from school two months on account of illness, and it threw me back in my classes. Are you in school?'

"'Well, no; I haven't been to school for more than a year. You see, these times are so exciting that boys can't very well be kept at school. Some of them go for the nearest recruiting station, pass for more than the required age, eighteen, and enlist. But I didn't have any trouble on that score. I was nineteen.'

"'You don't mean that you are a soldier?'

"'Yes,' he replied, smiling at my surprise. 'I'm older than I look. I'm twenty.'

"'Oh, you're one of those I have heard of who were wounded in the battle of Fredericksburg?'

"'Well, yes. I was in that fight.'

"'My goodness gracious! You don't mean that the army is composed of such'—

"I stopped short, realizing that what I was saying was by no means complimentary.

"'Such measly material as I?' No. I admit that I'm not a fair specimen. I scraped through as to height when I enlisted, measuring barely five feet four. I weighed 110 pounds, though,' he added proudly, 'though I don't believe I'd pull up a hundred now.'

"'You mean ninety.'

"I thought what a shame it was to send such a stripling out to be shot down like a dog, and that, too, by human beings. The sight of him gave me a repugnance to war I've never recovered from, and I am happy to say that every year war is rendered more difficult among civilized nations and consequently is less likely to occur.

"'Were you very badly wounded?' I asked.

"'Badly enough to be laid up three months thus far. The surgeon says that I've got another month of it, but I'm not going to stand it. I'm going back next week.'

"'Not going to stand it! I should think you wouldn't stand to go back at all.'

"'I wish you would tell me,' I said later, 'how you felt when you were marching up against those Confederates and the hailstorm of bullets.'

"'At first I felt kind o' sick at my stomach. That's the way a good many of us felt, I reckon, if we tell the truth. When I saw men shot down about me it made me mad. The rest of the time I was mad; that's about all of it. Soldiers become like dogs or any other brute when they are in fighting trim.'

"'That's an ignoble view to take of it.'

"'It's the true view all the same.'

"It occurred to me to ask him if he knew the young soldier I had read about who had taken command of what was left of his regiment and was leading the men forward when he was shot down. He said there was nothing in that, for when the officers were all killed somebody must take command and it was likely to be the maddest man left. There were many such cases.

"'Why weren't they reported?' I asked. 'I read only of this one.'

"'Oh, reports of battles are manufactured,' he replied. 'It's dog eat dog in a fight, and that's all there is about it.'

"At this point the lady on whom I called came down to receive me.

"'Permit me to introduce my nephew, Colonel Stevens,' she said.

"I looked about for Colonel Stevens, but saw no such person. My eyes finally rested on the stripling I had been talking to, and I noticed an amused look on his face. What did it mean? That boy a colonel? It could not be possible.

"'Charlie doesn't look much like a colonel in his present condition,' said the hostess, 'but I fancy he looked more military when at Fredericksburg he took command of some seventy or eighty men, all that were left of 600 who were struggling on up that slope in face of a murderous fire.'

"They say that a drowning person sees his whole life pictured before him. Every word I had spoken to the man came up to appall me, though it is a wonder that I ever got beyond mistaking him for a schoolboy. I sank into a chair in collapse. My hostess, seeing my confusion, looked amused, but the subject of my mistakes, now that the truth was coming out, began to look annoyed. Finally when I had regained my tongue I asked:

"'Are you the man I read about who'—

"He made no reply, but his aunt replied for him. 'Yes,' she said, 'he is the Stevens whose conspicuous act of bravery was reported at the time.'

"'While the others didn't happen to get into the newspapers,' put in the hero.

"'The regiment is being reorganized,' added the aunt, 'and Charlie is to be its commander. He has already been promoted to be colonel for gallant and meritorius services at the battle of Fredericksburg.'

"There are persons who love to hear their praise sounded if not merited, but a few are annoyed even at listening to words of encomium that are richly deserved. Charlie resumed his reading, which had been interrupted by my entrance. To him it had been perfectly natural when he saw the men deprived of their leaders to spring to the front and shout, 'Come on!' He could see nothing remarkable in this and could not be convinced that it was remarkable or that he should be heralded in the newspapers and promoted above his fellows, any one of whom if given a little time had been as likely as himself to do what he did. This, at any rate, was his view of the matter, and I have never been able to change his opinion."

"Why, grandma, who was this man?" asked the girl who had listened to the story.

"Oh," exclaimed the old lady, "I forgot!"

"Forgot what?"

At the moment a diminutive old gentleman with snow white hair entered the room.

"There he is!" said the story teller.

"Well, what is it?" asked the old man, discovering that he was an object of interest.

"This is Alice's sixteenth birthday," said the old lady, "and she remembered that I was sixteen the day the battle of Fredericksburg was fought. She called for a war story, and I told her one about you."

The old man frowned. "Don't tell that again," he said. "War was made for wild animals. It's unnecessary, and from now on the disputes formerly settled by murder will be tried in international courts at least, that's the proper place for them. I hope there'll be no more legitimate killing."

Dreamland.

All dreams are rapid. A tutor fell asleep as a scholar was reciting, dreamed a little playlet and awoke to hear the end of the boy's sentence, elapsed time not more than fifteen seconds. Touch, sight and hearing are prominent in dreams, but taste and smell exceptionally rare. Dreams can be made to order by outsiders, but not by the dreamer. Yell "Fire!" in the ear of a sound sleeper or allow a sudden draft of cold air to play on the back of his neck and he will dream to order, but he can't go to sleep with his mind made up to dream of any certain thing and then actually dream of it. In spite of this fact books are sold in Europe which tell what one must do in order to dream the lucky number in the lottery. Furthermore, there are no ethics in dreamland. One sees or commits himself the most atrocious crime with no feeling of pity or guilt.—Chicago Tribune.

Power of Suggestion.

What he calls an "effective suggestion test" is given by Professor Hugo Munsterberg in an article on "How Can We Know Ourselves" in the Youth's Companion. "Draw several pairs of circles," writes the psychologist, "and let your friend decide which circle in each pair is the larger. In some cases make one circle slightly larger than the other; usually, however, make the circles of each pair the same size. In each circle write a figure of two digits. Although the circles are alike, you will find that if in one you have written a small number, such as twenty-one, and in the other a larger number, such as seventy-nine, the boy or girl who is open to suggestion will tell you that the circle that contains the higher number is the larger. The size of the number suggests a wrong idea about the size of the circles."

American Literature.

American literature is on the whole idealistic, sweet, delicate, nicely finished. * * * The notable exceptions are our most stalwart men of genius, Thoreau, Whitman and Mark Twain.—John Albert Macy in "The Spirit of American Literature."

Value of Humor.

The man who becomes a humorist is the man who contrives to retain a certain childlike zest and freshness of mind side by side with a large and tender tolerance.—Cornhill Magazine.

CINDERELLA

The Opera Given Last Evening by

THE EPISCOPAL LADIES

Was a Splendid Success, Netting Them about $60.00.

It was a very pretty entertainment which the Episcopal ladies gave the public last evening in the opera, Cinderella. They were greeted with a splendid house which was very gratifying to them as they have worked hard for the success of the venture.

Everyone present enjoyed the show to the utmost. The little lady, Ruth F. Weissart, who performed the title role, certainly is an adept in her line of putting on such entertainments and had drilled the actors and choruses well. The different members of the cast took their parts beautifully so that no comparison can be made between them. We are certainly proud of our local musical talent.

Otto Carlinghouse was the pompous Sir George Oliver, the poor henpecked father of Cinderella. Miss Nellie Mingay is always good in this line and excelled herself as the Lady Oliver, Cinderella's stepmother. Mrs. Eugene Rosacrans and Miss Rosacrans as Lady Oliver's daughters and Ralph Smith and Ernest Church as their lovers, were very good, the song, "Little Bunch of Violets," by Mrs. Rosacrans and Ernest Church being highly appreciated by the audience as a copy of the song accompanied each ticket.

Don Heesen as Bobkins furnished much spice for the performance and Miss Louise Erskine was an excellent fairy godmother. No small part of the performance was the work of the chorus whose costumes were very pretty. Mrs. Ella Hodges was the accompanist and Mrs. R. N. Lowe business manager and much credit is due these two ladies for the success of the venture.

As the result of the special election held in the townships of Tecumseh, Ridgeway and Macon on Wednesday, the Tecumseh Electric Co. were granted a 30 year franchise for the erection of poles and stringing of wire through the townships. The vote stood 68 yes to 19 no in Tecumseh while the vote in the other two townships stood unanimously for the franchise. We understand that the work of placing the poles has already commenced, the new house of Samuel Boyce being the first one wired.

Reunion of Old Schoolmates.

Mrs. J. T. Vandercook entertained a party of friends at her home on the shores of Vandercook lake near Jackson yesterday. It was a reunion of eight of the former students of the Section district, north of Tecumseh, and their teacher, Mrs. R. B. Gillespie.

The day was happily passed in relating incidents of "Ye Olden Time," and seeing the sights at the lake. At noon Mrs. Vandercook took her party to the hotel where they enjoyed a fine chicken dinner. Afterward they visited the photographer. Before their departure for home Mrs Vandercook served her guests with fruit, ice cream and cake.

The guests were Miss Mary Cummings of Seattle, Wash., Mr. and Mrs. Will Waldron, Mrs. Gillespie and Wilfred Waldron of Tecumseh, Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Cummings, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Cummings, Mrs. Jennie Cluff, Charles Farley, Misses L. Bigelow and May Farley of Jackson.

AMERICAN ROAD CONGRESS AT DETROIT

The Third American Road Congress will be held in Detroit from September 29th to October 4th.

Michigan Day comes Friday October 3rd. This will be the day that the Michigan State Good Roads Association will hold its annual meeting. Michigan Day should be the great day of the Congress. Governor Ferris will issue a proclamation calling the people of Michigan to Detroit on that day and the reasons therefore are most apparent.

The program for the day will be a notable one. The address of Governor Ferris, Senator Townsend, Jesse Taylor of Ohio, Jude Lowe of Missouri, Frank Rodgers our state highway commissioner and others cannot fail to be of great interest and benefit to the state.

FOREWORD

Lansing, Michigan,
April 10, 1913.

To the Teachers of Michigan:

September 10, 1913, is the hundredth anniversary of Perry's victory on Lake Erie. It is especially fitting that the day be observed with appropriate exercises in Michigan schools. The event is one of transcendent importance in the history of our state. Such anniversaries present opportunities for civic service. Patriotic instruction rests largely with the school.

The celebration should not be isolated from the daily work of the school. The main emphasis should be, placed on an intelligent appreciation of the event and its significance. The instruction should be definite and and at the same time inspirational. A program should be prepared to be carried out September 10, 1913, but the school should be prepared by previously making the event the subject of school work.

The program should be to quite an extent a peace program. Events should be narrated, and poems and exercises of a patrotic nature, found in Michigan Special Days, will be suitable for recitations. An accont of the battle and war will be found in all United States histories.

Every teacher is urged to observe this anniversary.

Very truly yours,
L. L. WRIGHT,
Superintendent of Public Instruction.

Harry Gordon Selfridge

"THE QUALITIES THAT MAKE FOR SUCCESS"

The Herald is in receipt of a marked copy of The Statesman and Friend of India a newspaper published in Calcutta, India.

The paper is a Sunday edition and is a forty paged issue. We are probably indebted to Mr. Selfridge for the receipt of it. The wrapper bears the post mark Calcutta, India, and in bold type is printed Imperial Hotel.

The fact that the paper traveled half way around the globe to the Herald office is indeed interesting. The paper is similar to our Ameican papers as far as general news is concerned. It is brim full of advertising mostly foreign. We notice however a full page devoted to advertising the Studebaker automblie.

The first seven pages are devoted entirely to advertising and market reports then comes the general news. From the the space devoted to automobile advertising one is led to believe that automobiles are used in India.

Mr Selfridge lived for a number of years in Tecumseh and went to school here in fact some of our older readers remember him well and went to school with him.

From Tecumseh we are told he went to Jackson, Mich., where he was employed by the L. H. Field dry goods store. While here he attracted the attention of the manager of the great Marshall Field store of Chicago and was soon transplanted to that store. His marked ability soon won for him a place at the head of this great store where for many years the name of Selfridge was linked with others in the management of the store.

Finally one morning the City of London England awoke from its slumbers to learn that Selfridge had opened a great store in the heart of its business section.

What he did and is doing in London reads like a story the opposition and difficulties that he met and overcame were innumerable, how his competitors laughed and scoffed at his American ideas but to day the Selfridge store on Oxford street, London is what Wanamaker's is to New York and Philadelphia and Marshall Field's is to Chicago.

We are proud of the fact that Mr. Selfridge lived in Tecumseh and that from here he started out on his wonderful career.

Believing that this interview appearing in the Statesman will be of interest to our readers we publish it in full.

"It is certainly time," said Mr. Selfridge, "that commerce took its rightful place as a career for young Englishmen beside the professions and the arts, and that the best intellects of the country were encouraged to turn freely in any of the three directions, according to the individual bent. The qualities that make for success in all three are very much the same. In my opinion no great thing was ever done in commerce, as in art or in professional life, without imagination to inspire it, and judgment to keep a restraining hand upon imagination. The modern business man is only carrying on, under different conditions and to a higher point of evolution, the work and the traditions of the old merchant adventurers of the 14th century and of Elizabethan times. I am much interested in reading of those enterprising old merchants. They took their lives in their hands and went out into the wilderness, to widen the market for their customers. They had a high ideal of the value and usefulness of trade. Job Charnock returned again and again to the site of Calcutta, until he founded what is now the Second City in the British Empire. Now the modern business man comes along with a new and safer proposition. We do not have to risk life, as they did; but we, too, are pioneers none the less. The modern merchant is doing what has never been done before; every step that he takes is a step out into the new and unexplored. In place of the old-time ship, he has to use imagination for his voyage of discovery, and in place of the compass he requires a sound and reliable judgement."

THE SCIENCE OF MODERN BUSINESS.

"Take our own case," continued Mr. Selfridge. "The first object of our imaginative efforts here is to make this Store an exhibition of everything in the world that it is desirable to buy. That is a big contract by itself; but in addition, of course, we have to think of various subsidiary purposes. Mere multiplicity is nothing. We have to see that everything we sell is the best of its kind at the price, and that our methods of distributing our merchandize are the best possible methods. To that end we try to imagine ourselves in the place of a critical customer, so as to anticipate his every want. We desire so happily to impress each customer, that he shall become our customer for all time. We aim at making shopping a fine art and a pleasurable occupation. No business in the world is so great that it cannot be made greater—no method so perfect that it cannot be improved.

THE STAFF COUNCIL

"Every great newspaper has its daily council at which the managing editor consults with his assistant editors and other prominent members of the staff as to the policy of the paper on current topics, the order of precedence in the principal news items of the day, and the fresh fields of news to be exploited for future issues. In much the same way, each department of Selfridge's sends a delegate to a staff council, which discusses any imperfections that have been found in the existing methods of working the business and any suggestions for improving these methods. It at once supplies a valuable link between the management and their 3,000 employees and quickens the corporate life of the whole building. From the highest to the lowest, all the men and women are encouraged and expected to use their imagination in the daily routine of business. The buyer, in selecting his wares, may think of an article that he can get one shade better by going a long journey for it, and Selfridge's say 'go'! The seller, in making up her sales bill or shopping card, may think of an improvement which will help to check the sales and dissect the profits of the business with greater certainty. The very porter, in wrapping up his merchandise, may think of a better method of wrapping it. Hardly a day passes but some suggestion of this kind is brought to the notice of the management. The old idea in business was that the assistant was paid to do what he was told, and not to think. The new idea is that the rightly directed thinking pays; and the assistants are spurred to use their imagination by the definite knowlege, which all possess, that promotion is only by merit and from the ranks."

A SCHOOL FOR BUSINESS MEN.

The first step made by the junior when entering Selfridge's is to become a student, who is only paid 10s. a week as pocket-money: and the management steadfastly refuse to take any girl who does not either live with her parents, or can produce proof that in addition to this 10s., she has enough means to supply her with living wage. From amongst the boys who enter Selfridge's for the most part on leaving school, those who show special keenness and aptitude during their first two or three years of service, are selected as members of the Embryo Club, so called because it consists of possible managers in embryo. To these lads special instruction is given in management and organization. They are shown how a certain sum of money should be used to show a certain turnover and a certain profit per annum. They are taught that expenses should neither be too high nor to low; for parsimony strangles a business, and extravagance waterlogs it. They are taught that imagination sets the goal, and industry and perseverance form the stepping-stones towards it. In a word, they are being trained to become Division Managers; and these boys, as they become young men, are put into the more responsible posts in the house.

The Work Before the Federal Commission on Industrial Relations

Back and forth the pendulum swings. This summer it is the National Association of Manufacturers which has been charged by one of its former agents with fighting labor underhand—not in the open, but secretly, by hiring turncoats to betray the unions. Two years ago it was a national labor organization which was charged by one of its former agents with fighting capital underhand—not in the open, but stealthily, by hiring dynamiters to blow up buildings and bridges.

So the advantage tilts and swings from one side of the industrial cleavage to the other. If the average citizen was sure that the pendulum really was getting us further along in the day, bringing us to a better understanding for the world's work, he might be content to let it take its course, biding the time. But is it? Or are we wasting precious energies in industrial contention which might be turned to good account if men and managers were not so frequently and needlessly set at loggerheads. Not that their interests will ever be identical. We do not expect those of shipper and railroad to be identical—even under Government ownership; but we have found that it pays to put an end to rebates, discriminations and unreasonable rates. We consciously set about shearing away needless injustices and irritations so that common interests can be affirmed and developed, and so that conflicting interests can come to equilibrium with the least friction.

This, in essence, has been the motive back of the movement for the Industrial Relations Commission which has been appointed by President Wilson, and which is to enter upon a three years' plan of work at a probable outlay of half a million dollars.—From "The Government, the People, and the Labor Problem," by Paul U. Kellogg in the American Review of Reviews for September.

NEMESIS

The grim, muscular-looking man eyed his victim malevolently. "I have been looking forward for a long while to the time when I should have you in my power," he said relentlessly. "You probably thought yourself safe, because I kept away from you so long, did'nt you?" he went on sneeringly. "But all this while you were living in fancied security I have bided my time, knowing that sooner or later I should get you where I wanted you. And now that I have got you, you are going to die—do you hear me?"—his voice rose, harsh, raucous, incisive—"To die! And I purpose that others of your family shall die with you."

He paused and regarded his victim gloatingly. The latter spoke no word, nor showed signs of shrinking from the fate that threatened him, although one might have fancied that he cast an appealing glance at another man who stood not far away. But although the latter must have been cognizant of what was going on, he showed no disposition to interfere. Rather, he looked on with an amused, cynical expression.

"I shall waste no more time talking to you," resumed the first speaker vindictively. "I am too impatient to put an end to your miserable existence for good and all. I knew you wouldn't try to resist," he added contemptuously.

Then with a quick movement he brutally seized his helpless victim and stabbed him with such force that the sharp steel penetrated clean through the body. Then he ate him.

THE NEW SCHOOL AGAIN

The Herald has had a pleasant interview with Mr. Reed, our new superintendent of public schools. He states the new year starts in very favorably with an enrollment in the high school of 110, and in the grammar grades of 325, making a total of 435.

The Herald regrets that Mr. Reed has not a new high school building to start in with but hopes the voters of the district will rectify this by voting for one at the coming special election. It is our opinion that instead of 110 being enrolled as now in the high school, with a new building, we would easily have 200 enrolled.

Through the courtesy of Rev. Weld the Herald has two views of the new high school building at South Haven, now being erected at a cost of $50,000. It will be remembered that Prof. D. P. McAlpine last year superintendent of our schools, now has the same position in that city. We have placed the pictures in our front window and would be pleased for all who are interested to see them.

REMINGTON REUNION

A jolly party gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Pennington Tuesday Aug. 19, for a reunion of the Remington family. Of this large family of twelve only five are living Ransom and Will Remington of Moneta Col., Mrs. A. D. Hunt of Tipton, Mrs. T. Temple of Detroit and Mrs. Pennington at whose home the event occured.

The day was fine and a bountiful pot-luck dinner was served at noon. The afternoon was spent in pleasant conversation, games, picture taking and a wade in the creek. At the close of the day the guests dispersed to their homes feeling happier for this pleasant day and voting Mr. and Mrs. Pennington a jolly host and hostess.

Those attending were Mr. and Mrs. T. Temple and Miss Anna, of Detroit; Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Hunt, of Tipton; Clyde Knight and family and Peter Knight, Bridgewater; Fred Allen and family, Clinton; W. H. Pennington and family, Rives Junction; Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Temple, Dr. and Mrs. Conklin, Tecumseh; A. White and daughter, Adrian; Erwin Conklin and family, Ray Gilmore and family, Maurice Pennington and wife, Chester Gooding, wife and daughter, Miss Nellie Gooding and Mrs. Wilmot Collins, Macon; Mrs. Hovey Needham and children, of Saline.

An Everyday Cake

Here is a simple and inexpensive cake that can be varied in many ways with different frostings and icings. It looks a little nicer baked in a tube pan, but will be equally as good baked in a square loaf.

K C Gold Cake

By Mrs. Janet McKenzie Hill, Editor of the Boston Cooking School Magazine.

¼ cup butter; ½ cup sugar; yolks of 4 eggs, beaten light; 1 cup flour, less 2 level tablespoonfuls; 2 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder; ¼ cup milk; grated rind of 1 orange.

Sift flour and baking powder together three times; cream butter and sugar, beat yolks of eggs, add these to creamed mixture, and lastly add the moisture and flour alternately, beating batter until smooth. Gold Cake can only be made successfully by beating yolks of eggs, very, very creamy and light lemon colored, using a rotary beater. The rotary beater is the only beater that will do justice to the yolks of eggs. The beating kills all egg taste and improves the texture of the cake.

Cocoanut Frosting

Beat the whites of 2 eggs dry; gradually beat in half a cup of sifted confectioner's sugar and continue the beating until the frosting is smooth, thick and glossy; then beat in grated cocoanut, fresh or prepared, and spread upon the cake. This frosting is made thick by beating rather than by sugar.

Save this recipe. You will want to use it frequently. Or better, send us the colored certificate packed in each 25-cent can of K C Baking Powder and we will mail you "The Cook's Book" containing this and 89 other baking recipes equally good—all by Mrs. Hill. Jaques Mfg. Co., Chicago.

Deering Corn Harvester.

Will do nearly as much work in a day as eight men.

Has both ball and roller bearings with self-aligning boxes.

The power is distributed direct, eliminating undue strain and lessening the draft.

Wheels are of the same height, which lessens side draft, neither wheel runs on the stubble, which is left clean and even.

Lightness of draft is secured as the corn is bound lying down like a grain binder, thus saving the power required in elevating as on other binders.

The only corn binder that will work equally as well in tall or short corn, as there is 21 inches of adjustment for the band, 8 inches in shifting the binder, 18 inches in adjusting the butt adjuster. Compare with other binders which have an 8-inch raise of a pan, which when raised the corn will clog.

The balance wheel allows the binder to run steady when cutting hill corn.

Shall I Go to buy my New Fall Shoes?

J. J. Belcher is showing a nice, nifty line of

Fall Shoes

For Men, Women and Children.

We claim to have the best assortment we ever showed in Tecumseh, in Black, Brown, Button and Lace. The low heel was, and is, all right for out-door work, but when a woman wants a nice dress shoe she wouldn't take a pair of them as a gift. So we have had made some nice medium heels, not awfully high—just graceful and neat, in all leathers, black, brown and white. Pay the low price and take your choice.

In Men's we can show the young man his shoe for courting and for work; the middle-aged man one for dress and business; the old gentleman a shoe for comfort—soft inside, soft uppers, plain, no cap toe One for business too, a long-desired shoe.

When it comes to the little Gents' shoe, we have what they like, "just like Daddy's," in brown and black.

REMEMBER THREE THINGS:

1st—We fit babies without getting mad.
2nd—We mend shoes on short notice.
3rd—We keep the store open evenings.

FRANK P. CLARKSON

Passed Away Wednesday Afternoon.

A PROMINENT CITIZEN GONE.

It was with deep sorrow that the word was passed along the street Wednesday afternoon that Frank P. Clarkson had passed away, and yet we could not be sorry that his three years of suffering had ended. More than three years ago he was taken ill, an operation being found necessary.

All through the succeeding months of suffering he has been very patient and always greeted his friends with the same hearty handshake and genial smile with never a word of complaint. His many friends always found it a pleasure to drop in for a few moments chat, he cheering them with his happy disposition and never having a single gloomy thought to pass on. Through it all Mrs. Clarkson has been the faithful nurse, doing all in her power for the sick man's comfort.

Frank P. Clarkson was born March 9, 1853, being the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Clarkson He married Miss Nellie Clark of Ridgeway June 12, 1884, and they purchased a farm near his birthplace northeast of town where they resided until about ten years ago when they bought the handsome residence, corner of Union and Pottawatamie streets and moved into the village to procure better school advantages for their only son, John Dwight who is now married and lives in Detroit. Mr. Clarkson also leaves two brothers, Eugene of Detroit and Sidney of Ann Arbor beside many relatives.

The funeral was held this afternoon from the home, Rev. J. A. Despelder officiating.

FOR THE CHILDREN

A Secret.

What was it trying to sing or say,
That merry brooklet, skipping away?
What had it seen or what had it heard
From leaf or blossom, squirrel or bird
To set it off in a dance and song
As through the woods it hurried along?

How it fluttered and how it foamed;
How it rippled as on it roamed!
How it chattered and laughed and played
As miniature waterfalls it made!
How it glittered and how it shone
As through the foliage glanced the sun!
How it bubbled and how it whirled
As in and out it eddied and curled!
Oh, if 'twould only tell to me
All it can hear and all it can see!
What did it mean and what did it say
Out in the woods that summer day?

It would not tell me. It hurried on Till all the sunny hours were gone.
But coming out where the meadow grass
Caresses the crystal drops which pass,
Still and quiet, it lingered there—
It might be saying its evening prayer,
For just as the stars came out to peep
It hushed its murmurs and went to sleep.

The Question.

The children had been teasing grandfather with questions all the long, hot afternoon. He had been very patient, but he had not read his newspaper.

They had asked where clouds came from and where they were going; where the sunbeams were when it rained and why no one had ever counted the sand particles on the shore, but when they asked where yesterday had gone grandfather sighed.

"Don't bother him any more," Mary said.

Grandfather laughed. "Let me ask you a question," he said, "and if you can't answer it you must not ask me any more today."

The children agreed to this plan and grandfather asked, "How can you make eight out of thirteen?"

The children retired to a corner and were still for some time. At last Dorothy tiptoed back. "Can it be done on paper?" she asked.

"Yes," said grandfather, "and with one stroke of the pencil."

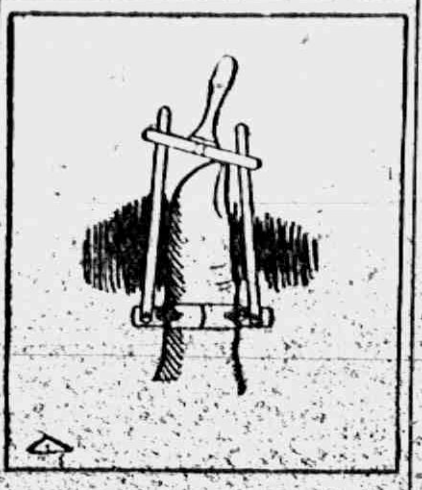
The children trotted away to the library, and no more was heard from them until tea time. Their faces showed that they had "given up."

After tea grandfather called them and drew the Roman numerals—thirteen. Then he drew a straight line through the center horizontally, cutting the X and each I at the center, making eight.

"Oh," said Ned, laughing, "grandpa knows everything—that's why we ask him so many questions."—Youth's Companion.

HELPFUL HINTS FOR HOUSEWIVES

Manicure File That Works Automatically.



A novel form of manicure file has been designed by a California man. A ring slips over the finger to about the middle of the second joint and holds the device in place. Pivoted to this ring are tiny supports which hold a file, and the file is adjustably mounted so that it is in continual contact with the nail. To reduce a nail with this device then the user merely moves the file from side to side by means of a little handle and an accurate semicircle is made. The work is thus done automatically without the trouble of shaping the nail as must be done when using the regulation flat file.

To Stiffen Croquette Mixtures.

If the croquette mixture is not firm enough to handle and to mold easily soak a tablespoonful of granulated gelatin in cold water and dissolve it in boiling water, using just as little water as possible. Stir this into the croquette mixture and set aside until the gelatin has had time to harden. The croquettes can then be made easily. The heat of the frying will melt the gelatin and the inside of the croquettes will be as soft and as creamy as ever. If the supply of grease is low don't risk ruining the croquetes by trying to fry them; put them into the oven to bake.

Remedy For Burns.

A mixture of castor oil with the white of egg has been recommended for burns. It allays the pain more quickly and causes the wound to heal more rapidly than any other application. The eggs are broken and emptied into a bowl, and the castor oil gradually and slowly poured in while the eggs are beaten. Enough oil is added to make a thick, creamy paste, which is applied to the burn with a feather. The applications are repeated often enough to prevent their becoming dry or sticky. It is best to abstain from any dressings, leaving the surface uncovered.

Baked Potatoes.

When cooking baked potatoes it is a good idea to nip the ends off and grease them before placing in the oven. When finished you can take them out, gently break apart without spoiling their appearance and serve at once.

So Comforting.

Those who fearlessly shoulder their burden generally find a loyal helper.

Buy Land, Young Man.

Ownership of real estate is a certificate of thrift. The young man who seeks a position of responsibility can furnish no better recommendation than the deed to well chosen city or farm property paid for out of his earnings. Debt due to spendthrift habits is a tremendous handicap to the young married couple beginning life. Many a matrimonial ship has been wrecked on just such a rock. But debt assumed to purchase real estate is different. Instead of causing discouragement, and impairing a man's ability to succeed in his life work, it is a powerful incentive to industry, and almost infallibly adds thrift and good habits to the character. The most solid foundation of financial independence is the possession of real property, because as population increases its value constantly grows. The young man who is about to marry can give his bride no more eloquent proof of affection than his own home. It is a fact that the couple who begin married life under their own roof seldom end it in the divorce court.—Chicago Journal.

What a Sparrow Did.

What is perhaps the most remarkable accident that ever occurred was reported from Germany. A large touring car was traveling at fair speed along a boulevard lined with trees. Large flocks of sparrows were in the trees, and several boys were taking chances of being arrested by the police by shooting at the birds with sling shots. One pebble, particularly well aimed, struck a sparrow on the upper wing and sent him gliding through the air directly toward the driver of the car; the bird struck him full in the face, and in the next instant things began to happen. The driver clutched at his eyes, the car lurched into the ditch, knocking down a telegraph post, vaulted to a plowed field on the other side of the ditch, and went full force into a huge haystack. Despite this wild swerve, no one was even scratched except the driver, whose eyesight was damaged by the claws of the sparrow. The whole incident had taken far less time than needed to relate it.—Leslie's.

Origin of Norfolk Jackets.

What is the origin of the Norfolk jacket, and why the straps or plaits and belt?

The name is derived from the county of Norfolk, on the southeast coast of England. The shores of the county are marshes intersected by tidal streams locally known as "the broads," an ideal spot for shooting wild fowl. The nature of the country is such that the shooter must carry his own game bag and ammunition, for loaders would be more bother than they are worth. Accordingly there developed a shooting jacket with conveniences for this employment, the belt for the carriage of the game bag and powder horn or cartouche box, the straps to distribute the weight more fairly upon the shoulders. Modern fashions of tailoring have retained these conveniences in a form of conventionalized ornament.—New York Sun.

NO ONE STRONGER THAN HIS STOMACH.

The celebrated Dr. Abernethy of London was firmly of the opinion that disorders of the stomach were the most prolific source of human ailments in general. A recent medical writer says: "every living being, emotion and affection reports at the stomach (through the system of nerves) and the stomach is affected accordingly. It is the vital center of the body * * * He continues, "so we may be said to live (through) the stomach." He goes on to show that the stomach is the vital center of the body. For weak stomachs and the consequent indigestion or dyspepsia, and the multitude of various diseases which result therefrom, no medicine can be better suited as a curative agent than

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

Mrs. Murken.

"Several months ago I suffered from a severe pain right under the breast-bone," writes Mrs. G. M. Murken, of Corona, Calif. "Had suffered from it, off and on, for several years. I also suffered from heart-burn, did not know what was the matter with me. I tried several medicines but they did me no good. Finally, I was told it was my liver. I did not dare to eat as it made me worse. Whenever I swallowed anything it seemed that I would faint—it hurt so. I grew very thin and weak from not eating. Was told to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I took five bottles of it, and could feel myself getting better from the first dose. I could eat a little without pain and grew strong fast. To-day I am strong and well and can do a big day's work with ease. Can eat anything and have put on flesh wonderfully. I will send my friends to write to Dr. Pierce. He has my undying gratitude."

Mystery of a Missing Will.

In July, 1910, Frederick Holden Turner, a well known London solicitor, had a stroke of paralysis which left him quite helpless, yet with his mind perfectly clear. Soon after his seizure he told his nurse to fetch a drawer from his writing table. He made her take out a particular paper and put this into an envelope and seal it. He then said, "Write on the outside, 'My last will.'" This she did also.

The envelope was put back and the drawer locked.

After Mr. Turner's death his nephew went with the nurse to the drawer, only to find that the will was missing from the still sealed envelope.

The envelope itself was shown in court, but the mystery of the disappearance of its contents could not be solved.—Pearson's Weekly.

No Room For Cream.

"My dear," said the young husband, "did you speak to the milkman about there being no cream on the milk?"

"Yes, I told him about it this morning, and he has explained it satisfactorily. I think it is quite a credit to him too."

The Lucky Seventh

It Ended His Career as a Business Man

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Mr. Channing looked in despair at the row of girls sitting in the outer office. Already he had interviewed nine applicants for the vacant position, and not one had proved to be available. Still they kept coming in, and he knew that most of them carried a neat little clipping from the morning newspaper want columns. He had written the advertisement himself in a fit of enthusiastic devotion to duty. Now he wished that he had left it, as usual, to Dickerman, his chief clerk.

He went back to his desk and sat down.

Channing suddenly slapped his hand on the table.

"I have it," he chuckled to himself. "I will count the seventh girl from the door—seven is a lucky number—and I'll hire her," decided Channing gleefully, and he again approached the door of the outer office, handsome, dignified and irreproachable in his light gray clothes that matched his prematurely gray hair.

He counted seven from the door, and his eyes rested on a pale, shadowy face under a drooping black hat.

"I will talk with you, if you please," he said, holding wide the door of his private office.

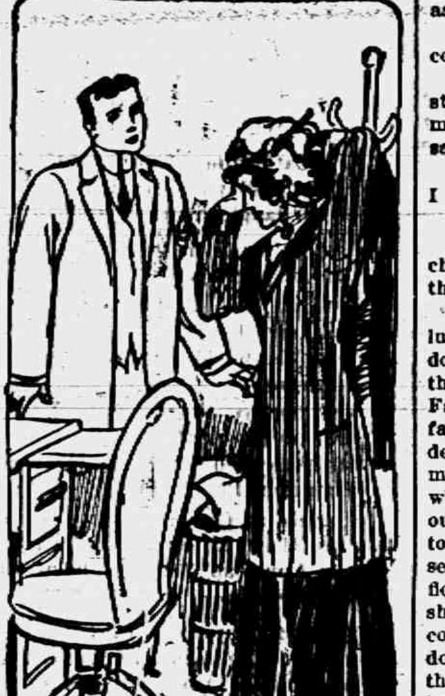
The girl arose and glided past him, and he followed her, closing the door on the gasping nineteen outside.

"Sit down, please," he said gently, placing a chair for her.

The slender, black gowned figure sank into the chair, and he was aware that the girl had the most amazing black eyes, soft and velvety, with dusky lashes sweeping her pale cheeks. He also noticed that her hair was red—not auburn, just plain red.

"I am in need of a stenographer," said Channing glibly, "and I am quite sure that you might fill the position, as it is not an arduous one. Perhaps you will be kind enough to answer a few questions."

"But"— began the girl, with amazed eyes that suddenly veiled themselves behind the lashes. "Certainly," she ended demurely.



"HELLO, CARROTS!" GRINNED DICK HAPPILY.

Channing drew a pad toward him.

"Your name, please," he said briskly.

The girl hesitated an instant before she answered.

"Alice Fairlie."

"What experience have you had? You understand stenography?"

"Yes, and I can operate a typewriter and do bookkeeping," she said, with a comical little air of pride in these accomplishments.

He nodded his head and forgot to ask her for references. "About—er—salary," he murmured thoughtfully. "I'll have to ask Dickerman what he pays." He touched a bell, and almost instantly the door opened and the gray haired, dry looking chief clerk appeared. He bowed courteously to the girl as he awaited his employer's pleasure.

"Ah, Dickerman, I have just engaged this young lady as my private secretary. Miss Fairlie, this is Mr. Dickerman, our chief clerk. What is the—er—usual salary we pay, Dickerman?"

"About fifteen, sir, if they are very competent; ten if they are ordinary," was Dickerman's quick response.

"Miss Fairlie might start at twelve-fifty then, as she is yet untried. Is that satisfactory, Miss Fairlie?" he asked the girl.

"Yes, thank you," she said with a lovely color flushing her cool cheeks. "If you will excuse me I will go now. When shall I commence work?"

"Tomorrow morning if you can."

"Thank you. Good afternoon, Mr. Channing!" And Miss Fairlie, with an oddly significant glance at the chief clerk, left the room.

It was three days afterward when he returned from a trip to Philadelphia that he heard his father's expressed opinion of the new stenographer.

Dick Channing went into his father's office just as Miss Fairlie glided out with notebook in hand. She bowed distantly as she passed.

"Well, dad, how do you like her?" breezed Dick cheerily.

"Suppose I was to tell you that the girl couldn't take a short letter from dictation," he said dryly.

"Great Scott, father!"

"On what grounds did you hire Miss Fairlie?"

Dick writhed. How could he tell his matter of fact parent that he had trusted to chance in the selection? He had merely counted seven girls from the end, and, lo, it was Miss Fairlie. No use talking, he wasn't cut out for business. If his father had only permitted him to stick down there on the Long Island estate and become a gentleman farmer—that was what he was fitted for. All the Channings had been farmers. His father was the only professional man among the lot.

"Well, Dick, may I inquire why you selected Miss Fairlie from twenty other girls? Was it because she is the most incompetent or because she is more gloriously beautiful?"

"Well, dad, I guess I'll have to confess it was pure chance," he admitted ruefully. "You see, I had interviewed [illegible] They all looked alike and sounded alike, and I got horribly mixed. So I simply chose the girl that sat in the seventh chair from the door."

"What?" Mr. Channing almost bounced out of his chair with astonishment.

Dick repeated his remarks and went into detailed explanation of how from a little lad he had decided many important questions by resorting to the lucky number seven.

"I'm sorry it's failed. Really, it's the first time the charm hasn't worked," he said sheepishly.

Mr. Channing's shoulders were shaking with suppressed merriment as he replied:

"You can go back to the farm, Dick but you still remain in the firm if you care to come back to your office now and then. As for Miss Fairlie, I have discharged her."

"You have? Well, I'm sorry," murmured Dick, conscious of a personal loss somewhere. Somehow in this moment of Miss Fairlie's dismissal the prospect of the Long Island farm was not so alluring. "I wonder what she will do now. If she is incompetent she can't get another job, and she looked poor."

"She won't starve," retorted Mr Channing grimly. "She's going back to the farm, too—so she says."

"Where?"

"Long Island—oh, Sheercliffe, if you must have it."

"Then she's near our place!" Dick was on his feet pacing the floor. "I wonder"—

"Wondering if I will object to having a stenographic daughter-in-law?" asked Mr. Channing dryly.

"Something like that," was Dick's cool retort.

"My dear boy, she isn't even a good stenographer," said Mr. Channing mildly, and Dick was surprised that he said no more.

"I'm not looking for a stenographer. I want a wife," said Dick bluntly.

"When did you make up your mind?"

"I don't know. I guess it was when chance decided upon her, and now there can't be any other for me."

"You have my permission to try your luck," laughed Mr. Channing. "But don't hail me as the disinterested father, for, you see, I've known Alice Fairlie ever since she was a child—in fact, I've been her guardian since the death of her parents. If you paid more attention to business, Dick, you would know that the Fairlie estate is our largest client. Alice happened in to see me the other day and found a seat among your applicants for the office position, and you chose her, and she was so proud of her smattering of commercial education, picked up I don't know where, that she accepted the job. Poor Dickerman was nearly horrified to death."

Mr. Channing drew his breath and grinned at his agitated son.

Dick was red and pale by turns, and he turned a furtive eye on the door of the little office where Alice Fairlie sat so demurely.

"Alice Fairlie! Of course I remember now," muttered Dick at last. "Why, when she was seven and I was nine we were engaged to be married. I used to call her 'Carrots,'" he ended in an awed tone.

"Go in and call her Carrots now," urged his father. "She's a lonely girl—educated abroad and no time to make friends yet and not a relative in the world. I'm very busy just now." He waved his son away.

Dick pushed into the little office, where Alice Fairlie was pinning on her hat. She glanced at him from mischievous eyes. On the little finger of one slender hand gleamed a little ring of twisted gold wire.

"Hello, Carrots!" grinned Dick happily.

"Hello, smarty!" dimpled Alice saucily.

"I see you're still wearing that ring I gave you," he said, with a bold glance at the glint of gold on her little finger.

She blushed redly. She did not tell him that all through the lonely years she had cherished a romantic fancy that some day her little playmate lover would come to claim her.

"It won't come off," she fibbed now. "I've tried and tried."

Dick smiled tenderly down upon her.

"Don't try to remove it," he murmured. "It's no use. You see, you were seven when I gave it to you, and seven is a lucky number with me."

"Why?" she asked.

"I'll tell you some other time," he promised. And somehow Alice appeared satisfied to wait for that golden time.

The Magic Answer.

When you have company, get one to be the accomplice and show the others this bit of magic.

The accomplice leaves the room, while the others decide on an article which the accomplice is to guess from your questions.

You have arranged with him that the right article is the one after you have mentioned one beginning with a vowel.

You can make this as mysterious as you like.

For instance the article agreed on by the company is the clock. When your accomplice comes back you ask him "Is it a mirror?" (Mirror begins with a consonant). "No."

"Is it a chair?" (Chair begins with a consonant). "No."

"Is it the carpet?" (Carpet begins with a consonant). "No."

"Is it the album?" (Album begins with a vowel). "No."

"Is it the clock?" "Yes."

Should any of the company catch on or should you want to vary the "magic," you decide with your accomplice to name an object with legs, like table or chair, before giving the object agreed upon and to which the final answer is "Yes."

"IT'S THE BEST POLISH I EVER USED"

That's What Every One Says Who Tries

Black Silk Stove Polish

DON'T imagine for a moment that all brands of stove polish are the same. Don't get the idea that to keep a nice glossy shine on your stove you must black it every few days. It's not a question of oft-repeated application. It's a question of the stove polish to use.

Black Silk Stove Polish is so much better than other stove polishes that there is absolutely no comparison—it's in a class all by itself.

It makes a brilliant glossy shine that don't rub or dust off. It anneals to the iron—becomes a part of the stove. It makes old stoves look like new and lasts four times as long as any other shine.

Get a can and give it a trial. Try it on your parlor stove, your cook stove, or your gas range. If you do not find it the best stove polish you ever used, your dealer is authorized to refund your money. Black Silk Stove Polish has been made by the same formula and sold under one name for 30 years.

Here is what some of the ladies write us:

"I sent to you for a can of Black Silk Stove Polish and found it so much better than any I had ever used that I asked my hardware dealer to order a supply. He did so, and is now selling nearly everyone in the place your polish. I had no idea there could be such a difference in stove polishes."

"I was visiting friends and they used Black Silk Stove Polish on their stoves. It made the best shine I ever saw, and after blacking, the polish did not rub or dust off. It is way ahead of any polish I have ever used."

Ask Your Dealer for Black Silk Stove Polish and refuse a counterfeit brand. Costs you no more than the ordinary kind, so why not have the best. Made in liquid or paste—one quality.

Black Silk Stove Polish Works, Sterling, Ill.

Use Black Silk Air-Drying Iron Enamel for grates, fenders, registers, stove pipes, etc. Prevents rusting. Not affected by heat or cold. Produces a permanent glossy black surface. Can, with brush for applying enamel, only 25 cents. Ask your dealer.

Use Black Silk Metal Polish for nickel, brass, silverware or tinware. It has no equal for use on automobiles.

LOST PEOPLE FOUND IN "MOVIE" FILMS

Brother Is Revealed In One and Husband In Another.

London, Sept. 8.—A remarkable story of a man's recognition of his long-lost brother in a moving picture comes from Whitestable.

During the exhibition of the "Quo Vadis" film at the local picture palace, a visitor became greatly agitated, and was so overcome by emotion that he fainted, and had to be carried out of the building.

When he recovered it was ascertained that in one of the actors in the scene depicted, the visitor had recognized a brother who went to Italy twelve years ago and had not been heard of since. A reunion between the brothers is anticipated.

Boston, Sept. 8.—A mother's search of nearly a year for her missing husband and child has been brought to a successful close through the medium of motion pictures, according to a letter received from Tokio, Japan, by the police here.

John Ellis, a stock broker, who carried off his four-year-old daughter Olga, despite a court order that she be delivered to her mother, has been located in the Japanese capital by a person who recognized her likeness in the "movies" at Yokohama.

Last Shovelful of Dirt Removed.

Panama, Sept. 8.—The last shovelful of earth was dug from the Culebra cut at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon. All the tracks and equipment will be removed today and the flooding of the cut begun.

U. S. Sailor Fatally Stabbed.

CROWD BEATS UP PRISONER

Woman Attacks and Disarms Assailant After Fatal Shot—Man Is Dying and Mother in Serious Condition After Mysterious Shooting—Assailant Had Been Drinking.

Kenosha, Wis., Sept. 8.—"I've got to shoot you and your son."

This was the only warning that Leon Degallo gave to Mrs. Rika Aquilla and her son, Costino Constans, here when he drew a thirty-eight caliber revolver and began shooting. Constans fell with the first shot, mortally wounded, but he leaped at the murderer and managed to catch his arm in such a manner that the second bullet just grazed the abdomen of his mother and went through her left arm.

Costans is dying at the Kenosha hospital and his aged mother is suffering from her wound and shock and is in a serious condition.

Shot Reading Prayer Book.

The cause of the shooting is a mystery. Degallo had been a boarder at the Costans home several years and had shown no signs of enmity. Mrs. Aquilla, seventy-four years of age, was greatly interested in charitable work.

At the time of the shooting she was sitting by a window at her home reading a prayer book. After the second shot the wife of Constans attacked the assailant and took the revolver away from him. Her screams for help attracted the neighbors and when the police came they found Degallo being pummeled by the crowd and the officers were forced to fight for their prisoner.

Degallo, held as the murderer, worked in a local factory the night before the shooting and on his way home drank freely.

WARRANT ISSUED FOR FINK

Belleville, Ill., Private Banker Charged with Many Irregularities.

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 8.—A warrant was issued in Belleville, Ill., for the arrest of Henry J. Fink, the private banker who dissappeared nearly two weeks ago and a week later was found at the home of a relative in St. Louis. Fink went to Belleville to surrender.

The warrant was issued on complaint of Joseph Bier, who claims he made Fink trustee of a $1,500 mortgage. The mortgage, Bier said, was released, but of this fact he was not notified by Fink.

The Fidelity and Deposit company of Maryland began an inquiry into Fink's connection with the estate of William Schaffer as conservator. The executor of the estate claimed that Fink had failed to turn over to him property valued at $20,000.

Fink, a private banker, had a large clientage among the residents of Belleville and surrounding towns.

UNIONS TO FORM FEDERATION

Heretofore Each Organization Has Acted to Itself—Mix to Resume Secret Inquest — Commission Investigating Will Recommend Further Spacing of the Trains.

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 8.—With the injured from the Bar Harbor express wreck improving, the county and state officials resting after their week of strenuous endeavor, President Howard Elliott denying himself to all callers, and the New Haven road rushing its official finding for early publication, the operating department employes of the railroad, the officials of the company understand that a momentous change in the labor situation is forthcoming. The conductors organization met here and favorably considered the plan which has already been endorsed by other labor bodies among the train operatives. Heretofore, the engineers, the firemen, the trainmen and the conductors have not been closely allied and were not at all apt to support each other by sympathetic strikes. Now it was learned that because of the attitude taken toward the men by General Manager Bardo and Vice President Whaley, so much dissatisfaction had been engendered among all the operating department laborers that they are perfecting a federation plan under which each brotherhood or union will retain its individual organization while at the same time being a part of the large unit for purposes of dealing with the New Haven railroad management concerning working conditions.

Mix to Resume Inquest.

Coroner Eli Mix has resumed his secret inquest having summoned several more witnesses. His inquest will not be finished until Thursday or Friday of this week. The finding then will not be issued until Monday or Tuesday of next week.

Mr. Elliott left for Boston where on Tuesday the road will present the company's side of the discussion over the $67,000,000 debenture bond issue at a hearing before the Massachusetts public service commission. Mr. Elliott will be back in New Haven Wednesday for he desires to see the finding of the railroad officials on the causes of the wreck before it gets to the public.

From conversation with the federal inspectors and with Interstate Commerce Commissioner McChord before he left New Haven, it seems certain that the commission will recommend in its finding the long spacing of trains in the so-called "danger zone" on the New Haven syystem, until such time as all steel equipment and up-to-date signals have been installed.

MRS. ARMSTRONG DIVORCED

Catherine Calvert Is Correspondent in Suit Against Playwright.

New York, Sept. 8.—Supreme Court Justice Weeks has granted a decree of divorce to Mrs. Abel Armstrong from Paul Armstrong, the playwright, on the report of J. H. Dougherty as referee who took testimony in the case for some months.

Under the court rules the testimony in the case is secret, but it was learned that the referee found the playwright guilty of misconduct with Miss Catherine Cassidy, whose stage name is Catherine Calvert, leading woman in his plays, "Deep Purple" and "Romance of the Underworld."

JUROR ASSAILS SLAVE VERDICT

He Regrets "Compromise" in Caminetti Case.

NOT ONE JUROR WITHOUT SIN

Not One of Twelve Men Who Had Not In His Career Done Same Thing as Defendant—Holds Caminetti Is Innocent and Believes Verdict Will Be Reversed.

San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 8.—"I voted to find F. Drew Caminetti guilty to save his parents from a lot of useless counsel's fees," said William A. Heister, one of the jurors who convicted the son of the United States commissioner general of immigration as a "white slaver."

"I voted him guilty because the rest of the jurors insisted on a compromise, and I regard the verdict as a disgrace to the United States. I believe it will be reversed, for I believe the young man is innocent of this charge.

Jurymen Not Without Sin.

"When we began to deliberate the question was put up to the jurors that there was not a man among the twelve who had not at some time in his career, done the same as young Caminetti had done.

"I believe the verdict will be reversed by the United States circuit court of appeals, and that was one of the main reasons I agreed on a compromise. Since I agreed to vote with the rest of the jurors I have had many misgivings. I candidly regret it. I should have kept to my original intention and refused to vote guilty on any of the counts."

INDIANA STATE FAIR OPENS

Said to Be Biggest and Best in History of Show.

Indianapolis, Sept. 8.—The Indiana State fair, continuing day and evening for five days, is the biggest and best since it was first instituted sixty years ago, according to Clem Graves of Miami county, president, and Charles Downing, the veteran secretary of the Indiana State Agricultural association.

The entries in every department are larger than ever before. It is estimated that at least 500 more head of horses, both speed and show, and cattle will be shown this year than last year. The exhibits of poultry, swine, sheep, fine arts and machinery are also unusually large.

The grounds were astir with preparations for the opening of the big exposition, and the activity will be continued with the arrival of several hundred heads of stock from the Ohio and Minnesota State fairs. An entire train load of cattle and horses is expected to arrive from Minnesota.

PORTER TRACK MAY BE SOLD

Officials of Racing Corporation Probably Will Dispose of Course Soon.

Laporte, Ind., Sept. 8.—According to information furnished by a member of the Racing Foundation corporation, which owns the Mineral Springs race track, the Hoosier course will be sold as soon as possible. The association will hold a meeting, and it is said the officials already have decided to dispose of the property at the best possible figure. Debts amounting to almost $45,000 are outstanding against the turfmen controlling the track.

Governor Ralston's action in closing the course just when racing has been placed on a paying basis apparently convinced the officials that the turf game is a dead issue in Indiana. When the recent meeting came to an abrupt close the association was clearing almost $700 every day.

A Legal Contest

Without Any Law In It

By F. A. MITCHEL

"Jim," said my friend Bob Elliot, "I have a law case for you."

I had just "put out my shingle" as an attorney and was not displeased at the announcement. Bob was rich, and I was poor. I supposed that the matter in question concerned some property he owned. I expressed myself ready and willing to serve him and asked him the nature of the case.

"It's a matter of breach of promise."

"Breach of promise?" I exclaimed. "So your conscienceless proceedings with women have at last got you into trouble, eh? I've told you time and again that your disposition to regard love as a game, a bit of sport like following a deer or landing a fish, is the most dangerous kind of amusement a man can indulge in. He's no match for a woman at that sort thing. I suppose you've been writing a lot of compromising letters."

"A few. But you're on the wrong track. I'm not to be sued for breach of promise. I'm to sue a woman for that identical thing."

"Phew!"

"And, what's more, I haven't any case at all. The defendant is a heartless coquette, and I wish to punish her for the damage she has done."

"Upon my word! When did you become so virtuous as to take it upon yourself to punish another for a sin at which you are sinner in chief?"

"It's jealousy on my part."

"Another fellow got ahead of you?"

"No; jealous of the lady's superior proficiency at the game of hearts. But enough of this preface work. You know Miss Kate Stanley?"

"I do and am aware that she is as conscienceless as you."

"More so. Beside her I'm as innocent as a new born babe. But it requires innocence to punish guilt, and I propose to give Miss Stanley a lesson."

"JUST YOU WRITE WHAT I TELL YOU."

"You can't do that by making her pay in money. She's richer than you."

"It's the publicity that will hurt her."

"Well, to come down to business, what evidence have you against her?"

He produced a small bundle of notes. I looked them over and found nothing but regrets for invitations he had given Miss Stanley.

"Why, you stupid numskull! These notes instead of showing encouragement indicate that the lady doesn't care especially for your attentions."

"Well, they're all the evidence I have. I'm relying on the publicity of the suit I'm about to bring to punish the defendant. Write her an official letter stating that your client, Robert Chandler Elliot, is about to bring suit against her for breach of promise. Say that he has furnished you with such evidence as he possesses which may or may not prove his case—a matter for a jury to decide. Tell her that since lawsuits are expensive and the issue of this one would be uncertain you would advise its settlement out of court. Lay the damages at $100.000 and ask her if she would prefer to pay without the publicity of a trial."

"Bob," I said, looking at him earnestly, "for monumental gall you are the finest specimen of my acquaintance."

"Do you take the case?"

"Not for a fee. As your friend I'll do anything for you in reason."

"Then do as I have told you."

I would rather have kept out of it, but I knew that Elliot was likely to have legitimate business. I wrote the letter to Miss Stanley as he had suggested.

The first success of his bluff, I confess, was not only unexpected, but astonishing. The lady had been so free with her pen to her different suitors that she had lost track completely of just where she had compromised herself. She replied that she was ready to pay a round sum for a return of any letters she might have written Mr Elliot and asked him through me to name a price for them. I sent for my client and informed him of the result of the preliminary skirmish. He read Miss Stanley's letter and said:

"Write her that if she will send a written regret for trifling with the most sacred human sentiment and ask for forgiveness in this especial case her letters will be returned to her."

"For heaven's sake, Bob," I exclaimed, "is there no shame in you?"

"You are employed to conduct this case as an attorney," he replied. "I was not aware that your craft are so pure as to preach purity to their clients."

"You should be one of us," I retorted. "For unscrupulousness you would stand at the head of the bar."

"Never mind the compliments. Just you write what I tell you."

I obeyed my client's instructions and in due time received a reply that when Miss Stanley submitted to be lectured on her actions in affairs of the heart the lecturer must bear a better reputation in such matters than my client. She asked me to name a sum Mr. Stanley would accept for the return of her letters.

I communicated this request to my client, expecting that he would instruct me as to a reply within a short time, but a month passed, and, although I met him frequently, he made no mention of the matter. When a fortnight had elapsed without any having sent any further communication to Miss Stanley she wrote again, reminding me that she had not heard from me in reply to her request for a statement of the sum that would buy her letters and begged that I would name a price since she did not wish them to remain in the possession of Mr. Elliot.

I noticed an absence of temper in the young lady's letters that caused me to think they were dictated by counsel. Thus far she had refrained from expressing herself toward my client except as a lady to a gentleman. When I showed Elliot this letter I told him that doubtless in the defendant's case counsel was the manager, while in the plaintiff's case counsel was simply a go-between in a matter which he did not understand. Bob made no reply to this assertion, but I could see by the expression of his face that it amused him. He told me to write the lady that his object in pressing the matter was not one of money, but justice. The case could only be settled—out of court—in the way he had suggested, and if that was not satisfactory I had orders to bring the suit.

The reply I received to this communication dispelled any belief on my part that the lady was acting under the advice of counsel. She said that it was a matter of common report that my client had broken the hearts of a dozen confiding girls. She would never consent to apologize to or ask pardon of one who was far more guilty than herself.

I was well aware that no lawyer would dictate such a letter, common report having no standing in a court of law. However, I had by this time given up trying to decipher the upshot of the case and was awaiting some sort of a denouement. Bob gave me no more confidence than he had conferred upon me when he put the matter into my hands, or, rather, employed me to write his letters for him.

He again took up the Fabian do-nothing policy, making no reply to the defendant's last letter. Then another one came in which the writer said that her attorney had advised her to confer with Mr. Elliot direct. With a view to settling the matter, which meant getting back her letters, she asked if my client would meet her at her attorney's office or at mine at such time as he might elect. Bob told me to write her that he would meet her at her counsel's office, and she might appoint the time. He knew well that she had no counsel, and he did not believe she would take any lawyer into her confidence. I confess that by this time I felt sure she had been acting on her own responsibility, and I was not surprised when her reply came that after consideration she preferred Mr. Elliot should call at her house.

When I received this letter I confess the scales fell from my eyes. It occurred to me that this, instead of being an incipient law case, was nothing more than a flirtation between two champions in the game of love. I sent the letter to Bob and, at the same time, resigned as his counsel, writing him that while I would be happy to serve him thereafter in legitimate law business, I didn't propose to do any more intermediate work between a pair of lovers.

The first I knew of the outcome of this legal contest in the court of love was an announcement in a society journal of the engagement of Robert C. Elliot and Miss Kathryn Stanley. I wrote Bob, congratulating him and inclosed a bill for a box of Havana cigars in lieu of a fee for bringing about his engagement. He paid the bill and soon after gave me an order to search a title for him, which was followed by other business.

After the wedding and the return from the honeymoon trip I dined with Mr. and Mrs. Elliot and told them that, inasmuch as I had brought them together, I thought I was entitled to the inner story.

"It's this way," said the husband. "I was bucking against half a dozen other fellows, and I didn't propose to remain in and of the crowd. My threat to sue was a bluff."

"And my offer to buy my letters," the wife added, "was a counter bluff I knew perfectly well that Bob had nothing but a few notes from me, but let you think I couldn't remember just to whom I had written letters that might be construed as a promise of marriage. Besides, I preferred that Bob should think I would rather pay a round sum than marry him."

"Having heard your two stories," I said, raising my glass, "I drink to the health of the two biggest bluffers who ever tilted in the arena of love."

JEROME TO RETURN TO UNITED STATES

Will Reappear in Montreal on Sept. 15th, However.

Coaticook, Que., Sept. 8.—William Travers Jerome, beaten in his efforts to have the Canadian immigration department deport Harry Thaw forthwith, has decided to return to New York in a day or two. He will be in Montreal again on Sept. 15, when Thaw's new writ of habeas corpus will be brought before the Court of Kings Bench, appeal side, for argument. This, in effect was what he said by long distance phone from Montreal.

Jerome went to Montreal to persuade if possible the immigration authorities to disregard the writ of habeas corpus issued by the Court of Kings Bench and deport Thaw to Vermont, immediately in accordance with the finding of the board of inquiry which sat on that case. His mission in that direction was a failure, the immigration people deciding that they did not care whether Thaw is in Canada another two weeks or not.

A self-appointed committee of Coaticook's people kept watch of the foreign newspaper correspondents all day. Everything that has been sent out of the local telegraph office has been known to these people ten minutes later. There have been threats to run the reporters out of town, and in various small ways attempts have been made to censor the news by coercion.

A citizen went to a New York reporter and told him that there was a movement on foot to secure the arrest of several New York newspaper men on complaints charging gambling. Reports of threats to shoot Jerome if he returns to Coaticook were numerous.

HAPPENINGS IN OUR NEIGHBORING VILLAGES

Cutting corn in August has been an unusual occurrance of the past week. The extremely dry weather has caused many fields to dry and mature to such an extent that they have been cut to save the fodder. While crops have all been generally shortened by the drouth a few strips of territory have been fairly well watered by the local showers and in going through the country a few rods sometimes almost completely changes the appearance of the crops.—Brooklyn Exponent.

Good progress is being made on the new Catholic church. The superstructure has been erected and the work of putting on the stone veneer is now going forward. The building will have a handsome tile roof.—Brooklyn Exponent.

A mausoleum is being erected in the Blissfield cemetery.

A deal has been put through whereby Geo. H. Lancaster gets a deed of the garage property on Chicago street. This means he and his family will move back to town soon.—Clinton Local.

It is now discovered that the success of the present national administration is due to the cooking of its members' wives. Most men find it hard to reap credit for anything these days.

The substance of a dispatch from Kansas is published with the hope that dairymen in this section may profit thereby. The drouth in that state has been even greater than in Michigan, and a farmer was in despair. But he was ingenious and fitted his cows with green magnifying glasses, which made the fields look green and every blade of grass was as large as two. The power of suggestion worked mightily, and cows were so encouraged that the supply of milk increased materially, and the animals gained in flesh.—Hudson Post.

The last of the old time wooden awning left in Milan was torn down last week and new cement side walk has been constructed in front of the Doyle property west of the Hotel Stimson. This is a decided improvement and adds much to the appearance and value of the property. Milan Leader.

FUNERAL OF F. P. CLARKSON.

On Friday afternoon a large number of friends gathered at the late home of Frank P. Clarkson for the last sad rites given for the memory of our friend.

Rev. J. A. DeSpelder conducted the services and the beautiful floral offerings were many. Mrs. Richard Meade and Mrs. Ella Hodges sang an appropriate hymn. The remains were laid in the Ridgeway cemetery where rest so many of his relatives and old neighbors. To C. A. Slayton, B. P. Anderson, A. W. Mills, Hugh Ager, J. R. Keeney and Chas. Kemp was given the honor of bearing their friend to his last resting place.

Among those in attendance from out of town were Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Clarkson, Mrs. Aldrich Blake, of Detroit; Sidney Clarkson, of Ann Arbor; Mr and Mrs Henry Barnaby of Toledo; George Clark and family of Britton; Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Houseman and Mrs. D. W. Loree of Ridgeway; Mr and Mrs. Mark Pennington and Miss Josephine Clarkson of Macon.

UNSATISFACTORY ATTEMPT TO REVIVE A LOST ART.

Since Thyatira was settled first by Macedonian soldiers it was natural that the city should keep up its trade connections with the parent country, and equally natural that Lydia should go there to sell her fine wares. The purple with which she dyed her linen was made from a root found in the vicinity of Thyatira, where it still grows in abundance. We should scarcely call the color which we now know as purple. One of our party obtained a quantity of the madder root in Thyatira, and after boiling it for several hours produced a dye of a rather unsatisfactory reddish color. Doubtless had she had Lydia's receipt for making the dye the results would have been more satisfactory.—Correspondence of The Christian Herald.

SULLIVAN FOR U. S. SENATOR

His Firends Enter Him in Contest—Boeshcenstein to Retire.

Chicago, Sept. 8.—Friends of Roger C. Sullivan in the regular Democracy make no secret of their endeavor to force him inot the U. S. senatorial fight. They assert he is the logical candidate and declare his withdrawal from active interest in corporations of a public service character leaves nothing in the way of his candidacy if he will consent to make the race.

Until the springing of the Sullivan boom it was generally considered that National Committeeman Charles Boeschenstein would be the choice of the regular organization for senator.

Boeschenstein, friends of Sullivan say, would quickly step aside for the Chicagoan, with whom he is on terms of closest friendship. Sullivan was national committeeman while Boeschenstein was state chairman, and they have worked together in political harmony for years.

Friday Evening at M. E. Church

The reception to the teachers and scholars of the Tecumseh Schools by the Epworth League of the M. E. church Friday evening was a grand success and much enjoyed by all present.

The reception was held in the parlors of the M. E. church. The room was nicely decorated.

The following program was given:
Trombone solo—Wilfred Waldron
Welcome address—Rev. G. H. Whitney
Vocal Duet—Lillian Kennedy, Aileen Kendrick
Piano Solo—Lulu Brown
Violin solo—Leon McLachlin
Vocal solo—Gertrude Kreidler
Piano solo—Fern Hanford
Address—Supt. Reed.

Following the program a game was played which furnished much amusement. Those present were divided up into families representing trees, peaches, corn, church, fly, automobiles, butterfly and bean. Each family then wrote a family history. The best history was awarded a prize, Rev. Whitney, Mrs. Frank Temple and Ella Hodges were judges. The successful family received as a prize a hat full of all day suckers.

Punch was served and the evening enjoyed by all.

Mrs. Mary Edwards suffered an operation for cancer this morning at her home on North Evans street. Dr. Hardy performed the operation assisted by Dr. Briegal. She is getting along finely, having come out from the influence of the anesthetic in good shape.

Arrangements are progressing nicely for the visit which King Cyrus Chapter, R. A. M., of Detroit, will pay the Tecumseh Chapter on Thursday next. They will come by special train and will be received by a committee who will take them for an auto ride around town. At 5:30 a banquet will be served at the Witherell hall, followed by the degree work at the Masonic Temple. While the men are busy at the Temple the ladies of the party will be entertained at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Van-Winkle by the wives of the officers of the local chapter.

Object of His Visit.

"Did Sir Alfred Murgatroyd come over here on business?" "Oh, no! It's only a pleasure trip. He came over here to swear at the country."—Puck.

ADMISSION 25c.

IN HONOR OF HIS RETURN.

Mrs. J. F N. Bowen entertained a party of young people very pleasantly Friday evening for her son, Percy, who has within a few days returned from a trip a abroad. Various stunts were the order of the evening the making of button holes being one of them. Miss Lydia Babcock won first prize as the best needle woman and Eugene Rosacrans not being very used to the business, won the booby prize. Both prizes are highly regarded by the recipients as they were some of the souvenirs Percy brought from Europe. He gave a graphic description of his travels and delighted the guests with his exhibition of curios and views.

The following were the guests: Miss Winnetta Thorpe of Sabina, Ohio; Miss Mildred Weaver, of East Liverpool, Pa; Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Rosacrans, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Dickinson, Misses Lydia Babcock, Edith Rector, Anna Mitchell, and Marion Rosacrans, Tom Elliott, Fred and Earl Rector. Mrs. Paul Bowen assisted Mrs. Bowen in the serving of the refreshments.

DR. F. D. CLARKE OF THE MICH. SCHOOL FOR DEAF IS DEAD

Dr. Frances D. Clarke, superintendent of the Mich. School for the Deaf at Flint and Grand Master of the Mich. Grand Lodge F. & A. M., died suddenly of heart failure at his home on the institution grounds early Monday morning.

Dr. Clarke was a man of fine education and of unusual ability. Beloved by all who new him. Under his grinding hand the Mich. School for the deaf has become one of the best schools in the United States. Dr. Clarke has been connected with the school for the last 21 years.

He was elected Grand Master of the Michigan Grand Lodge last May.

Deering Corn Harvester.

Will do nearly as much work in a day as eight men.

Has both ball and roller bearings with self-aligning boxes.

The power is distributed direct, eliminating undue strain and lessening the draft.

Wheels are of the same height, which lessens side draft, neither wheel runs on the stubble, which is left clean and even.

Lightness of draft is secured as the corn is bound lying down like a grain binder, thus saving the power required in elevating as on other binders.

The only corn binder that will work equally as well in tall or short corn, as there is 21 inches of adjustment for the band, 8 inches in shifting the binder, 18 inches in adjusting the butt adjuster. Compare with other binders which have an 8-inch raise of a pan, which when raised the corn will clog.

The balance wheel allows the binder to run steady when cutting hill corn.

Oh Where, Oh Where?

Shall I Go to buy my New Fall Shoes?

J. J. Belcher is showing a nice, nifty line of

Fall Shoes

For Men, Women and Children.

We claim to have the best assortment we ever showed in Tecumseh, in Black, Brown, Button and Lace. The low heel was, and is, all right for out-door work, but when a woman wants a nice dress shoe she wouldn't take a pair of them as a gift. So we have had made some nice medium heels, not awfully high—just graceful and neat, in all leathers, black, brown and white. Pay the low price and take your choice.

In Men's we can show the young man his shoe for courting and for work; the middle-aged man one for dress and business; the old gentleman a shoe for comfort—soft inside, soft uppers, plain, no cap toe. One for business too, a long-desired shoe.

When it comes to the little Gents' shoe, we have what they like, "just like Daddy's," in brown and black.

REMEMBER THREE THINGS:
1st—We fit babies without getting mad.
2nd—We mend shoes on short notice.
3rd—We keep the store open evenings.

United States Officials to Conduct an Open Investigation.

© 1913, by American Press Association.

While Connecticut authorities are conducting proceedings to determine the cause of the recent wreck at New Haven, in which twenty-one persons were killed, United States officials, members of the interstate commerce commission, are quietly planning for the federal investigation. This probe will be open to the public, differing in this respect from the others. H. W. Belnap (top), chief inspector of safety appliances; F. D. Halby (center) and F. A. Howard (below), inspector in charge of all railroad lines east of New York, are the United States officers in charge of the investigation.

SCHWENK'S FORM REVERSAL

Yanked from Mound in South Michigan—Stars for Browns.

Saginaw, Mich., Sept. 8.—To be called from the box with three men on bases and no one out in a class C league and then jump right into the majors and with a game that goes eleven innings against a good club is the somewhat unique experience of "Lefty" Schwenk, late iron man of the South Michigan circuit and for the Saginaw club.

On Aug. 31 against Adrian, Schwenk went eight innings and had no one down in that inning with the bases choked. The signal was given for him to walk in from the mound. He walked into the club house, then departed for Detroit and joined the St. Louis Browns. Four days later he went eleven innings against Chicago and won 5 to 4.

15 KILLED IN ENGLAND

Two Sections of Famous London-Scotland Express in Collision.

LONDON, ENG.—Fifteen persons are believed to have been killed and thirty others injured in a collision of two sections of the famous London-Scotland express. Official reports accounted for nine dead, while correspondents on the scene recorded the fatalities as fifteen.

The wreck occurred on the Midland railway near Hawes Junction, the two sections being north bound. The second section dashed into the rear of the first, telescoping several coaches, which burst into flames. Many persons were trapped and, if not killed outright, they were burned to death.

Saved by April Fool Time.

When Francis, duke of Lorraine, and his wife were awaiting death in the prison of Nantes they chose as the day for an attempt to escape the 1st of April.

Disguised as peasants, says a chronicler, the one bearing a hod on his shoulder, the other carrying a basket of rubbish on her back, they both at an early hour of the day passed through the gates of the city. A woman having a knowledge of their persons ran to the guard to give notice to the sentry.

"April fool!" cried the soldier, and his comrades to a man shouted out, "April fool!"

The governor, to whom the incident was related as a great jest, became suspicious, and ordered an investigation, but it was too late, for in the meantime the duke and his wife were well on their way. The 1st of April had saved them.

NO ONE STRONGER THAN HIS STOMACH.

The celebrated Dr. Abernethy of London was firmly of the opinion that disorders of the stomach were the most prolific source of human ailments in general. A recent medical writer says: "every feeling, emotion and affection reports at the stomach (through the system of nerves) and the stomach is affected accordingly. It is the vital center of the body * * * *." He continues, "so we may be said to live (through) the stomach." He goes on to show that the stomach is the vital center of the body. For weak stomachs and the consequent indigestion or dyspepsia, and the multitude of various diseases which result therefrom, no medicine can be better suited as a curative agent than

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

MRS. MURKEN.

"Several months ago I suffered from a severe pain right under the breast-bone," writes MRS. G. M. MURKEN, of Corona, Calif. "Had suffered from it, off and on, for several years. I also suffered from heart-burn, did not know what was the matter with me. I tried several medicines but they did me no good. Finally, I was told it was my liver. I did not dare to eat as it made me worse. Whenever I swallowed anything it seemed that I would faint—it hurt so. I grew very thin and weak from not eating. Was told to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I took five bottles of it and could feel myself getting better from the first dose. I could eat a little without pain and grew strong fast. To-day I am strong and well and can do a big day's work with ease. Can eat anything and have put on flesh wonderfully. I will say to all sufferers write to Dr. Pierce. He has my undying gratitude."

The Conspirators

How They Were Punished With Their Own Weapons

By RYLAND BELL

During the reign of Louis XIII. of France dueling was very prevalent among the nobility, the army—indeed, every one who made any pretense to respectability. One young man in Paris, Gaston Roche, set himself resolutely against the practice and announced that he would neither send nor accept a challenge.

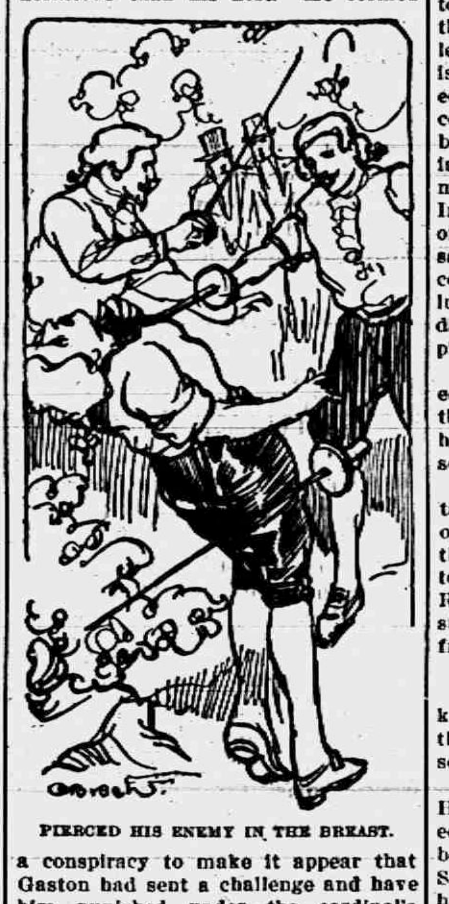
Gaston Roche became engaged to Mlle. Annette Ladis, an orphan with a fortune, and since he, too, was wealthy and of an excellent family there could be no objection to the match. Unfortunately for the lovers, Annette was a minor, and the management of her estate was in the hands of one Alphonse Didier. Didier was still a comparatively young man and had been selected by Annette's father to be her guardian because he intended that the two should marry.

When Gaston began to show evidence of his liking for Annette, Didier, who was guarding her carefully that no one should step in and take her away from him, looked upon him as an enemy. And when the guardian saw that Annette accepted the love offered her he was beside himself with anger.

But Didier realized that to oppose a case of true love by force would be to lose the prize. He preferred to work by secret methods. He first hired one of the best swordsmen in France to pick a quarrel with Gaston and kill him in a duel. But Gaston, who had publicly announced his opposition to settling disputes at the point of the sword, declined to fight.

But this did not lessen the love Annette bore him one whit. She knew nothing of her guardian's connection with the affair. She simply stood by Gaston because she loved him and approved of his stand against dueling, which was killing off all the best young men in France. Indeed, so great was the slaughter that Cardinal Richelieu, the prime minister, had issued an edict against it.

Didier's next move was even more nefarious than his first. He formed a conspiracy to make it appear that Gaston had sent a challenge and have him punished under the cardinal's edict. Annette had a cousin, Antoine Partelow, a worthless fellow who wished that Annette might die without issue since in that event he would inherit her estate. Didier took Partelow into his confidence, and the two agreed as a first step toward possession of the Roche estate to get rid of Gaston. They took in with them a third party, an impoverished nobleman, Count Louis d'Alger. Having possessed themselves of specimens of Gaston's handwriting, they forged a challenge from Gaston to D'Alger.



PIERCED HIS ENEMY IN THE BREAST.

This preliminary step having been taken, the count publicly insulted Gaston. Since there were many witnesses to the insult all Paris was wondering if Gaston would a second time bring down on himself the imputation of coward. He stood by his principles, but, instead of sending D'Alger a reply to his challenge, ignored it. Not long after the insult had been offered the conspirators contrived to have the forged challenge fall into the hands of Cardinal Richelieu.

Gaston was arrested and taken before the minister. He was shown the proof of his guilt and was thunderstruck. After examining it carefully, though he knew it to be a forgery, he could not detect any point of dissimilarity between the chirography and his own. He simply denied that he had sent it or any other challenge. The punishment named in the cardinal's edict was death, but since the accused denied the charge he was sent to prison to await further proof.

Another charge, one of dishonesty, was brought against Gaston, and Didier told Annette that her lover had been thrown into prison on this account, showing her an order committing him on the charge of peculation. Annette would not believe that her lover was guilty, but the weeks, the months and finally the years went by, and she saw or heard nothing of him. Didier made every effort to win her for himself, but she resolutely declined to marry him or any one else. At last they told her that Gaston was dead, but even this failed to effect the purpose for which it was intended. She came of age and into possession of her fortune. Going to her estate, she lived there in retirement, ignorant of what had become of her lover, but believing Didier's story that he was dead.

Didier, who had been a friend of her father, managed to keep from her the fact that he had been the cause of Gaston Roche's ruin. He was a frequent visitor at her chateau, being always made welcome on her late father's account. She remained faithful to Gaston's memory, refusing Didier's and other offers, but Didier believed, or at least hoped, that by perseverance he would be able at last to dominate her even if he could not make her love him.

At last, in order to escape a world that had become obnoxious to her, she [illegible]

Cardinal Richelieu died and was succeeded by Cardinal Mazarin. The efforts of the former to eradicate dueling were a failure, and after his death his edict was not enforced. One evening D'Alger was supping in a café in Paris when a man entered and swept his eye over the room, his glance finally lighting on the count. Then he walked directly toward him.

The stranger's features were those of a man of about thirty, but he had evidently suffered, and his sufferings had left their trace. His hair was gray and evidently prematurely so. The moment he saw D'Alger his expression changed from habitual sadness to one of intense hate. The count was sitting with his feet extended, and when the stranger passed him he deliberately kicked them out of his way. D'Alger rose angrily, but the stranger passed on and took a seat at the other end of the room.

"Alphonse," exclaimed the count to a friend at the table, "go to that fellow and make arrangements for me to kill him tomorrow morning!"

The man addressed went to the stranger, bowed politely and asked for satisfaction for his insult on behalf of Count D'Alger. The person challenged gave his name as Luigi Massellio and his residence as Rome. This indicated that he was an Italian, but he spoke French without any accent whatever. He agreed to meet the count in a wood beyond where the Arc de Triomphe now stands and chose rapiers for weapons. The hour of the meeting was the next morning at sunrise.

D'Alger had formerly been an excellent swordsman, but his skill had been reduced by dissipation. Nevertheless he was still dreaded. When he began to fight with Massellio it was supposed that he would soon disable him at least. But those present were astonished at the Italian's skill. He seemed for awhile to be playing with the count as a cat will play with a mouse before eating it, and his enemy saw in his eye the same look that the mouse might see in the eye of the cat. In vain D'Alger sought to get the point of his sword beyond that of his adversary. Every thrust was parried with consummate skill. Finally when his lunges began to lose their force and direction the Italian made a thrust and pierced his enemy in the heart.

When the count's clothing was opened to examine his wound it was found that Massellio had given the point of his rapier a twist that had left a cut something like an interrogation point.

Scarcely had the Parisians ceased to talk about D'Alger's death and the want of an explanation of the enmity of the man who had killed him when Antoine Partelow, walking past the Palais Royal, looking at an equipage in the street, bumped against a man coming from the opposite direction.

"Pardon, monsieur," said Partelow.

"Pardon? Do you suppose you can knock against a man on the street in that fashion without paying for doing so?" and he slapped Partelow's face.

Partelow stepped back astonished. His assailant drew forth a card, handed it to him and walked on. The card bore the name of Count Rumsdorf of St. Petersburg. Within an hour's time he received a challenge from Antoine Partelow.

At the meeting that took place the next morning the count was recognized as Luigi Massellio, who had killed D'Alger. The fight was very like the one between the Italian and D'Alger. Rumsdorf displayed the same remarkable skill with the rapier and, after defending himself for awhile, pierced his enemy in the same place he had pierced his former enemy—the heart. And, what was still more singular, by the same twist he had given his sword before he left an interrogation point on Partelow's chest.

All Paris was by this time talking about this singular stranger who had different names, but left the same mark on the bodies of his enemies and wondering who would be his next victim. They had not long to wait. One morning it was announced that Alphonse Didier had been killed in a duel by a German baron, and the mark left on his body was the same as that left on his other two victims. But Didier was not killed outright, though he died on the field. As he was dying his enemy went to him and, looking him in the eye, said:

"You wish to know who I am? I am Gaston Roche, who would not fight a duel and whom you conspired to ruin. I have left my mark on the bodies of the other conspirators. You are the last. Since you would have it so I have become a duelist. Nevertheless I have fought my last duel, having punished those who made me one."

To admire, to love, to regret is to live, said a great writer. Do not let the regret be brought on by a cough or cold which if treated when it first appeared would have easily been controlled. Allen's Cough Balsam brings welcomed relief in such cases. Contains no harmful ingredients. 25c., 50c. and $1.00 bottles at all dealers.

Tar and Feathers.

Tar and feathers are not a peculiarly American punishment. Richard the Lion Hearted first proclaimed this punishment. It was when he was setting out for the third crusade that he gave warning that "a robber who shall be convicted of theft shall have his head cropped after the fashion of a champion, and boiling pitch shall be poured thereon, and the feathers of a cushion shall be taken out on him, so that he shall be known."

GENERAL NEWS.

WASHINGTON—The Wilson administration has at last received what it regards as satisfactory assurances that Huerta will not be a candidate for election to succeed himself as President of Mexico. This it was authoritatively disclosed, is the basis for the optimism expressed by the president and Secretary Bryan in the face of what seemed a period of discouragement. This assurance consists in the construction which the administration itself puts on the second note of Foreign Minister Gamboa to John Lind and supplemental verbal exchanges between Gamboa and Nelson O'Shaughnessy, charge of the American embassy at Mexico City. The tenor of the conversations between Gamboa and O'Shaughnessy, it is asserted, has strengthened this government's interpretation of the Gamboa note to the effect that Huerta will not be a candidate.

NEW YORK — The first definite view regarding the murder of the young woman whose dismembered torso and legs were found floating in the Hudson river near the West Shore ferry on the Jersey Shore was turned over to the police when it became practically a certainty that the pillow ticking in which the torso was found last Friday was sold by Sachs, a dealer in second hand furniture at 2,762 Eighth avenue near the corner of One Hundred and Forty-sixth street. Mr. Sachs told a reporter that he has only sold two pillow ticks of this type and one to a woman who came into his store on April 22. From his description of the woman the police expect some clew to the identity of the body.

ORRE'S LAND, MAINE — Scientists from Harvard and Bowdoin are on their way to Great Island at the eastern point of Quohog Bay, three miles from here, to view the petrified skeleton of a mammoth pre-historic mammal which was discovered a few days ago on the farm of Theodore Bullard, a nephew of President Emeritus C. W. Eliot of Harvard college. It was found nearly intact in what seemed to be a cave about fifteen feet under ground.

NEW YORK — Hot, steaming Cooper union crowds—three thousand in the hall and as many in the street—shouted their heads off after a whole summer of suppression. They were protesting against the impeachment of Governor Sulzer, demanding that Charles F. Murphy be lynched and passing without a single "nay" a resolution saying that "the attempt to impeach out governor is a species of treason against the state."

NEW YORK—The largest known bequest to an educational institution in the south in years and the largest recently made to any college is disclosed in the transfer tax appraisal of the estate of Robert F. Doremus, member of the stock exchange firm of De Coppet and Doremus, showing that Washington and Lee university of Lexington, Va., will eventually receive $2,003,002, under the will of Mr. Doremus.

KINGSTON, N. Y. — That Justice Hasbrouck of the supreme court here will sustain Governor Sulzer's pardon of Joseph G. Robin was the general opinion entertained at the close of the hearing of the convicted banker's writ of habeas corpus before Justice Hasbrouck in the afternoon. And in rendering his decision it is thought the justice will hold that the assembly illegally impeached Sulzer.

WASHINGTON — Secretary of the Navy Daniels has expressed his gratification at the fact that Lieutenant W. H. Lassing, recruiting officer at Cincinnati, had refused to permit the enlistment of William Less, who had been given his choice of the workhouse or the navy.

GRAFTON, WIS.—[illegible]rtin W. Malbraith, fifty years o[illegible] of Theinsville and Frank Matte, twenty-four, telephone linemen, were instantly killed when they came in contact with a live wire carrying 3,300 volts.

MARINETTE, WIS. — After eating a number of green apples while visiting at the home of a relative, Mrs. Edward Curran, of Escanaba, Mich., twenty-five years old, died in a few hours.

Redeemed Himself.

Sir Charles Napier had an effective method of dealing with cowards. On one occasion a flying soldier was stopped by his fellows, who were about to shoot him when the general intervened. "Give the man another chance," he ordered. "Place him in the front rank, and if he turns again let him be shot."

The man eagerly embraced this chance of life, overcame his fears and fought bravely for the rest of the day.

RACINE, WIS. — Pugilist McCue of Racine defeated Tommy Dougherty of Denver at 124 pounds in the seventh round when Dougherty's seconds threw up the sponge. Dougherty protested and the seconds denied they had given up the fight, but the decision had been made. McCue had the better of the fight throughout, although Dougherty showed strong at times.

MISS RUTH LAW

Woman Aviator Who Made Record Flight with Two Passengers.

Miss Ruth Law, sister of Rodman Law, the aeronaut, in a biplane, carrying Mrs. Richard R. Sinclair and Miss Pearl McGrath, made what was probably a world's record flight for a woman aviator carrying passengers at Garden City, N. Y. She made a flight of about ten minutes' duration at an altitude of about 800 feet.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

CADILLAC — About one year ago there was much interest here in a will-breaking case in Ida Grove, Ia., because Robert Hoover, of this city, was one of the parties concerned. Another person now comes forward, the heir in the case, and is trying to crowd the Cadillac man out. Hoover, a farm hand, had learned that Mrs Alexander McHugh, of Iowa, was his mother, and had a correspondence with her. He did not know she was a wealthy woman. A lawyer came here and induced him to sign away any claim to her estate for $10,000 and an allowance of $50 a month. Another lawyer came along, looked up Hoover and pointed out to him that he was the only blood relative known and there was an estate of more than $400,000. In the midst of the suit to break the will, comes an S. S. Hoover, of Wisconsin, who says he is the son of the son of Mrs. McHugh, which would make him the son of Robert Hoover. Robert denies the relationship, declaring that while he has been a married man, now divorced, he never heard that he ever had a son, and naturally doubts it. But S. S. Hoover will fight for his share of the $400,000. Meantime hungry western attorneys are having much to do with the case.

CALUMET — The vigorous militancy of women strike sympathizers who attack nonunion workmen as they are leaving or returning home has become one of the most serious phases of the copper mine strike situation. General P. L. Abbey, in command of state troops, has resorted largely to the use of the mounted patrol, which is to be increased this week in the most troublesome locations, and escorts of soldiers and deputies are provided for men menaced by pickets. President Moyer of the Western Federation of Miners left last night for Chicago on strike business. He said he would return to this district.

BAY CITY — In making herself believe that she was the heroine in an emotional "movie" drama, and that she was being "snapped" by the operator, while making a daring escape from a "Blue Beard's" tower, Eva Roscoe, the ten-year-old daughter of B. Roscoe, fell from a rope on which she was lowering herself from a second story window of her home here. Her leg was so badly broken that the bone protruded from the skin. The girl fell about twenty feet, the rope giving way when she was half way down.

PONTIAC — The very latest reports from Clarkston stated that it would be between two and three weeks before the state bank examiners would determine the exact amount of the shortage of Cashier Ralph E. Jossman, of the Jossman State bank of Clarkston. It was disclosed that the bank had 1,800 depositors and only about half that number of passbooks have been brought in. Until the rest are brought to the bank, it will be difficult to determine the amount of defalcation.

JACKSON — Commencing on Sept. 15, a most complete high school course will be started in Jackson prison for the inmates, Warden Simpson having found that nine out of ten prisoners never went beyond eighth grade in school. Instructors will be engaged to conduct the classes. The first eight grades will also be taught. There are dozens of young men in the prison, according to Warden Simpson, who have had but a short period of schooling.

THREE PERISH AS LAUNCH CAPSIZES

Auto and Boat Party Meets Tragedy in Storm.

CEDARVILLE, MICH.—Three people were drowned and five rescued as they fought for their lives in Muskalonge bay, above the Islington hotel, when a launch capsized in a fierce electrical and wind storm which swept the Lescheneh islands.

The dead: Mrs. Robert Anderson, Soo, Mich.; Mr. and Mrs. Albert Darbes, Soo, Ont.

The party comprised Mr. and Mrs. Robert Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Darbes, O. E. Pierson and Elgin Troyer, who journeyed from Soo, Ont., to Cedarville in an auto. Arriving at Cedarville they hired a large launch of George Laffeur for a trip through the Lescheneaux islands. They had only been out about an hour when they were caught in a squall.

The large launch from the Elliott house was rushed to the scene and saved the other occupants except Mrs. Anderson, who died soon afterward.

CHARITY OBJECT IS A CROOK

Wanderer Loaned $500 Violin for Concert Skips Out with It.

LANSING, MICH.—By the telling of a pitiful story to the associated charities of this city, a young Russian who gave his name as Sam Abraham, obtained from a prominent Lansing musician a violin valued at $500, with which he was to give a cnocert in the Congregational church so that he might raise funds to go to Chicago, and continue his musical education.

Before the concert, however, Abraham left town taking the violin with him.

The young Russian substantiated his claims as to musical ability by giving an impromptu concert on a borrowed violin before the Lansing critic. So impressed was the latter musician that he loaned him the instrument. Abraham was poorly clad.

SPURNS CAR FRANCHISE

Proposals of Saginaw Board of Trade Refused by Traction Company.

SAGINAW, MICH.—The city traction company has refused to accept the franchise drawn by a committee of fifty from the board of trade, five months ago, providing for a new contract between the city and company, and automatically quashing all standing franchises.

It was proposed that franchises run for thirty years, and any time after the first ten the city would have the right to purchase the lines at their physical value, the appraisal to be made by disinterested persons.

The city was also to have access to the books of the company.

BURGLARS ARE UTILITY MEN

Cook Stolen Food in House and Carry Away Silverware.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.—Bold burglars entered the home of John Vanderlester, a farmer about four miles from this city while the family was attending the fair at Grand Rapids and carried away a quantity of silverware and a supply of food which they cooked before they left the house.

They drove to Kalamazoo with one of Canderlester's horses, which they abandoned on the street.

Noted Teacher of Deaf Dies.

FLINT, MICH.—Dr. Francis Devereaux Clarke, who was sixty-four years old, grand master of the Michigan Grand lodge of Masons and superintendent of the Michigan School for the Deaf for twenty years, died suddenly here of heart disease. He gained a national reputation for his writings on the subject of instructing deaf students.

JACKSON — Charles H. Smith, who was a resident of Jackson, judge of the land court at Manila, died at Marblehead Neck, Mass., aged fifty-six years. Judge Smith, who recently arrived from Manila, has been visiting Fred McQuestion of Brookline. He had been suffering for some time with anemia, but his death was unexpected.

BATTLE CREEK — About twenty valuable paintings were presented to the local high school by Mrs. Lena [illegible] Ladd of Chicago. The collection will be known as the Atwood memorial collection and will be the nucleus of an elaborate art display to be placed in the schools.

PONTIAC—Henry Geneva, who is about twenty-one years old, and Richard Landy, nineteen, Detroit, are under arrest here charged with carrying concealed weapons. The officers believe they robbed a store in Rochester. When arrested they had revolvers and brass knuckles.

GRAND RAPIDS — Frederick A. Wurzburg, his son, Donald Miss Frances Coph, Miss Florence Loveland and Miss Leora Howe, were poisoned eating ice cream at the state fair grounds. Immediate attention by physicians saved their lives.

ROAD OVER SWAMP DROPS FROM SIGHT

Highway Finished Week Ago Entirely Disappears.

EATON RAPIDS, MICH. — After several attempts to fill up the Grohe sink hole southwest of this city, and spending a lot of money on the job, the road that was completed across it early last week, has sunk out of sight and the same old pond hole is in evidence. The last job of filling cost the township $800, and it was apparently a good one, but the bottom has once more dropped out of the treacherous spot and there is no more road in sight than there is across Lake Michigan.

The farmers have decided to take the work into their own hands, and have agreed to haul enough stone, dirt and gravel to insure a road across the sink hole, if it takes a year, they say.

GIVES WOMAN EXPLANATION

Boy Fears Spanking and Lays Blame on Somebody Else.

WHITEHALL, MICH. — After the police of several neighboring cities had searched for several hours for a band of gypsies said to have attempted to kidnap Clayton Sutton, eleven years old, son of a farmer living near here, the lad confessed that the story of his abduction was a fabrication.

The lad was found near Bolton early in the day in an exhausted condition. He said he had been kidnapped by a gipsy band near his father's farm, but escaped and made his way here. Later he admitted that his father had told him to chop some wood and he had run away. He had walked about ten miles and feared a spanking if he returned home with his task undone.

LAKE HOLDS UNDESIRABLES

Marshall Anglers Would Destroy All Spawn-Eating Fish.

MARSHALL, MICH. — The state game warden will be asked for permission to net all bullheads, carp, and other spawn-eating fish from the Duck, Homer and Goguac lakes this fall. A petition signed by local sportsmen has been presented to Deputy Game Warden Young of Albion, who will take it up with the officers at Lansing. Permission to net the lakes was granted some time ago, but the concern that had the contract declined to do the work when it learned that the fish could not be shipped out of the state.

By removing the "undesirables" from the lakes Young says that there will be a large increase in the number of game fish.

STUDENTS' EATS GOING UP

Will Be $4.25 and Perhaps More, at Ann Arbor.

[illegible] ARBOR, MICH.—The regular price of student board has at last gone up. The Freeman boarding houses, the two largest in the city, will charge $4.25 a week instead of $4 and the price may go to $4.50.

Mr. Freeman says it cost him $21 a week more for meat than it did a year ago for the same amount and milk and butter has cost him $1,400 more than the same quantity last year. Other boarding ho[illegible] will likely follow his example.

PONTIAC — When Hallie Thurber, who is a cigarmaker, was arraigned in the municipal court on a charge of deserting his wife and baby, he declared he was not married to the woman who made the charge. The woman claims to have been married to Thurber in Windsor. He demanded an examination and was released on bail of $500.

JEROME FREED ON GAMBLING CHARGE

Judge Orders Him Discharged After Three Testify.

COATICOOK, QUE.—Judge Mulvena at 8:20 at night, after hearing three witnesses, dismissed the charges against William Travers Jerome, stating that he had not been held legally and that all Canadians regret the manner in which he had been treated.

Jerome, in a brief speech, thanked the Canadian people for the way he had been received, and said he would not misinterpret sentiment of the best Canadian people toward him by the action of a few who instigated his arrest.

Only three witnesses were examined when the judge decided that there was no case and acquitted the defendant.

ARTIST MILLAR KILLED

Wife Is Also Victim When Railway Train Strikes Automobile.

NEW YORK — Addison T. Millar, one of the most widely known painters and etchers of this country, and his wife were instantly killed when their automobile was struck by an express train near Norwalk, Conn. Two friends who were riding in the same machine were seriously hurt.

Mr. Millar and his wife had been residing in the artist colony at Silver Mine.

Shuman Name Goes to Senate.

WASHINGTON — The appointment of Irving Shuman of Sullivan, Ill., as subtreasurer in Chicago, was sent to the senate by President Wilson. Mr. Shuman will reorganize the force of employes in the subtreasury, replacing all of the Republicans holding supervising positions with Democrats, it is said.

CAIRO, ILL.—Being imbued with the belief that lack of proper medical attention caused the death of his mother, Harvey R. Fiels, an insurance solicitor, shot and killed Dr. E. E. Gordon, a prominent physician, near St. Mary's hospital. About ten days ago Dr. Gordon operated on Fields' mother, who subsequently succumbed. After the shooting and from a cell in the county jail, Fields also asserted Dr. Gordon, who was the family physician, had attacked his wife when she went to the physician's office a few days ago.

CHICAGO — Armido Pieroni, the owner of a fruit store at 2604 Lincoln avenue, shot and killed Gilbert Loretti, twenty-eight years old, an employe, shot and seriously wounded Elza Bianchi, his partner in business and Loretti's brother-in-law, also an employe, and then killed himself. The shooting occurred shortly before 2 o'clock and it is said to have been the outcome of Loretti's inability to obtain a license to wed the sixteen year old daughter of Pieroni.

JACKSON, MICH. — Harry Endicott was preparing for an exhibition race here and was rounding the turn of the race track at high speed when a tire burst and the machine skidded and hurtled into an iron fence railing behind which were throngs of spectators. A girl, Mary Sarata, was hit by the machine and crushed to death. Endicott was the brother of Bill Endicott. Both competed in the Elgin, Ill., races.

DETROIT, MICH.—Two young men are dead and a third was fatally injured in a quarrel over pretty, sixteen-year-old Mary Wilczak, when her brother, Casimer, shot down two of her suitors in front of her home and then turned the revolver on himself, inflicting a wound from which he died later in the hospital.

HOT SPRINGS FIRE

Fifty Blocks Burn, and Loss Is Over $6,000,000.

WIND BAFFLES HEROIC EFFORT

Territory Burned Extends 7 to 10 Blocks in Width and 10 to 15 Blocks in Length—Little Rock and Other Departments Aid But of Little Avail.

HOT SPRINGS, ARK.—The military guards are patroling a district a mile in length and from seven to ten blocks wide, swept by a fire which caused a loss of $6,000,000. Governor Hays is in direct charge of the work of preserving order, preventing looting and giving aid in the devastated section.

At least 2,500 persons are homeless. Some of them are being cared for by friends who escaped the fire, others have moved to the suburbs of the city and are camping on the ground. In the business section of Hot Springs are piled the few belongings that were saved from the various business houses and homes. These goods are being guarded. Five business blocks are included in the fifty the flames consumed.

The fire originated on Church street, three blocks east of the government reservation and near the army and navy hospital. It swept southeast away from the hospital and reservation for an hour when the rising wind shifted in direction and carried it again in the direction of the business section, taking the public utilities plant and every business structure on Melvern avenue. Crossing Malvern avenue the fire swept south, burning the Ozark sanitarium and beautiful high school building when the shifting wind current again carried the flames to Quachita avenue, sweeping a wide pathway, destroying the Garland county court house and for a time seriously threatening to turn back in its path and sweep down the main business section of Central and Qauchita avenue.

The following are some of the principal buildings destroyed within a short space of two and a half hours: Park hotel; Water, Light and Gas plants; Ozark Sanitarium; high school building; Central Methodist church; Garland County Court house; Moody hotel; Sigler apartments; Iron Mountain station and shops; Bijou rink and unknown number of business blocks, smaller business buildings and residences, many of them in a palatial residence section.

CARDINAL TUTO DEAD

Fails to Rally from an Operation Performed for Appendicitis.

ROME — Cardinal Joseph Calasaotius Vives y Tuto, prefect of the congregation for religious affairs, is dead. He failed to rally from a recent operation for appendicitis.

Cardinal Tuto was born at San Andres de Llevaneras, diocese of Barcelona, in 1854. He was created and proclaimed cardinal June, 19, 1899. Early this summer it was reported he had become insane, but later physicians diagnosed his case as neurasthenia and he retired to a monastery.

NEW YORK—After a most vicious battle in which Al Palzer, the Iowa heavyweight, tried vainly to come back, Frank Moran of Pittsburgh knocked him out in the first five seconds of the seventh round as Palzer came out of his corner for that session. Moran swung a terrific right hander flush to the point of the jaw and Palzer, reeling for a moment, fell heavily on his face. Referee Roche had counted seven before Palzer moved. He vainly tried to arise on the count of nine but again tumbled to the floor in a helpless condition and was counted out.

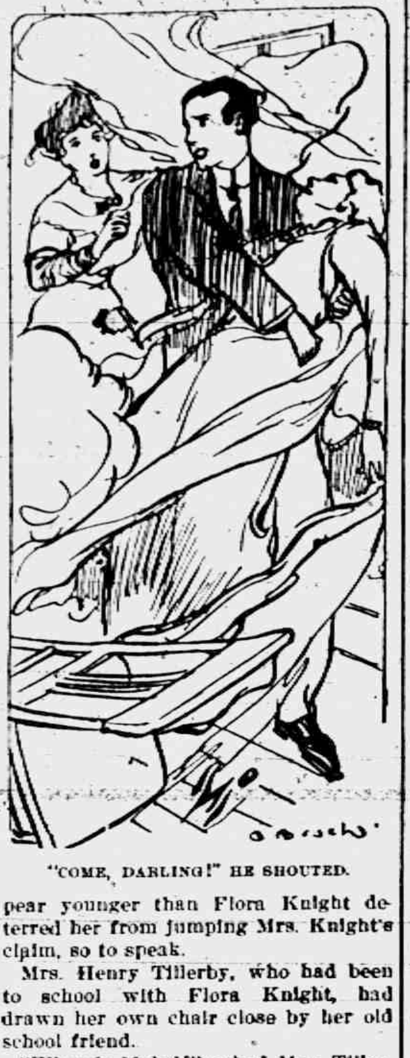
THROUGH FIRE

It Broke Her Will.

By CLARISSA MACKIE

The long piazza of the boarding house showed a row of rocking chairs swaying gently to and fro. Under the spreading maples on the lawn were gay hammocks and more rocking chairs, and down on the sunny tennis court white clad forms darted after dying balls.

Old Mrs. Knight occupied the most comfortable chair. It was hers by tacit acknowledgment after many seasons' occupancy, but it was generally understood that when Mrs. Knight passed beyond the realm of summer boarding houses the chair of state would be filled by that second in rank of boarders, Mrs. Henry Tillerby. Mrs. Tillerby had grown irascible in the waiting for the chair, and nothing save her undying determination to appear younger than Flora Knight deterred her from jumping Mrs. Knight's claim, so to speak.



"COME, DARLING!" HE SHOUTED.

Mrs. Henry Tillerby, who had been to school with Flora Knight, had drawn her own chair close by her old school friend.

"Where's Mabel?" asked Mrs. Tillerby, with her little black eyes fixed on Mabel Knight's graceful form down there on the tennis court.

"In her room reading a good book," retorted Flora Knight tartly.

Mrs. Tillerby shook like a strawberry jelly.

"It's a book on lawn tennis or love," she tittered.

"I think my granddaughter is quite capable of taking care of her own affairs, Mrs. Tillerby," she said icily.

"She is old enough to, certainly," retorted Mrs. Tillerby, who had two unmarried daughters much older than pretty Mabel.

Mrs. Knight had closed her eyes by this time and was to all appearances taking a little nap. But Mrs. Tillerby, who had known Flora Knight all her life, went on talking in her deep contralto, relating bits of boarding house gossip, criticising the food and the service and otherwise acting in a way befitting the occupant of the second floor front chamber of Rose Hall.

Suddenly light feet ran up the side steps of the west piazza, where the two old ladies sat, and a musical voice called a laughing farewell to somebody in white flannels, who disappeared down the pine walk toward the adjacent estate.

"Well, granny, dear," cried Mabel, seating herself on the top step, "here I am! Now, don't pretend you are asleep, because I can see just a speck of little black eye peeping out. There, that's better!" as Mrs. Knight's eyes popped wide open and she sat up with a well simulated air of surprise.

"Have I been asleep, Ann?" she asked Mrs. Tillerby. "I declare your voice is so soothing. Just like one of Parson's Moore's sermons—it sends me off to sleep!"

Mrs. Tillerby flushed resentfully, but before her lips could frame a proper retort Mabel had remembered something.

"Oh, Mrs. Tillerby, Lucy asked me to tell you that she has just returned from a drive with Mr. Fenwick, and that she has something very important to tell you if you will go to her room."

"Ah, just as I expected! The dear girl—well, it's in the air, I do believe!" twittered Mrs. Tillerby as she rose ponderously from her chair and waddled around to the front door.

"Sit down here, Mabel," said Mrs. Knight with a sudden change of tone that the girl instantly noticed, for all the color and sparkle went out of her face, but her gray eyes were strangely soft and luminous.

"Yes, granny?" she asked when she was seated beside the old lady.

"You have been playing tennis with that young Ashmore?"

"Why—yes, granny, dear, I told you I was going to."

"And I told you it was in direct opposition to my wishes."

"But, granny, why do you care? He—he is very nice," faltered Mabel.

"He is a nobody, only private secretary to Senator Bray. There's George Fenwick ready to jump if you only give him the opportunity."

"Do you mean that you would rather I married George Fenwick for his money than—than Dick Ashmore, because I love him?" flared Mabel.

"Love him, do you?" quavered Mrs. Knight wrathfully. "Marry him, then, and go to the poorhouse, for you will never get one penny of my money!" She arose and thumped her cane angrily on the floor.

Tears came to Mabel's lovely eyes, but she winked them away from the long, jetty lashes, and when she spoke her voice was so like that of her dead father that Flora Knight was shaken to the soul.

"Very well, grandmother, I will respect your wishes until your stay at Rose Hall is ended, but then I will leave you and go away, because I love Dick and I shall marry him."

"And leave me all alone?" demanded Mrs. Knight in an odd tone.

"You cannot miss me, granny, because you are rich, and money will make up to you for lack of love and everything. It's what you want me to throw away! Cousin Susie will be glad to come."

"I dare say she will. She's been pulling wires to that end for five years," snapped Mrs. Knight crossly. "Remember, Mabel, don't let that young man come near me. I shall certainly be rude to him!"

"I am quite sure he will not intrude, grandmother," said Mabel coldly, and she did not turn her head as the old lady pattered away toward the dining room, for the luncheon bell was sounding.

Luncheon over, the older boarders scattered to their rooms for the midday siesta, while the young people started on a long talked of tramp up East mountain. Mabel Knight did not go. She sat in her room and read and dreamed until a sharp cry echoed through the house, a woman's shrill cry of alarm.

"Fire! Fire! Fire!"

Mabel leaped to the door and found the hall filled with a thick yellow smoke. The cook was crying hysterically in the hall below, and doors were popping open, and other shrill feminine voices were added to the alarm.

Mabel went to her grandmother's room and found it empty. She was relieved, because she thought Mrs. Knight was safely out of danger on the front piazza.

So, picking up her own valuables and her grandmother's leather traveling box that contained precious belongings, Mabel hurried downstairs after knocking at the different closed doors along the hall.

Half choking and gasping for breath, she fought her way down to the piazza to find that among all the other boarders two were missing. No one had seen Mrs. Knight or Mrs. Tillerby since luncheon.

Mabel thrust her bundles into somebody's trembling hands and dashed back to the house.

"I must get grandmother!" she called back. And there was no one to stop her going, for the only man left on the place had gone to ring the village fire alarm, and Mrs. Brownlee had gone over to Brookedge station to meet some expected guests.

Smoke was pouring from the rear of the big white house, and every door and window belched forth yellow clouds.

Mabel groped her way into the hall, crept upstairs on her hands and knees and so along to Mrs. Knight's room. Here she found the valiant old lady holding a wet towel before her face while she sought frantically through drawers and closets for something.

"Come, granny; come! I will carry you down!" cried Mabel, tugging at her arm.

"Go away, do!" grumbled Mrs. Knight from her muffled lips. "I'm trying to find Winkie's leash. The poor darling is frightened to death!" Mabel saw that Granny's pet Pomeranian was shivering under her arm.

"Oh, granny; take him as he is. Don't wait. Why, you will be burned to death!" begged the girl.

"Go yourself. Nobody cares if I do burn up!" retorted granny obstinately, but she caught her breath sharply.

A big form dashed into the room and gathered granny in his strong arms, Winkie and all.

"Come, darling!" he shouted, and he wasn't talking to granny, either. Mabel followed, only pausing to help poor Mrs. Tillerby down the stairs.

An hour afterward it was all over. The fire was confined to the kitchen, and the boarders gathered on the grass and voted to camp out there under the maples until the house should be free from smoke once more.

Dick Ashmore, who had carried off granny against her strong wishes, continued to go to and fro, bringing various comforts from their room, until Mrs. Knight laid a trembling hand on his sooty shirt sleeve.

"Do stop this running about, Mr.—er, Dick," she said sharply. "You remind me so much of Mabel's father." She hesitated and coughed. "Mabel's been telling me some things, and somehow I'd rather like to have a masterful man about, and, well, Mabel, you need not hug me to death, and I declare, Dick Ashmore, I do believe you kissed me, sir! Everybody's looking on too. Well, I suppose we might as well announce the engagement that way!"

And strong willed granny stroked Winkie and rocked contentedly in her own chair, which Dick had brought from the piazza.

The End of the Earth.

The ancient Persians believed in the renovation of the earth. A comet in the course of its revolutions will strike the earth and set it on fire. Rivers of molten metals will float down the mountains and deluge the valleys. All men must pass through these streams. The good will find them like baths of milk. The evil will find them like torrents of lava, but they will be purified thereby and finally will join the good upon the new earth and sing praises to the eternal source of all. This belief was held also among the American Indians and the Hindus. The Egyptians believed that the earth would be destroyed by fire and water. The Chaldeans said that when all the planets met in the sign of Capricorn the earth would be overwhelmed with a deluge of water, and whenever they all met in Cancer it would be consumed by fire.

Sheets in Scotland.

The custom of sleeping in one large sheet, doubled at the foot, seems to have been peculiar to Scotland and to have made special impression on more than one English traveler. Fynes Moryson, writing in 1598, says, "They used but one sheet, open at the sides and top, but closed at the feet and so doubled," and John Ray, the naturalist, who visited Scotland about 1662, remarked that "it is the manner in some places there to lay on but one sheet as large as two, turned up from the feet upward." The practice, I imagine, was continued until recent times, and I have, when a boy, slept in a sheet of the kind. Such pieces of linen were termed "sheets," par excellence, the single coverings which are now used being called "half sheets."—London Tatler.

TARIFF BILL PASSED BY SENATE 44 TO 37

Sent Back to Lower House

The Democratic Tariff revision bill passed the senate at 5:43 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, amid a burst of applause from the galleries. Its passage was attended with surprise in the final moments of the voting, when Senator LaFollette, Republican cast his vote with the Democrats and was joined a few moments later by Senator Poindexter, Progressive. The vote on the bill stood 44 to 37.

President Wilson expessed great gratification over the end of the long struggle in the Senate. Senator Simmons, chairman of the finance committee, predicted that its passage would bring immediate stimulus to business of the country.

Last night Senator La Follette had a few words to say of his vote, after many Democratic senators had surrounded his desk and shook him by the hand.

"I realize what I did was a political sacrifice," he said, "but that within me compelled me to vote for the bill. The tariff act of 1909 was but little short of a crime. The bill passed today is not a Democratic measure, but is a protective measure. Every change made by the finance committee was made by way of adjustment to a protective basis, except such as free wool and free sugar, which were determined upon out side. They treated the agricultural schedule, I regret to say, on a free trade basis, and I would have retained more duty on cutlery and some other articles on which there is no date in order to be sure not to ruin American production. Give the Democrats time and and they will put everything on a free trade basis, but they have not done it in this bill."

Senator Poindexter said of his vote;

THE POINDEXTER VOTE

"I voted for the senate tarfif bill because it is, as a whole, a better bill than the Payne-Aldrich law, now in force. Furthermore, it contains an income tax which we have been trying to get for 20 years. Some of its rates are too high and some are too low—but its general average on manufactures is high enough. Its classification is far from scientific, but not more so than the existing law."

When the vote had been announced, Senator Gallinger, of New Hampshire, the leader of the minority, was recognized and congratulated Senator Simmons for his "courteous, kindly and considerate manner' in the conduct of the debate. He said he knew of no tariff fight characterized by such good feeling throughout, and attribute it to the personality of Senator Simmons.

"The bill itself is bad," he said, "but its management has been in every way creditable to the majority and eminently fair to the minority."

Senator Simmons expressed his appreciation.

Washington, Sept. 20.—The tariff bill as it passed the senate retained the principal house provisions, but revised other rates still farther downward. The average ad valorem rate in the bill now is approximately 26 per cent, a decrease of 28 per cent from existing rates and nearly four per cent lower than the rates of house bill.

The senate's additions to the house free list, with 1912 imports as a basis, will cost the government more than $11,000,000, but, by adding a tax of one tenth of one cent a pound on bananas, restoring the requirement of a full internal revenue tax of $1.10 a gallon on brandies used to fortify wines and by increasing the surtax rates on largest incomes, senate leaders believe they have provided an actual increase. That is a point disputed by Representative Underwood, majority leader of the house.

RAILROAD SLAUGHTER MUST STOP

Washington, Sept 9.—Charles G. McChord, member of the interstate commerce commission, who took charge of the investigation of the wreck near North Haven on the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, said:

"This slaughter by the railroads must stop, and we are going to see that something comes out of this wreck besides publicity. As one of the first steps in this general inquiry the interstate commerce commission called on the Pullman company to submit a statement showing the number of cars of wooden and steel construction in its entire service."

A HORRIBLE DEATH

While Riding on a Freight Through Lenawee Junction Monday

ROBT. KANE OF ADRIAN WAS CRUSHED BENEATH 60 TONS OF STEEL

We clip the following from the Adrian Telegram, as it is of especial interest to Tecumseh people, Mr. Kane being a brother-in-law of Mrs. Harold Anderson.

Robert Kane, an Adrian resident with family living on James street, met a horrible death at Lenawee Junction Monday night when he was caught beneath 60 tons of steel in a gondola car on the Lake Shore Road. Kane was riding in the car, apparently crouching behind the steel, when the impact of a switching engine caused the weight of the mass to settle upon him.

According to the members of the train crew, Kane lived but 17 minutes after the accident, during which time they made frantic but vain efforts to dislodge the load from his body. So difficult was the task that the car was brought to Adrian, and it was only after more than half an hour's maneuvering that a switch engine bumping from the opposite end of the car allowing the rescuers to lift out the dead body.

That death was caused by suffocation from the deadly grip of the heavy mass was evidenced from the condition of the body. It was not mangled, and but three ribs were found broken in the post mortem examination.

Kane is believed to have boarded the train at Lenawee Junction. His presence was not known to the train crew until they heard his agonized cries.

The train on which the accident happened is a local freight due in Adrian at 11:40 a. m. That day it was late, reaching Lenawee Junction shortly after 6 o'clock. The car of steel was one of those which was being bumped around in the switching process.

It was at 6:55 that Kane's cries were heard by the crew. For 17 minutes they worked bravely to throw off by hand the load which was crushing him. Then death came to the imprisoned man before their efforts had even begun to tell.

The car was brought immediately to Adrian and it was nearly 8:30 before a switch engine finally drove back the steel and freed the body. It was taken in Mott's ambulance to the undertaking rooms.

Where Kane came from on his way to Adrian is not known. He had worked at various employments this summer and when last heard from was in Swanton, O., where he was said to be firing an engine for Lee Wade, an Adrian man who is operating a merry-go-round in Ohio towns.

He leaves a widow living at 2 James street and two children, Ruth, aged 5, and Elsie aged 3. He had lived here for several years and worked at various jobs in the city, being at one time an employee in the Lake Shore round house. He was about 35 years old.

The funeral was held from Mott's undertaking parlors Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock with interment at Oakwood.

Mrs Bert Price and daughter, Ramona of Jackson visited her parents from Tuesday until today.

The remains of Mrs. Smith Travers arrived here from Toledo this morning, and were taken immediately to Macon where the funeral was held at 11 o'clock. The deceased was for many years a Macon resident, going to Toledo upon the death of her husband to live with her son. She was 80 years of age.

Lengthening Human Life.

In 1866 the public health conditions of New York were in so low a state that the average length of life of the inhabitants was 30 years. In 1912 these conditions had been improved so that the average length of life was 66 years. Thus the value of human life, reckoned in terms of time alone, had more than doubled in less than half a century.—Century Magazine.

A FAREWELL VISIT.

Miss Ruth Whitney left today for Des Moines, Iowa. She goes to attend the Central University some twenty miles from Des Moines, to specialize in music.

On Wednesday evening a party of 22 young people invaded the Methodist parsonage, while the little lady was at prayer meeting and took possession.

Imagine her surprise when she turned on the light to find the room full of her friends who had come to pay her a farewell visit. The hours passed swiftly with music, games and fun generally and refreshments of ice cream, cake and wafers were served. About midnight with parting good wishes the company departed.

MISS M. FOSTER

MARRIED 25 YEARS.

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Heesen had been married 25 years yesterday and that day is also Mrs. Heesen's birthday. The fact became known among their friends and thirty-five of them invaded the Heesen residence on Wednesday evening in Mr. and Mrs. Heesen's absence and made themselves at home.

The bride and groom of 25 years were giving themselves a little celebration driving around town and taking in the shows so did not come home very early and when they did, were certainly a surprised couple.

The company amused themselves playing "63" and after the arrival home of the Heesens a splendid lunch was served. As a souvenir of the visit, a beautiful electric reading lamp was presented Mr. and Mrs. Heesen.

HENDERSHOTT—FERGUSON

The many friends of the contracting parties will be interested to hear of the marriage of Miss Margaret Ferguson and Ray Hendershott, which ceremony was performed by the Methodist minister at Clinton last Saturday. Miss Ferguson has lived here nearly all her life going to the home of her uncle, Noah Wood, in Raisin Valley when the home was broken up here. A brother Lee Ferguson still lives in the village. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs John Hendershott living in Macon township and is a graduate of the Tecumseh high school. Their many friends wish them long life and prosperity.

Traveling Salesman Ill

Horton Longyear, traveling for Peck & Hill, furniture dealers of Chicago, was taken very sick between Adrian and Tecumseh on the D. T. & M. west bound train yesterday morning, becoming unconscious before the train reached this station. Service's ambulance was called and the sick man taken to the Hotel Barrett where Dr. Briegal attended him.

Guy Belding, who had known the gentleman for the past ten years, telegraphed Mrs. Longyear at Lansing and she arrived on the evening train. She found Mr. Longyear much better and he was able to accompany her home this morning.

Auto Burned.

While near the Lamkin farm in Newburg Wednesday evening, Richard Meade's 1912 Mitchell caught fire and was soon a total wreck. He has been having trouble for a couple of weeks with a short circuit in the electric wiring. The fire must have been caused by this together with a leak in the gasoline tank.

Mr. Meade was slightly burned in trying to rescue his gun which lay in the bottom of the car. The other occupants were uninjured.

The car cost $2600, was a 6 cylinder, 7 passenger Mitchell and a beauty. Fortunately Mr. Mead carried $1500 insurance on the machine.

SCAFFOLDING BROKE

Thomas Kelley has been fixing over the barn on his place in town. Yesterday afternoon, his son-in-law, Wesley Handy, and Louis Hiler climbed with him up on a scaffolding to put on a new roof. The scaffolding broke letting all three down. Mr. Hiler caught onto some of the timbers so he was not hurt, but Mr. Handy and Mr. Kelley were not so fortunate. The former landed on his feet, falling over backward with his father-in-law on top of him. Handy's feet are pretty sore but the owner of the property is hurt the worst. He was carried into the house and Dr. Briegel was called. One arm is broken at the wrist, both bones being fractured. The muscles at the shoulder were wrenched also, and this morning the patient is in much pain. Dr. Briegel said that he is getting along all right and will be at work again as soon as the bones knit.

Have Learned Nothing of Dreams.

Dr. W. E. Scripture of New York says that ambidextrous persons never dream, while right-handed persons dream with the right hemisphere of the brain, because they use the left brain lobe for conscious thinking. Comparatively speaking, he said, modern scientists know as little about dreams as man did when the first sleeper had his first dream.

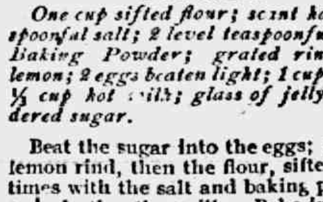
Jelly Roll Recipe

Only Two Eggs Required

By Mrs. Janet McKenzie Hill, Editor of the Boston Cooking School Magazine

This Jelly Roll is fast becoming very popular on account of the way it keeps fresh. With proper handling it should keep fresh a whole week, providing it isn't eaten up in the meantime, for it is every bit as good as it looks. 33



K C Jelly Roll

One cup sifted flour; scant half teaspoonful salt; 2 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder; grated rind of 1 lemon; 2 eggs beaten light; 1 cup sugar; ½ cup hot milk; glass of jelly; powdered sugar.

Beat the sugar into the eggs; add the lemon rind, then the flour, sifted three times with the salt and baking powder; and, lastly, the milk. Bake in a buttered dripping pan; turn out on a damp cloth, trim off the crisp edges; spread with jelly and turn over and over into a roll while still warm. Dredge the top with powdered sugar.

Hot milk used in the jelly roll enables it to be rolled without danger of cracking. Have the milk scalding hot, also be careful to have the eggs and sugar beaten together until very light and creamy. Bake in a moderate oven.

K C Jelly Roll is illustrated on page thirty-two of the new and handsomely illustrated 64-page K C Cook's Book, which may be secured free by sending the certificate packed in every 25-cent can of K C Baking Powder to the JAQUES MFG. Co., Chicago, Ill.

Deering Corn Harvester.

Will do nearly as much work in a day as eight men.

Has both ball and roller bearings with self-aligning boxes.

The power is distributed direct, eliminating undue strain and lessening the draft.

Wheels are of the same height, which lessens side draft, neither wheel runs on the stubble, which is left clean and even.

Lightness of draft is secured as the corn is bound lying down like a grain binder, thus saving the power required in elevating as on other binders.

The only corn binder that will work equally as well in tall or short corn, as there is 21 inches of adjustment for the band, 8 inches in shifting the binder, 13 inches in adjusting the butt adjuster. Compare with other binders which have an 8-inch raise of a pan, which when raised the corn will clog.

The balance wheel allows the binder to run steady when cutting hill corn.

Mail that Spread—Letters of love and devotion were truly coated with honey while "duns" were relieved of their biting sarcasm at the postoffice Tuesday, when a jar of strained honey, shipped by parcel post, became opened and spread itself over the other mail in the sack. Letters and packages stuck together, and the clerks had to shave the faces of many envelopes before the addresses could be deciphered on account of the sweet but opaque coating. It was another "horror of the system," many of which have bothered the postal clerks since Uncle Sam allowed everybody to mail produce in the same class with wedding announcements.—Adrian Telegram.

The season of summer drowning is past, and now it is open season for toadstool victims. There are a lot of perfectly reliable scientific rules of telling whether a toadstool is poisonous or not, but the only trouble is that nobody but a professor of botany can safely apply these rules. There is just one rule for the ordinary person, which is this: Don't eat any kind of fungus unless you know absolutely by experience that it is good. If you have eaten it before and lived or if your friends have eaten it and are still alive, you are safe: otherwise you take your chances. Don't try to figure it out from a book. MASONIC BANQUET.

TECUMSEH LODGE NO. 42, R. A. M. ENTERTAINS VISITING MASONS.

Tecumseh Chapter No. 42 R. A. M. entertained visiting Masons from Adrian, Ann Arbor, Clinton, Manchester and Morenci last evening.

King Cyrus Chapter of Detroit was expected to be here but word was received Wednesday morning that they could not come and as everything had been arranged for the banquet the committee in charge had to make some quick changes in their plans. Invitations were hurridly sent out and as a result about 40 came from Adrian, 23 from Ann Arbor, 20 from Clinton, 12 from Manchester and 2 from Morenci.

The banquet was held at 5:30 p. m. in the dining room at Masonic Temple. The tables were beautifully decorated with autumn flowers and covers were laid for 96, two tables being seated. A chicken pie dinner was served, Mrs. Kenrick catering.

After the banquet a program was carried out in the lodge room. John Shull acted as toastmaster and presided in a most pleasing manner with his funny stories and witty introductions.

The first speaker was G. Roscoe Swift, past grand master of the grand lodge. His address was fine. Next to respond was Arthur Brown of Ann Arbor whose address was ably given and enjoyed by all. He took the occasion to compliment the people of Tecumseh on their fine town and was delighted with its beauty and cleanliness. Mr. Brown was followed by Matt Blosser of Manchester and Rev. Hewitt of Tecumseh, the latter's remarks being exceptionally fine.

After the program, work in the Royal Arch degree was conferred upon the following candidates: Chas. Allen, Clinton; Lester Rogers, Tecumseh, and Guy Davidson, Detroit. Joseph Smith acted as high priest and, notwithstanding the fact that this degree had not been conferred since last April, it passed off in a most pleasing manner.

Much credit is due to A. S. Van Winkle, the present high priest, for the success of the evening as he has been busy for the last two weeks making the necessary arrangements.

Worthy of the notice is the fact that there were 15 high priests and past high priests of Chapters present. It was an event long to be remembered by Tecumseh Chapter being one of the largest in point of attendance ever held. Most of the out of town guests made the trip to Tecumseh by auto. Harry Miller coming from Napoleon, Ohio, about 50 miles.

JOHN BASSETT MOORE

White House Denies the Rumor That He Is About to Retire.

© 1913, by American Press Association.

The White House denied emphatically that John Bassett Moore, counselor of the state department and regarded as America's foremost authority on international law and diplomatic precedents, is to resign. The president said there was no truth in the report. The rumors of his resignation arose when he left Washington for a month's vacation. Mr. Moore served the Taft administration as counselor, and it was only after President Wilson brought the strongest kind of personal pressure to bear did he consent to accept the post under the new regime.

Uses For Old British Uniforms.

Black cloth clothes purchased by secondhand dealers, provided they are too far gone to be "revived," are sent to France, Russia and Poland to be made into caps, which the working people of these countries wear. The castoff red coats of the British soldiers almost all go to Holland, for in that damp country the people have a notion that red cloth keeps off rheumatism. Therefore, all careful Dutchmen of the laboring classes wear red cloth waistcoats next their skin. These are made by cutting off the sleeves of the British soldiers' red coats and altering the shape a little. The showy uniforms of the guards and the full dress liveries of the lord mayor's footmen and the royal servants come into the hands of the old clothes dealers and go chiefly to the south coast of Africa, where they are sold to the native chiefs. Travelers are sometimes amused at being received in full state by a swarthy chief on his throne dressed out in footman's livery or a rifleman's uniform.—London Answers.

The Country Boy's Creed.

"I believe that the country, which God made, is more beautiful than the city, which man made; that life out of doors and in touch with the earth is the natural life of man. I believe that work is work wherever we find it, but that work with nature is more inspiring than work with the most intricate machinery. I believe that the dignity of labor depends, not on what you do, but on how you do it; that opportunity comes to a boy on the farm as often as to the boy in the city; that life is larger and freer and happier on the farm than in town; that my success depends, not upon my location, but upon myself; not upon my dreams, but upon what I actually do; not upon luck, but upon pluck. I believe in working when you work and in playing when you play and in giving and demanding a square deal in every act of life."—Suburban Life.

Conserve Your Steam.

A man who never amounted to much once got a job running the engine of a sawmill. He was greatly impressed with the importance of his position and wanted every one to know that he was the man who made all the wheels go round. The first morning he steamed up the engine he jerked the whistle wide open and made the welkin ring for miles around, saying to himself as the echoes bounced over the hills, "I am certainly the big noise in this part of the country." Just then the foreman started the force on a big day's work and discovered that there was not enough steam left to start the machinery. He of the big noise was promptly canned, and the job was given to a hole. Moral.—You can't saw wood if you use all the steam blowing your whistle.—Exchange.

Poe's Airship Hoax.

Edgar Allen Poe was a pioneer in the art of aerial hoaxing. In 1844 the New York Sun announced one morning: "Astounding news! Atlantic crossed in three days! Triumph of Mr. Monck Mason's flying machine!" Folks rushed for the paper, and found therein a long and detailed account of the crossing of the Atlantic in a steerable balloon by Mr. Monck Mason, Harrison Ainsworth and four others. The balloon was minutely described, long extracts were printed from a diary which Harrison Ainsworth was supposed to have kept on the way, and the whole story had such a touch of truth that it took some days for New Yorkers to realize how completely they had been hoaxed.—London Chronicle.

Good Sitters.

Turkish women are said to have one accomplishment in which they excel the women of all other nationalities. They know how to sit. Hester Donaldson Jenkins calls attention to the fact that the Turkish verb to sit is used where occidentals would use to live, or stay, or visit. To the question, "Where are you living?" one gets the reply, "I am sitting in Stamboul." Or to the question, "Are you married?" the answer will be, "No, I am sitting at home." And when they sit they sit quietly, "in the perfect repose of a sleeping cat." They don't have to keep their hands busy. They don't crochet or knit. They just sit.

For The Nervous Woman,

Or the woman who experiences hot flashes nothing is so good to soothe, quiet and calm the nervous system as a pure glyceric extract of native medical plants, and made without alcohol, which has been sold by druggists for the past forty years, and most favorably known as Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription. In younger years some women suffer from dizziness, or fainting spells, hysteria, headache, bearing-down feelings and pain. All these symptoms of irregularity and female disturbance are relieved by the use of this famous "Prescription" of Doctor Pierce.

As a powerful, invigorating tonic "Favorite Prescription" imparts strength to the whole system, and in particular to the organs distinctly feminine. For over-worked, "worn-out," "run-down," debilitated teachers, milliners, dressmakers, seamstresses, "shop-girls," house-keepers, nursing mothers, and feeble women generally, it is an excellent appetizing cordial and restorative tonic.

MRS. McDONALD.

"My disease was called retroversion," writes MRS. LYDIA McDONALD, of Mecosta, Mich., Route 1. "I had nervous chills and numb spells and they would leave me very weak. Then I had inflammation and the doctor said I had a floating kidney. I suffered seven months with our family physician. He said I would have to have an operation. Then I stopped taking his medicine. After taking three bottles of Dr. Pierce's medicines I have not had any nervous chills or weak spells. I am better than for years.

My daughter is now taking the 'Prescription' and Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, also the 'Pellets' for nervousness and weak, tired feeling. These remedies have helped her ever so much in a short time. We have great faith in your medicines for female troubles."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets induce mild natural bowel movement.

Curves in Japanese Roofs.

Western architects are often puzzled by the origin of the Japanese roof curve and the ease with which Japanese carpenters can so accurately construct what their architects design. The curve of a Japanese temple roof is about as difficult a line to draw as man has contrived, but how the Japanese artists themselves succeed so well in reproducing it has never been explained. Modern artists and writers see in these unique and beautiful curves a resemblance to the sagging outlines of the primitive tents used ages ago by the forefathers of the Japanese race, who dwelt on the burning plains of China, but there does not appear to be any evidence to support such a conclusion. The curve is a catenary, the most beautiful perhaps of all natural curves, formed by gravitation when a chain or cord is suspended between two points.—London Globe.

Steer Clear of the Police.

One thing that convicts careless automobile drivers beyond all else, says the New York Times, is that none of them ever runs down a traffic patrolman. Hundreds and hundreds of bluecoats are on crossing duty in New York every day of the year, and if they were not protected by their uniform their calling would be extra hazardous. They stand in what for civilians would be the most dangerous positions conceivable—right in the middle of the tide of traffic, with automobiles and motorcycles and other vehicles passing them by dozens, scores, hundreds, thousands, and on holidays tens of thousands. There is nothing to prevent any traffic policeman from being crushed at any moment of his day's work. No matter how stout he may be, his bulk could not stop an automobile. Yet the significant fact remains that he is not run down.

Bulwer's Deafness.

If Byron was possessed of an enormous vanity Sir Edward Bulwer-Lytton was quite his equal in that respect. There was a medium by the name of Home, who in the course of an eventful life held spiritualistic meetings in the United States, England and on the continent of Europe; was expelled from Rome as a sorcerer; married twice, each time to a Russian lady of rank, and published various books. Home was particularly disliked by Charles Dickens, who applied to him all the hard names of which he could think. Mr. Bigelow once remarked to Dickens that Bulwer had faith in the medium. "Oh, yes," Dickens replied, "but you see Bulwer is deaf and does not like to have it remarked; so Home would say, 'Do you hear those raps?' and Bulwer would say, 'Oh, yes, I heard them perfectly.' "—Bookman.

First British Mounted Police.

When the departure of the Roman legions from Britain, as Tennyson tells us, left men to do about as they pleased in the absence of any adequate government, the roads were filled with robbery, and everywhere outside of walled towns men generally adopted the robbers' simple plan, "That they should take who have the power and they should keep who can." Therefore, King Arthur gathered men of noble instincts about his round table and made them knights to go forth, not to conquer territory or markets or win spoils, but to redress wrongs, to defend the weak, especially womanhood, in the spirit of the cross. They were "knights without fear and without reproach" who took King Arthur's oath.—Christian Herald.

An Anniversary.

A man may be rough looking and yet have a touch of sentiment about him.

A ragged, ill kept looking man appeared at the door of a Providence woman's home, and in a pleading tone asked:

"Have you a piece of cake, lady, to give a poor man who hasn't had a bite for two days?"

"Cake?" echoed the woman in surprise. "Isn't bread good enough for you?"

"Ordinarily, yes, ma'am. But this is my birthday," explained the tramp.—Harper's Magazine.

A Man's Necktie.

Ever since a regiment of Crotian soldiers marched into Paris three centuries ago with their necks swathed in silk, and Louis XIV., delighted at their appearance, decided to adopt the fashion himself, the cravat in its various changing forms has played an important part in the attire of men. And so reliable is it supposed to be as an index to its wearer's personal characteristics that Buffon, the French savant, was once led to remark, "The cravat makes the man."

THE CHEERFUL SOUL.

They tell you that habit reconciles you in time to many unwelcome things. Let us not trust to this alone. Custom, indeed, sweetens the rugged lot when the cheerful soul is in it. It does but embitter it the more when the soul stays out of it.—James Martineau.

A Happy Day Cottage

A Very Natural Mistake.

By MARGARET B. CONWAY

"You can't miss it, Nell," called Mrs. Beekman as the big motorcar drew away from the curb. "The sign is over the porch, 'Happy Day Cottage,' and if you arrive first just go ahead and start the dinner, will you? Jackman said the supplies would be waiting there. Goodby. Sorry you won't come with us."

It was 11 o'clock when Nell reached Silver Lake. The road was an unfamiliar one, for she had never been to the little resort before. It was late September, and most of the cottages edging the lake were untenanted, but Happy Day Cottage was at the very edge of the short road, and Nell left her car in the shade of the trees and went up on to the little rustic porch.

The door was locked, and it was evident that she was the first on the scene. She determined to go ahead and prepare dinner for the hungry motorists, for it had been agreed that the women of the party were to do the cooking.

Around to the back door went Nell, her arms burdened with luscious peaches she had found in town, and a bottle of cream, which delicacy she was certain Mrs. Beekman would forget.

The back door was unlatched, and Miss Gaines stepped into the little kitchen and found a grocer's basket heaped with packages and tins. She hung her hat and cloak in the little passageway and pinned a convenient towel over her linen gown in lieu of an apron, and set to work to evolve a meal from the contents of the basket.

SHE STOPPED SHORT AND STARED.

There were bread and butter, cereals, flour, eggs, sugar, coffee, tinned meats and fish, vegetables and, last of all, a torn bit of paper on which was scrawled in pencil:

"The stake is in the refrijarater."

And in a tiny ice filled box in the pantry Nell found a juicy sirloin steak—about large enough for two people! Where were the other hungry six to come in?

Nell shrugged her shoulders and set the sardines and tinned salmon aside.

Nell Gaines was an excellent cook. Deftly she flew here and there, making herself quite at home.

When everything was ready Nell went into the living room and sat down by the window.

Her eyes became accustomed to the cool dimness of the little room, and she noted with growing surprise that it was rather disorderly. Pipes and tobacco littered a smoking stand, books and magazines were heaped on chairs and tables, a tennis racket lay on a window seat and an artist's easel and painting kit cumbered another corner. A pair of masculine slippers stood invitingly before the empty fireplace.

There was a sound from the kitchen and Nell hastened there, flushed and lovely with the anticipation of the general surprise when they should find dinner in readiness.

She stopped short and stared.

Framed in the open window, with his elbows on the sill, was a perfect giant of a young man, attractively homely as to features, with steady gray eyes and stubby brown hair. His face was tanned to a warm brown and his hands and arms above his elbows, where his shirt sleeves were rolled up, were the same golden tan.

So Nell stared at him and he stared at Nell until her face flushed a deeper rose and she made another step forward.

"Good morning," she said rather coldly.

"Ah, good morning," he said, still staring.

"Mrs. Beekman has not arrived yet," she said significantly.

"Indeed?" he asked, with polite surprise in his tone.

"If you care to wait for Mrs. Beekman I am sure she will be along any moment now. I promised to have dinner ready, and there are some comfortable chairs on the front porch," said Nell, feeling rather frightened at the presence of this grave faced young man.

Perhaps he recognized her fear, for almost at once he lifted his head from his fists and went around the path to the front porch, the sun shining warmly down on his untidy thatch of hair.

"Oh, dear, I wish they would come! The dinner will be spoiled!" At that instant came the distant toot of a motor horn, and Nell fled back to the kitchen and prepared the coffee and broiled the steak.

Between whiles she laid another place at the table for the unexpected guest who was undoubtedly some friend of Mrs. Beekman's.

At the end of another fifteen minutes Nell went out and looked up and down the road, but there was no sign of motorcar or the expected party.

"I'm hungry as a bear," sighed Nell at last. "It's after 1 o'clock, and I've simply got to eat!"

Back in the kitchen she found the strange young man filling the doorway.

The absurd man is the one who never changes. Take our advice when you have a cough or a cold and try Allen's Cough Balsam. There is nothing more soothing, nothing that will bring greater relief. Contains no harmful ingredients. Used for many years with satisfaction and success. 25c., 50c. and $1.00 bottles.

"Excuse my sudden appearance," he said diffidently, "but I've been in the woods all morning, and I'm about starved. Can't we have something to eat without waiting for Mrs. Beekman and the rest of 'em?"

"Why, of course," said Nell slowly, and with a charming smile she admitted: "I'm hungry as a bear myself. That's a very small steak for nine people, isn't it?" she asked anxiously.

"I could eat every scrap myself," he announced as he neatly slipped the steak to a hot platter and carried it into the dining room.

"I forgot to introduce myself," he said pleasantly. "I am Delbridge Ellis."

"And I am Eleanor Gaines," said Nell, acknowledging his introduction with simple courtesy. "Will you have a cupful of coffee now, Mr. Ellis?"

"If you please," he said, passing her a plate containing the choicest portion of the steak.

"This is great," he said as he attacked the mealy baked potatoes. "I tell you keeping bachelor's hall isn't all it's cracked up to be. Why, I've eaten so many sardines that the junkman has to call once a week for the empty tins. That's almost a fact."

"Then you live around here, too?" asked Nell, with interest.

"Why, yes," he answered, with a puzzled glance at her. After that he was silent for a long time, but they fell to chatting on indifferent subjects, and by the time they had discussed the sliced peaches and the thick, yellow cream the time had passed so swiftly that Mr. Ellis announced reluctantly that it was 3 o'clock.

"Oh, dear! I am afraid something has happened!" cried Nell anxiously as they arose from the table.

"Pardon my asking the question, Miss Gaines, but will you please tell me who is Mrs. Beekman?"

Nell stared. "Who is Mrs. Beekman?" she repeated. "Why, don't you know?"

He shook his head, smiling in the particularly winning way that was very attractive to Nell Gaines. "I never heard of her before, and I am wondering why she has honored me by holding a sort of glorified picnic here in my bachelor quarters."

"In your bachelor quarters!" echoed Nell blankly. "Why, Mr. Ellis, surely you are mistaken. This is Mrs. Beekman's place, isn't it—Happy Day Cottage? Why, I read the sign over the porch."

"To be sure you did!" he exclaimed after a moment. "I see it all now. It was a very natural mistake to make, Miss Gaines, and I'm in a perfectly glorious dinner, but I'm afraid you have missed a delightful time with your friends. Please come around to the front porch with me."

A very bewildered Nell followed him around, and together they gazed at the little white painted sign nailed over the porch.

"Happy Day Cottage," it read, sure enough.

"You see, Miss Gaines, the village boys run down here out of season and amuse themselves by transferring the signs from one cottage to another, much to the indignation and confusion of the owners. This 'Happy Day' sign has been on my cottage for a week, and I let it stay. This is really Pine Cottage, and I saw that sign down on the big red cottage at the end of the row. Very likely your friends are down there feasting and wondering where you are. Shall we go down there now and explain?"

"Oh, let me think for a moment!" cried Nell.

The result of her cogitations, together with the sage advice of her host, was that she alone should drive up to the real Happy Day Cottage and say nothing of her odd adventure.

"You must let me clear away this wreckage," insisted Ellis as he helped Nell into her cloak. "I don't mind in the least, and I shall never forget my surprise at finding you here and the pleasant hours we have spent. Indeed, this shall always be to me Happy Day Cottage, for it marks a very happy day."

So Nell allowed him to put her into the runabout and gave him permission to call upon her some day, and she rolled slowly up to the real Happy Day Cottage, where the astounded motorists brought her remains of their cold dinner and marveled at her lack of appetite.

And the next year, after Nell had married Delbridge Ellis, they spent the summer at Silver Lake, and Ellis always called the place "Honeymoon Cottage," though the name over the door plainly said "Pine Cottage."

Captain Cook's Shilling.

Young James Cook, destined later to become England's greatest navigator, was at seventeen placed on probation in the shop of a small tradesman at Staithes, near Whitby. Seeing a new shilling in the till, the lad took it out, replacing it by one of his own. The master, missing the bright shilling, searched Cook's box and found it there, sent for a constable and for Cook's father and charged the boy with theft. The boy declared his innocence and explained. The master expressed his regret, and, although Cook's father and the master both pressed him to stay, his reply was: "No, father, I can't. Once a thief, always a thief. I must go." And he then went to Whitby and was there apprenticed to the sea.—"Captain James Cook."

"Chouse" Seymour.

There was an Irish actor named Seymour, who had the nickname "Chouse," which came from his unlucky slip in the passage in "Othello," "When I love thee not chaos is come again." It was in Cork that he made the break, and Cork did not forget. When he returned a year later the city was placarded by an artist in chalk, "Chouse has come again." He played Othello, and the gallery observed, "Deuced good: Chouse!" The dying Moor sat up, shook his fist in the direction of the observer and invited him, if he were a man, to come down and have his head punched.

HAPPENINGS IN OUR NEIGHBORING VILLAGES

Sheriff Renner of Monroe has two blood hounds added to his criminal catching force.

The Deerfield Times-Journal came out last week with a magazine section full of short stories. A very interesting addition.

Deerfield will have a waterworks system and ample fire protection if the plans under way are carried, after having been submitted to the property owners and voters of the village. Monday afternoon the Common Council met with President F. E. Hemenway and George Champe, Civil Engineer of Toledo present. Previous to the meeting, Mr. Champe in company with President Hemenway looked over the village, following which the meeting was held and it was decided to allow Mr. Champe to submit specifications and costs for laying mains throughout the village, installing a 50,000 gallon tank, a water supply that can be used for all domestic purposes and in case of fire have the mains and intakes so arranged that water can be pumped from the river for fire fighting. —Times-Journal.

A wail goes up from Deerfield for a shoe repair man? Pretty cold these mornings for your shoes to go unpatched.

Chicken fanciers of Blissfield are already arranging for their annual poultry show to be given some time next winter.

Senator Amberson states that there is considerable inquiry by residents of Lenawee county relative to the present status of the fish laws regarding the spearing of fish in the streams. He says he finds that it is unlawful to spear any kind of fish in the Raisin river within the county, but that carp mullet, suckers, red horse and grass pike may be speared in other streams. A local act passed some years ago makes it unlawful to spear in the Raisin river.—Blissfield Advance.

A quick verdict—Walter Beyers of Macon, whose trial was held before Justice Treat Wednesday, was found guilty by the jury on the evidence produced and was sentenced to pay a fine of $5 and costs amounting to $22. The jury was out only three minutes before a verdict had been reached. It was one of the quickest verdicts on record in Adrian justice courts —Fridays Adrian Telegram.

The county jail still houses thirteen prisoners. According to the statement of an authority than Sheriff Henig, however, there is not a person there who is at all superstitious. None leave very soon, so apparently the only way to "break the spell" is to find some more evil doers. Adrian Times.

Say, young man, yes and old man too, as you stand on the corner making impolite remarks about young girls as they pass by, do you realize that some other foul-mouthed puppy may be standing on the other corner making similaar remorks about your sister, daughter or mother? Never thought of it, did you? Treat every woman as a lady until you know she doesn't deserve it—then keep your mouth shut.—Clinton Local Good! Clinton is not alone.

The Detroit Free Press this morning has an item with a scare head, "Manchester faces serious epidemic, five cases of infantile paralysis reported," when there is not a case in Manchester nor within eight miles of here. There are two cases in the Bartlett family on the Cash farm south of Norvell and three cases in the Stockinger family on the Halladay farm Dr. Breakey of Ann Arbor investigated the cases yesterday which reported by L. Whitney Watkins which probably accounts for the Free Press getting mixed in the scare The Enterprise phoned to Mr. Watkins and to our physicians to be sure that it is safe in denying the report that there are any cases here. Mr. Watkins informs us that in his report he never mentioned Manchester, but stated exactly where the cases were located in Norvell. Dr. Breakey, asked how to prevent the disease, replied "swat the fly." The families where the disease is located will not be allowed to sell milk, or fruit as flies are liable to carry the germ.—Manchester Enterprise.

Weight Dead and Alive.

It is a very popular idea that a person when dead weighs heavier than when living. One reason that a dead body is thought to be heavier than a living one is probably this: In carrying a living person we have the center of gravity adapted by the person carried to suit the convenience of the carrier and maintained in a position as far as possible to fall within the base of his body. Again, the elasticity of the structure of the body, especially the cartilages, though not in reality diminishing the weight, gives an appearance of lightness, as we see in the beautiful movements of the stag, and this would seem to corroborate the notion that living creatures are lighter than dead ones. It has also been asserted that the breath makes the living body lighter than the dead. But we need hardly say that a man when dead weighs no more than when living.

They Eat the Bait Off the Hook.

Of all sad things of tongue or pen, the saddest of all is the cunner, that skinny, bony little fish that knows how to enter the jaws of hell and carry off its teeth. This measly vermin of the pathless deep is stronger for its size than the lion of the desert or the red ant of tradition. It is quicker than the wit of woman and more elusive than the shadow of a dream. It is bolder than a Bengal tiger and more justly entitled to kingship among the creatures of the sea than Job's leviathan or the great whale of Scandinavian mythology. Hats off to the cunner. Man is both fearfully and wonderfully made, but in the presence of this superfinny miracle of subaqueous evolution he stands humble and aghast. The best way to get him is with a small book about the size of a bent pin and a goose pimple full of clam.—New London Telegraph.

ECHOES FROM COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS

At the regular meeting of the Village Council held last evening estimates made by F. F. VanTuyle of Detroit on the cost of installing an Electrical plant at the water works were read

Mr. VanTuyle estimated the cost of installing a plant at the water works for street lighting at about $16,000 while a plant equipped for both street lighting and commercial purposes could be built for about $31,000.

A petition signed by 100 business men of Tecumseh was presented asking the council not to grant a renewal of the Tecumseh Electric Co It seemed to be the desire of the petitioners that the council secure from the Electric Co. a stronger contract which would secure for the Village better service.

A motion was made that the Council secure the services of the State Rail Road Commission to assertain whether the people of Tecumseh were being charged a fair rate, and were getting the proper service entitled them. The motion carried.

It was also decided that after the Rail Road Commission had made the report that the Council together with the Village attorney draw a new contract to be presented to the Electric Co. for acceptance.

Your attention is called to the printed report to be published in our next issue.

NIGHT SCHOOL.

In response to invitations reading thus: "Mrs. W. L. Reed will hold a night school on Friday evening at which your company is requested from 7:30 to 11," the teachers of the schools met at the home of Superintendent and Mrs. W. L. Reed.

Mrs. Reed's class was put through the paces in geography, arithmetic and physiology guessing contests in the beginning of the session and as usual the boys of the class were very unruly.

During the recess intermission melons were served. School being called again, the pupils were presented with their diplomas, each one being the recipient's fortune—and such fortunes. It was amid much laughter that the wraps were hunted and the guests left for home, having enjoyed Mrs. Reeds session immensely. All being strangers to each other this little party went a long way toward getting them acquainted and was the first on many more such happy gatherings

MORDEN—DAVENPORT

Married at the Presbyterian Manse in Tecumseh, Monday Sept, 15. Walter Morden and Miss Rena Davenport both of Macon. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Seeyle of Macon, assisted by the Rev. B. R. Weld. The happy couple left on the afternoon train for parts unknown.

NOTICE OF GRANGE

The Tecumseh Grange will hold a meeting at their hall Saturday evening Sept 20th. At this meeting the Primary Election to nominate three members of the Executive Committee of the State Grange will be held; also delegates will be elected to attend the County Convention that meets in Adrian the first week in October for the purpose of electing delegates to attend the State Grange. Plans for future work will be discussed.

This is an important meeting and each member is urged to be present.

ENTERTAINED

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hanley entertained at dinner Sunday honoring Miss Elisabeth Mott who is soon to leave Tecumseh. Covers were laid for eleven of her old schoolmates and and friends. A very pleasant afternoon was the verdict of all the guests.

FEAR JAIL PLOT FROM MEXICO

Border Town Carrizo Springs, Tex., Is Threatened.

U. S. CAVALRY IS ASKED FOR

Message from Town to Representative Garner Says Situation Is Critical—Request for Troops Will Be Granted by Gen. Bliss—Town Defenseless.

Washington, Sept. 15.—The war department received through Representative Garner of Texas an urgent appeal for protection on behalf of the border town of Carrizo Springs. The citizens of this town fear an attack by friends of the Mexican bandits captured there two days ago, and ask for a detachment of United States cavalry

The war department referred the appeal to Brigadier General Bliss, commanding the American forces on the border, leaving it to his discretion to take whatever action seems necessary. It is not doubted that General Bliss will accede to the appeal from the Texas townsmen.

Sixteen Bandits.

The fears of the citizens of Carrizo Springs were expressed in the following message to Representative Garner:

"Sixteen Mexican bandits, armed, organized and with a strange flag were captured by a sheriff's posse, killing two and wounding others in a desperate fight here. Their indictment and trial for murder will follow immediately. There are persistent rumors that an organized band from Mexico will cross to the rescue of the bandits in jail here. Conditions are critical. There is intense anxiety. The town is defenseless. Please urge the sending of cavalry troops for our protection immediately."

Cause For Tears.

Dr. Pitcairn, being in a church in Edinburgh where the preacher was not only emphatic, but shed tears copiously, was moved to inquire of a countryman who sat by him what it was all about. "What the deevil makes him greet?" was the inquiry. "Faith," said the man, slowly turning round, "ye had maybe greet yoursel' if ye was up there and had as little to say!"—Dundee Advertiser.

STOVE POLISH

Keeps Your Stove
"Always Ready for Company"

A bright, clean, glossy stove is the joy and pride of every housekeeper. But it is hard to keep a stove nice and shiny—unless Black Silk Stove Polish is used.

Here is the reason: Black Silk Stove Polish sticks right to the iron. It doesn't rub off or dust off. Its shine lasts four times longer than the shine of any other polish. You only need to polish one-fourth as often, yet your stove will be cleaner, brighter and better looking than it has been since you first bought it. Use on your parlor stove, kitchen stove or gas stove. Get a can from your hardware or stove dealer. If you do not find it better than any other stove polish you have ever used before, your dealer is authorized to refund your money. But we feel sure you will agree with the thousands of other up-to-date women who are now using Black Silk Stove Polish and who say it is the "best stove polish ever made."

BLACK SILK
STOVE POLISH

LIQUID OR PASTE
ONE QUALITY

Be sure to get the genuine. Black Silk Stove Polish costs you no more than the ordinary kind.

Keep your grates, registers, fenders and stove pipes bright and free from rusting by using BLACK SILK AIR-DRYING ENAMEL. Brush free with each can of enamel only.

Use BLACK SILK METAL POLISH for silverware, nickel, tinware or brass. It works quickly, easily, and leaves a brilliant surface. It has no equal for use on automobiles.

We have always questioned whether to write of wind or weather, but today our duty seems to us quite plain for by every sign and token, the drouth is surely broken, and we're having just a gentle lovely rain.

Wm. Smith was called to Evart Monday by the death and for the funeral of his oldest brother, Joseph P. Smith who passed away Sunday. Mr. Smith had been in poor health for several years the immediate cause of his death being a third stroke of apoplexy. He was for many years a resident of Franklin where he had many friends who will regret to hear of his death.

Last June we recorded the death of Mrs. Ruth Stites of Clinton and today we record the death of her sister, Mrs. Louise Gilbert who was found dead on Friday morning at her home by a neighbor who called to see her. Mrs. Gilbert was 90 years old and had lived alone since the death of her sister. The two lived in Tecumseh for a number of years in the Marsden house. They were relatives of Mrs. F. Hillman, later they removed to Clinton where they were honored members of the community.

A movement is on foot to organize a company of Camp Fire Girls in town. This is an organization for girls similar to the Boys Scouts for boys. It is hoped that "Camp Jaunita" may soon be an established fact.

Mrs. Maude Elder, Lizzie Bemish, Mrs. Ben Ellis and Will Eckles and wife left Sunday morning for Mansfield Ohio for a visit with Chas. Glover and family. Mrs. Glover was formally Olive Blymer and lived in Tecumseh. The trip was made by auto the party expecting to return today.

C. V. Skinner of Hudson was a very pleasant caller at the Herald Office Monday. As he never forgets the Herald force on his visits, he was not remiss at this time, but brought a box of the finest peaches of the season. Several of the early Crawfords measured nine inches around and the golden drops were of the most delicious flavor. Mr. Skinner is a firm friend of the Tecumseh Herald and has taken it for many years.

ILLINOIS WATER IS POLLUTED

Most of Drinking Supply Needs Treatment for Drinking Purposes.

Washington, Sept. 15.—The United States geological survey has just issued a report dealing with the quality of the surface waters of Illinois as determined by an investigation carried on between the federal survey and the state water survey several years ago.

According to this report the State of Illinois is well provided with water supplies, but nearly all of them are surface waters and most of them are so greatly polluted as to be unfit for domestic use without purification. They also contain so much dissolved mineral matters as to be unsuitable for manufacturing purposes. By proper treatment, however, they may be regarded fit for drinking and industrial purposes.

The report states that the flow from the Chicago drainage canal into the Illinois river has so standarized the water in the Illinois that it is excellent for industrial purposes.

TWO ARE KILLED IN JOY RIDE

Chauffeur Steals Employer's Car and Party Comes to Grief.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Sept. 15.—Bessie Geary, twenty-four years old, of Montpelier, Ind., and Willard Fryback of Bluffton, are dead as a result of an automobile accident here, following a wild joy ride in a car owned by Harry Lowenstein, for whom Fryback is chauffeur. Hazel Stewart, also of Montpelier, and Jack Lindemann, the only other occupants of the machine, are seriously injured and are unconscious at the Lutheran hospital.

The Geary girl died a few minutes after the machine left the road and plunged down a ten-foot embankment near the approach to the Gerk curve, known to motorists as one of the most dangerous roadbeds in Northern Indiana. Fryback died in the hospital.

DIES OF INJURIES IN WRECK

Pennsylvania Fireman, Scalded in Accident Near Richmond, Succumbs.

Richmond, Ind., Sept. 15.—J. W. Tharp, thirty years old, fireman on the Pennsylvania limited, which was wrecked east of this city, died of his injuries at Reid Memorial hospital. Tharp suffered burns from escaping steam and numerous cuts and bruises.

His body will be shipped to his home in Columbus, O. Ellis Gibson, colored, a dining car cook, who was injured in the wreck, is in a critical condition and it is believed he cannot recover.

Get at the root of the trouble.

Rubbing an aching back may relieve it.

But won't cure it if the kidneys are weak.

Doan's Kidney Pills go right at it;

Reach the cause; attack the pain.

Are recommended by many Tecumseh people.

A. C. Aylesworth, W. Chicago St. Tecumseh, Mich., says: "About four years ago I had an acute attack of lumbago and my kidneys were disordered. I at length heard of Doan's Kidney Pills and procuring a supply at C. A. Wright & Son's Drug Store, I began using them. In a short time I was relieved and I have had no return attack of the trouble. I hope other kidney sufferers will read my statement and be led to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial."

STATE FAIR WAS A SUCCESS

Surplus May Remain After All Bills Are Paid Says Report.

Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 15.—Members of the state board of agriculture probably will meet the last of this week to canvass the result of the state fair just closed and lay preliminary plans for next year's exposition.

It is already known that the fair was a financial success. The attendance for the week was 127,726 against 133,580 for last year and 143,756 in 1911, the record year.

TOUGH ONE ON CLAR-OONTS

Named in Woman's Suit As Having Embraced Her.

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 15.—Clarence S. Darrow, Chicago lawyer, was named in the trial of a separate maintenance suit of Mrs. Annett Mayr, formerly of Chicago, which is in progress.

Testimony that Darrow, during his visit to Los Angeles in 1907, embraced Mrs. Mayr, was given by Miss Caroline M. Moore, a neighbor of the plaintiff. Several years later, she said, when Darrow returned to this city to defend the McNamara brothers, dynamiters, she recognized him. Mrs. Mayr admitted that Darrow had visited her in a professional capacity, but said Mrs. Darrow accompanied him on each occasion.

"BILLIE" BURKE

Famous Actress Is Recovering from Appendicitis Attack.

"BILLY" BURKE IS WELL

News of Successful Operation on Actress Is Made Known.

New York, Sept. 15.—Miss Billie Burke has entirely recovered from a recent operation for appendicitis. Only a few intimate friends knew that she had gone under the surgeon's knife.

The news leaked out in connection with the announcement by Charles Frohman that Miss Burke would make her first public appearance since the operation at Poughkeepsie tonight when she will appear in "the Amazons."

WORKMEN ARE TRAPPED

Explosion and Fire in Big Plant at Buffalo, N. Y.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 15.—An explosion followed by an outburst of flames occurred in the Clover Leaf Milling company's plant here at 3 o'clock in the morning while between twenty and forty men were at work in the mill.

When the firemen arrived shortly afterward it was reported that several men were missing. A number of the workmen had been removed to the hospital suffering painful injuries.

LYNCHING CLAIMS SECOND

One Negro Was Killed and It Is Believed Other Dead.

Cairo, Ill., Sept. 15.—The authorities here believe the body of a negro found is that of one of the men they were pursuing after an attempt on the part of two negroes to force a merchant of Tamms, Ill., to accept a raised bill.

The body could not be identified positively. One negro was killed and it was believed the second was wounded fatally. The finding of the body tends to confirm that belief.

One For the Lawyer.

A lawyer the other day in a London police court was cross examining a woman who was evidently a match for any man while her husband, obviously the weaker vessel, sat sheepishly listening. The lawyer was pressing a question urgently when she indignantly remarked:

"You needn't think to catch me. You tried that once before."

"Madam," replied the counsel, "I haven't the least desire to catch you, and your husband looks as if he was sorry he did."

For The Nervous Woman,

Or the woman who experiences hot flashes nothing is so good to soothe, quiet and calm the nervous system as a pure glyceric extract of native medical plants, and made without alcohol, which has been sold by druggists for the past forty years, and most favorably known as Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription. In younger years some women suffer from dizziness, or fainting spells, hysteria, headache, bearing-down feelings and pain. All these symptoms of irregularity and female disturbance are relieved by the use of this famous "Prescription" of Doctor Pierce.

As a powerful, invigorating tonic "Favorite Prescription" imparts strength to the whole system, and in particular to the organs distinctly feminine. For over-worked, "worn-out," "run-down," debilitated teachers, milliners, dressmakers, seamstresses, "shop-girls," house-keepers, nursing mothers, and feeble women generally, it is an excellent appetizing cordial and restorative tonic.

"My disease was called retroversion," writes MRS. LYDIA MCDONALD, of Mecosta, Mich., Route 1. "I had nervous chills and numb spells and they would leave me very weak. Then I had inflammation and the doctor said I had a floating kidney. I doctored seven months with our family physician. He said I would have to have an operation. Then I stopped taking his medicine. After taking three bottles of Dr. Pierce's medicines I have not had any nervous chills or weak spells. I am better than for years.

"My daughter is now taking the 'Prescription' and Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, also the 'Pellets' for nervousness and weak, tired feeling. These remedies have helped her ever so much in a short time. We have great faith in your medicines for female troubles."

MRS. MCDONALD.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets induce mild natural bowel movement.

CANOEISTS HAVE CLOSE CALL

Man Saves Two Girls From Drowning in White River.

Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 15.—Miss Garnet Jackson and Miss Lucile Wible of Broad Ripple, both about sixteen years old, were saved from drowning in White river by a man who gave his name as Ben Staig of Indianapolis. The young women were given "first aid" and were able to go home.

Miss Jackson and Miss Wible were in a canoe at a deep place in the river near the camp of the Midnight Sons, north of Broad Ripple. The canoe turned over and both were thrown into the water, sinking immediately as neither could swim. Staig swam to Miss Wible and carried her ashore, returning to rescue Miss Jackson, who had sunk the second time.

FEAR CHARLTON ESCAPE

Italy Placing Precautions to Prevent Repetition of Thaw Incident.

Rome, Sept. 15.—Italy is not taking any chances of Porter Charlton, the young American, escaping from his prison at Como, where he is waiting trial for murder of his wife. The guards around the prison have been doubled in consequence of the fear that he might break out and get across the frontier to Switzerland, which is only three miles from Como.

Lawyers are watching the case closely and believe in spite of the statements of his family that they will have golden pickings, as was the case of Thaw's lawyers.

GOVERNOR FELKER

New Hampshire Executive Who Will Settle the Fate of Thaw.

The governor of New Hampshire is the man who will say whether or not Harry K. Thaw, slayer of Stanford White, shall return to Matteawan. Immediately on learning of Thaw's arrest in Colebrook, N. H., Acting Governor Glynn of New York began preparations to have Thaw extradited. One of the first reports from New Hampshire was that Governor Felker was inclined to recognize Governor Sulzer. The governor of New Hampshire has stated that his decision will be rendered on the advice of the attorney general of that state.

PRIMARY VOTE LIGHT IN JUDICIAL CONTEST

Puterbaugh, Craig and Shay Are Three Party Nominees.

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 15.—Returns received from the ten counties in the Fifth supreme court district indicated an unusually light vote polled in the primary elections ofr supreme court justice to succeed John P. Hand. In Peoria county the vote was only about one-tenth of the normal poll.

The nomination of Leslie D. Puterbaugh of Peoria, Republican, was assured, he being the only candidate on that ticket. Charles C. Craig of Galesburg, Democrat, was nominated on that ticket over A. M. Bergland of Galva.

On the Progressive ticket the nomination of Arthur H. Shay of Streator is assured. The other Progressive in the race was John Root of Galva. The Progressive vote was light.

Peoria, Ill., Sept. 15.—Returns from Peoria county indicate that Puterbaugh (Rep.), Craig (Dem.), Root, (Prog.), have been nominated in the primaries for supreme justice, and A. M. Otman (Rep.) and J. H. Neihaus (Dem.) for circuit judges.

The Progressive vote in this county dwindled to practically nothing compared with the last presidential election.

SENT BACK TO REFORMATORY

Negro Pleads Guilty to Assaulting Child After Being Indicted.

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 15.—Charles Banks of Jonesboro, Ark., the negro boy who attacked Theresa Akins, aged ten years, was indicted by a special grand jury on a charge of crime against a child.

He was brought into the circuit court, where he pleaded guilty and was sentenced to an indeterminate term in the state reformatory at Pontiac.

Kills Wife and Child.

Terre Haute, Ind., Sept. 15.—Harry Rasico, a chicken picker of Vincennes, killed his wife and two-year-old child at the home of a relative whom she was visiting. He shot his wife first and then, as a policeman entered the house, held the officer back with his revolver until he could turn and kill the child. Jealousy is given as the motive.

Farm Hands In Germany.

Germany has more than 65,000,000 people living in area less than that of Texas and only five times as great as that of Ohio, but nevertheless labor is so scarce in harvest time in many parts of the German empire that about 80,000 farmhands, as the American phrase is, go into Germany from Russia and Austria-Hungary every year to help gather the crops.

Fixing the Price.

A shambling old negro went down the street leading a big dog with a "For Sale" sign on its collar. A little girl spied the dog and wanted it. She teased so hard that her mother finally asked its price.

"Two dollahs," said the negro, an expectant grin dividing his features.

"Two dollars!" exclaimed the lady. "Why, the dog isn't worth that much: I'll give you 50 cents."

The negro drew himself up indignantly. "Lady," he said, "Ah couldn't think of it. Why, de fellow Ah got dis dog from gave me a dollah to get rid of him!"—Everybody's.

PRIEST ADMITS SLAYING GIRL

Hudson River Mystery Cleared by a Confession.

INITIALED PILLOW SLIP CLEW

Murderer Roman Catholic Clergyman Who Has Had Many Charges—Killed Girl Because He Loved Her So Much—Francis Day's Identification Fails.

New York, Sept. 15.—Hans Schmidt, an assistant priest of St. Joseph's catholic church at 405 West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street, was arrested and confessed that he had murdered and then dismembered the body of a girl, parts of whose body have been found in the North river during the past few days.

The murdered girl, whose name was Anna Aumuller, was a servant in the pastoral residence of the Rev. Father Braun, pastor of St. Boniface's church on the Southeast coroner of Forty-seventh street and Second avenue, where Schmidt from December, 1910, until May, 1912, was a curate. Schmidt's only explanation of the cause of the murder was that he "loved Anna."

Doubt About Schmidt's Priesthood.

There are reasons to believe, according to the church authorities, that Schmidt is an imposter. For many years, however, he has performed the duties of a curate at two churches in New York, at Trenton and at St. Louis, and according to his own story he was a priest in Germany before coming to America from Bavaria in 1907.

Schmidt, according to Assistant District Attorney Deacon Murphy and Police Inspector Faurot, confessed that he entered a four room flat on the third floor of the apartment house at 68 Bradhurst avenue, two doors north of West One Hundred and Forty-fifth street, at midnight on Sept. 2, and cut her throat while she slept.

Several Trips with Body.

He tasted the blood, then he says. When he was sure the girl was dead, he dragged her body to the bathroom of the apartment and there dismembered it. Then he wrapped the parts of the body up in either five or six pieces, he does not remember which, and when daylight came, he took the packages aboard Fort Lee ferry boats during several trips and dropped the packages overboard.

These trips, so he told the police in his confession, took up the better part of the day following the murder and the next. Toward dusk of the second day while trying to wash away all signs of his crime from the flat, he came across a part of the mattress which was so soaked with blood that he could not obliterate the stains. Whereupon, Schmidt told the police and others he took the stained cloth of the mattress at nightfall to a vacant lot in One Hundred and Forty-fourth street between Seventh and Eighth avenues.

Pillow Slip Initial Clew.

The solution of this mystery was brought about by tracing the pillow slip in which the upper section of the dismembered torso had been wrapped.

It was found that a certain number of these slips had been sent from the factory in Newark to the store of George Sachs at 2768 Eighth avenue. Sachs had sold only two pillows. One of these was sufficiently accounted for. The other had been delivered with some furniture to a flat at 68 Bradhurst avenue.

This flat, the detectives learned, had been rented by a man of clerical appearance who had occupied it with a young woman. Neither had been seen there since September 2.

Mute Evidences of Murder.

The floor of this flat was bloodstained and strewn with fragments of wrapping paper and pieces of cloth-covered wire, such as had been around the packages containing the dismembered torso. He also found a letter addressed to Anna Aumuller, care St. Boniface's Roman Catholic church, Forty-seventh street and Second avenue, and a photograph of the girl.

The young priest who had formerly been curate at St. Boniface's was traced to St. Joseph's in West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street. Here he was found, confronted with the picture and evidence and confessed.

Not the Day Girl.

New York, Sept. 15.—The torso of the girl found in the Hudson river a week ago is not that of Annette Day, the Brooklyn girl who has been missing since Aug. 8, as had been believed. Salvatore Day and his sister Mary Day, went to the Hoboken morgue where their brother Francis had declared his belief that it was his sister's headless body. Francis Day later admitted he had been mistaken and that the body was not that of his sister.

Football Claims Victim.

Evansville, Ill., Sept. 15.—In a scrimmage during a football practice game here Russell Parker, star track man and guard of the Evansville High School Football team, suffered a broken leg.

Motorboats.

The bureau of commerce estimates that there are at least 200,000 motorboats in the United States.

Oxford Terms.

A Rhodes scholar of Denver, speaking of Oxford, said:

"Oxford is a funny place. Magdalen is pronounced Maudlin there. 'Full term' means three-quarters of a term. 'General admission' day is the day, not when you enter, but when you leave. An 'ordinary degree' is one obtained by a special examination. An 'inspector of arts' is not an inspector, but a student.

"Confused by these things, a new Rhodes scholar said:

"'How queer, by jingo! How queer it all is! And if I go to the Oxford depot and ask for a ticket by train to London will they give me a passage by steamer to Marseilles?'"—Exchange.

The Reason.

"Why do you call this a fire sale?" inquired the new but honest clerk, who had at once discovered that there had been no fire.

"Because we fire the fellows that don't mind their own business," responded the boss.

And after that the new but honest clerk did.—Detroit News.

A Tough Case.

"What's the trouble, old man?"

"I'm in a bad way. I lie awake nights thinking about my work. Then when I'm at work I keep going to sleep."—Pittsburgh Post.

GAYNOR FUNERAL

New York Prepares to Pay Tribute to Mayor.

REMAINS WILL LIE IN STATE

Public to Be Given an Opportunity to View the Body in the City Hall in Manhattan—Bishop and Ministers to Officiate at Funeral Services.

NEW YORK — Mayor William J. Gaynor is dead. The mayor died aboard the steamer Baltic in mid-ocean. The following radiogram was received at Cookhaven from the steamship Baltic:

"My father, Mayor Gaynor, died on the Baltic at seven minutes to one o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

"Death was due to heart trouble. He was sitting in a deck chair when the end came. A deck steward had been with him but a few minutes before his death and had taken his order for lunch. The mayor had marked the menu to indicate the dishes he desired. I was on the boat deck.

"I went below at lunch call to tell father that his lunch was ready. He had been taking his meals in one of the state rooms. He was seated in his chair, apparently asleep. I shook him gently, but he did not respond.

"His trained nurse, who had been with him ten minutes previously, was summoned and the ship's surgeon, Dr. Hopper, was called. The mayor was given a hypodermic injection, and artificial respiration was resorted to. But it was quickly apparent that he was beyond aid.

"They stopped for an examination. The stethoscope showed that the heart was no longer beating."

Mayor Gaynor's Funeral.

While New York mourned and honors were being paid the distinguished American in Liverpool, where his body was taken ashore from the steamship Baltic, tentative arrangements were made for the public exercises to be a striking tribute of his home city to the late executive.

Mayor Gaynor's funeral will take place in old Trinity church in lower Broadway at 11 a. m. Monday, Sept. 22, with Bishop Greer of the New York diocese of the protestant Episcopal church officiating. His body will be laid at rest in Greenwood cemetery, Brooklyn.

The ceremonies on the day of the funeral are to be preceded by various distinctive tributes. On the arrival, probably next Friday, of the steamer Lusitania, the mayor's body will be taken to the Gaynor home in Brooklyn, to remain until Saturday evening, when it will be removed to the city hall in Manhattan, to lie in state until the hour of the funeral.

Uniformed Men to Bear Coffin.

The coffin will be borne from the city hall to the hearse and from the hearse to the church on the shoulders of uniformed men of the fire and police departments.

General Thomas H. Barry, commandant of the department of the east, has offered an escort of soldiers from Governor's island, and should Bishop Greer, who is in Maine, be unable to officiate, at the services, his place will be taken by Suffragan Bishop Burch. Assisting will be the Rev. Dr. Frank Page, of Culpepper, Va., formerly pastor of St. John's church in Brooklyn, of which Mayor Gaynor was a member, and the Rev. L. E. Holden, pastor of the Episcopal Church of St. James, Long Island.

MAX LILLIE KILLED

Wife Sees Him Fall with Aeroplane at Galesburg, Ill.

GALESBURG, ILL. — Max Lillie, Chicago's "safety first" aviator, was killed in a fall of fifty feet in his aeroplane here.

Lillie's wife witnessed the tragedy and had to be carried off the grounds unconscious. Nearly every bone in Lillie's body was broken.

The wrecked biplane narrowly missed the fair grounds grandstand, where several thousand persons sat frozen with horror as the flyer dashed to his death. The terror of the accident was averted with difficulty among the hundreds of women and children in the east end of the grand stand.

Lillie fell with his machine battling with the controls. The machine gave him his death blow as he struck the ground. Life lingered for perhaps ten minutes.

MILWAUKEE — L'Hommedieu, the right handed pitcher, six feet tall, who has made a great showing with the Winnipeg city club, reported to Manager Clarke for a try-out with the Brewers. L'Hommedieu won fourteen straight games for the Winnipeg club.

WASHINGTON — Joseph Jackson, Cleveland's premier outfielder, was so badly shaken up when he crashed into the fence in the fourth inning of the game between Washington and Cleveland that he had to leave the game.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND. — The big Federal league, said to be the first independent baseball organization to complete its full schedule, closed its first season with the Indianapolis club far in the lead for the pennant.

MEDIATION OFFERED BY BUSINESS MEN

Copper Strike Is Hurting Trade in Calumet District.

CALUMET, MICH. — The Copper Country Commercial club, with a membership of 500 business and professional men of the copper miners' strike district, decided to offer mediation to the strikers and operators in an effort to settle the strike, which is seriously threatening business interests. A committee of three was appointed to investigate the contentions of both factions, providing its offer is accepted.

The club's proposition, which is understood to have the backing of Governor Ferris, was referred to by both President Moyer of the Western Federation and Treasurer Lennon of the American Federation of Labor in their addresses to 3,000 strikers here. Both declared that any plan which was as fair to the men as it was to the operators would be considered, but that the strikers would hold out for the right to organize and recognition of the Western Federation of Miners.

As the operators are firm in their stand not to recognize the federation little hope is held out for the success of the new plan.

STATE'S PRICE FOR A LIFE

Accident Board of Michigan Finds $7,305.53 Paid for Toilers.

LANSING—The Michigan compensation act places upon human life a value which is something more than theoretical.

Under this act 73 fatalities during the closing quarter of the industrial accident board's first fiscal year cost Michigan industry $163,304.

The average human life, which was sacrificed during the months of June, July and August cost $2,305.53. In addition to this direct charge which is registered against the employer primarily, and ultimately comes out of the consumer, there is the loss to the community which is estimated at $5,000. Therefore, it costs in the final analysis $7,305.53 for the death of a Michigan workman.

The mining industry was the heaviest contributor to the list of killed during the last quarter.

Seventeen fatalities in the iron, copper and coal mines of Michigan cost the operators $41,523.

AARON SMIT HELD BY POLICE

Former Business and Fraternal Man Charged with Theft.

DETROIT, MICH. — Aaron Smit, Smit, formerly a well known Detroit business man and prominent in a number of fraternal societies, was arrested by Detectives Boersig and Donovan and locked up at the central police station as a fugitive from justice.

Smit was arrested on a warrant issued by United States Commissioner Gaines, of Toledo, charging that Smit stole and had in his possession 1,000 cigars taken from a freight car while in transit.

Smit had been arrested in Detroit several times lately, but has never been prosecuted.

HAMMOND, IND. — Mr. and Mrs. Waltz were instantly killed and Mrs. Lorin Haworth was probably fatally injured in a collision between an electric train and an automoible at a crossing about two miles north of Carmel.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—Henry D. Worrell, of Carthage, Ill., train auditor for the Missouri, Kansas and Texas Railroad company, committed suicide by cutting his throat with a razor in a local hotel.

California Graft Prosecutor Announces His Candidacy.

LOS ANGELES, CAL. — Francis J. Heney, the San Francisco graft prosecutor, has announced his candidacy for the United States senate to succeed Senator George C. Perkins, whose term expires March 4, 1915.

Mr. Heney declared that he had not at this time decided upon the plans for his campaign, but expected to be able to get to work among his friends after the oil case was disposed of.

CRIMES AND CASUALTIES.

SAVANNAH, GA. — The United States torpedo boat Craven, commanded by Lieutenant J. W. Heywood, en route from Charleston to Savannah, blew out forty flues, killing two men and injuring several others late in the afternoon off Tybee Island. The dead are Chief Water Tender McCaffrey and Assistant Chief Machinist Milton. The most seriously injured are Chief Boiler Tender Dobbert and Water Tender Dalton and Assistant Water Tender Swinn. Several others were injured though less severely.

NEW YORK — Addison T. Millar, one of the most widely known painters and etchers of this country, and his wife were instantly killed when their automobile was struck by an express train near Norwalk, Conn. Two friends who were riding in the same machine were seriously hurt. Mr. Millar and his wife had been residing in the artist colony at Silver Mine.

WASHINGTON, IND. — The first fatal hunting accident of the year came when Thomas Bennington, forty-five years old, was dragging his gun through the undergrowth on the farm of Mrs. Elizabeth Ryan, eight miles from here. The charge entered his right shoulder and ranged into the breast, death coming in a half hour.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—Playing water ball with a dozen companions in five feet of water at McKinley beach, James R. Greeley, of Mitchel, S. D., and a prominent Elk, died either from drowning or heart disease. His body was recovered by his companions within a minute.

MUST BOSS PAY FOR CLYDESDALE LOVER?

Breaking His Sweetheart's Arm Raises Liability Question.

LANSING, MICH. — Whether an employer would have to pay compensation to a young lady whose too ardent wooing by her lover, a fellow employe of the Detroit Electric Appliance company, resulted in her having a broken arm, is a question that is bothering a Detroit insurance company which wrote to the state industrial accident board for advice in the matter.

It seems that the two were engaged in a scuffling match when the girl's arm was twisted, resulting in a fracture. The employer asked for a settlement from the insurance company.

NEW ANGLE IN LAKE MYSTERY

Woman, Thought to Be "James Gray" Who Shot Dickerson.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH. — The finding of a woman's hat on the shore of Reeds lake, about 100 feet from the spot where Harold Dickerson, son of R. P. Dickerson, of Springfield, Mo., was found in a boat Friday night shot below the heart, has led the authorities of East Grand Rapids to believe that, instead of a James Gray, whom Dickerson said shot him and then jumped overboard, a girl was involved in the tragedy.

When confronted with the new angle in the case, Dickerson merely laughed and said: "There's nothing to it. Gray shot me and that ends it."

He seemed very anxious to hush details of the case and declares the reason for this desire to be due to his anxiety to prevent his sweetheart, Miss Virginia Gray, of St. Louis, from obtaining further news of the affair.

CHARGES AGAINST "KIN"

Bootblack Monarch Accused of Selling Property He Didn't Own.

KALAMAZOO, MICH. — Being alleged to have sold a building he did not own and also a number of shoe-shining parlors, George Polyrenekes, the "bootblack king" of Kalamazoo, was arrested on a capias.

His alleged victim, John Delmos, says that the prisoner got $5,000 in cash from him when Polyrenekes sold a building that belongs to James H. Dewing. He also says that he purchased two shoe-shining parlors which he found out later did not belong to the man who sold them. Delmos says Polyrenekes secured $6,000 from him in two deals.

WOMEN CHIEF OFFENDERS

State Fire Inspector Says They Lead As Arson Plotters.

LANSING, MICH. — Weld T. Burdick, one of the inspectors of the state fire marshal's department, says that women have been the chief offenders in the arson cases that have been investigated by the department recently. "Several cases are being investigated at the present time in which women are suspected of having started fires in order to secure insurance and warrants will be issued in some of the cases within a few days," said Burdick.

BAY CITY — The Bay City board of health has just condemned 2,100 pounds of unsound pork in a local cold storage plant. Kerosene was poured over the meat by Meat Inspecter Prybeski and Health Officer Keho, and the lot will be turned over to the city scavenger.

PONTIAC—The town of Royal Oak has granted a thirty-year franchise to the Pontiac Light and Power company, and the Local company will extend its mains to that village to supply gas for the community.

Clerk read the following report from F. F. VanTuyle, electrical engineer, who had been engaged by the Village to make estimate on cost of installing a municipal lighting plant at the water works:

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 8, 1913.

Mr. Bert Slater,
Mr. H. C. Moore,
Mr. E. C. Brown,
Committee on Street Lighting.
Village of Tecumseh, Mich:

Gentlemen.—In regard to the insallation and operation of a municipal lighting plant in the Village of Tecumseh, I desire to report as follows:

The installation and operation of a municipal lighting plant in connection with a municipal water works system is an entirely feasible and practical proposition and in many cases has resulted in the saving of some money to the municipalities for street lighting purposes.

In many cities and villages the size of Tecumseh, a privately owned lighting plant could not be made to pay expenses and give service which would be at all satisfactory to the people at rates which would make this service universally available, and it was therefore necessary for a number of cities and villages to install municipal lighting plants in order to provide adequate street lighting, and the convenience of electric service for domestic use, but the installation of a municipal lighting plant is not an absolute necessity from the standpoint of health and sanitation, as is the case with a municipal water plant and sewer system.

It therefore becomes a commercial question rather than a question of necessity whether a municipality should install and operate an electric lighting plant.

If the village were large enough so that the street lighting could be separated from the commercial lighting, and the street lighting only be done by the municipality, leaving the commercial lighting to be done by a private enterprise, the matter would present a very different aspect than would be the case if the municipality tried to furnish street lighting and commercial service from the same plant.

If a street lighting system only were contemplated the municipal plant could be operated only during the hours when street lighting was required, and irregularities in operation or regulation which would not be apparent in street lighting might be so annoying to commercial users as to cause very much dissatisfaction among the patrons of the lighting plant.

You will therefore see that if a plant is put in for giving both commercial and street lighting service it will be necessary to install a more expensive equipment and to operate the plant with greater care and attention than would be the case if street lighting only were contemplated.

One point which has been overlooked a great many times by municipalities in giving commercial service, is that it has been the desire of the municipality to give service to the citizens at a rate which was so near the cost of production that sufficient profit was not made in the operation of the plant to pay for a reasonable depreciation on the machinery, and the interest and principal on the money invested, so that it has often been necessary to vote on a new issue of bonds or other securities with which to pay off the bonds originally issued on the lighting plant.

These questions have all probably been given thorough consideration by your committee in times past, and I do not wish to bring them up for argument at this time, but merely to make the above statment that you may have the facts clearly in mind when further considering the facts as hereinafter set forth.

The present requirement for power and lighting service in the Village of Tecumseh requires a maximum output of about 300 kilowatts during the winter months and about 160 kilowatts during the summer months, with an average output of about 100 to 150 kilowatts.

The motor service during the day in the various factories takes about as much power as the commercial and street lighting service during the night, so that in the winter months there is an hour or two each afternoon when the street lighting, commercial service and factory motor service must be supplied at the same time, so that any plant put in by the municipality should be of sufficient capacity to provide for this service. Although it is more than probable that in your particular case the commercial service would be divided between the municipal plant and the privately owned plant already in existence, so that the municipal plant might never be called upon to carry the entire street lighting and commercial load, unless the present privately owned plant should discontinue its service.

For the present street lighting requirements, consisting of approximately 60 arc lamps and about 20 incandescent lamps, a generating capacity of about 50 kilowats is all that would absolutely be required, but as the space occupied in the power house and the general installation expense would not be particularly different between a generator of 50 kilowatts capacity and one of 75 kilowatts capacity, it would probably be desirable to base our calculation on one generator of 75 kilowatts capacity to be installed for street lighting purposes only.

If commercial lighting were to be considered, two generators, each of at least 125 kilowatts capacity, would be about the minimum size which it would be prudent for you to install.

The boilers at the present water works station have been in service for a number of years, and while of adequate capacity to operate the present water works pumps, they are not large enough nor capable of carrying steam pressure high enough to economically operate an electric lighting plant.

It would therefore be necessary to install an entirely new boiler equipment of sufficient capacity to operate the present lighting plant entirely independent of the present water works boilers; although if street lighting only were to be considered and you were somewhat limited in your appropriation, one boiler of about the capacity of the two boilers which you have now installed, could be put in and a second boiler added at a later date, if commercial service should also be given.

One boiler could be placed in the present boiler room without any extension to the building, but if more than one boiler were installed, the present boiler room would have to be considerably enlarged.

One engine and one generator of 75 kilowatts capacity could be placed in the present pump room, but it would make this room very much crowded; and if the commercial lighting feature of the proposition should be given serious consideration it would be necessary to considerably enlarge the present pump room in order to accommodate the two 125 kilowatt engines and generators and auxiliary apparatus which it would be necessary to install.

In order to provide for street lighting equipment only, the estimated expense would be about as follows:

1 150 H. P. boiler erected complete, including a sheet steel smoke stack, brick work and foundation	$ 2,300 00
1 120 H. P. engine directly connected to one 75 kilowatt alternating current generator, erected complete including foundations	2,851 00
Piping connections between boiler and engine	500 00
60 arc lamps, including necessary transformers and switchboard station apparatus	3,000 00
20 100-watt Tungsten lamps complete with brackets, etc	200 00
Pole line construction. Assuming that the wires can be carried on poles averaging not over 40 ft in length, 9¼ miles at $800.00 per mile	7,400 00
Making a total of	$16,250 00

If a lesser number of arc lamps and a greater number of tungsten lamps should be installed, the item of $3200.00 which was allowed for lamps might be modified somewhat, but the pole line construction and other equipment would be the same.

If the equipment to be installed should be designed for commercial as well as street lighting service the installation expense would be approximately as follows, although it is more difficult to estimate the construction cost for line work for commercial purposes than for street lighting purposes because the location of the various customers, and the size of transformers, meters, etc., which would be required can only be determined in individual cases, so that the best can be done would be to make an estimate which would cover the expense of this work assuming that you were able to get 50 per cent of the commercial lighting business available in the village.

2 150 H. P. boilers erected complete including brick work and sheet steel stack	$ 4,500 00
2 200 H. P. engines directly connected to 2 125 kilowatt generators, erected complete including foundations	7,300 00
Pipe work connecting up boilers and engines	850 00
Arc lamps	3,200 00
Line work as above	7,400 00
Additional line work for commercial lighting purposes	3,000 00
Transformers, meters, etc	2,500 00
Extension to engine room and boiler room at power house	5,000 00
Additional switchboard equipment	1,000 00
	$34,750 00

You thus have the two principal items of cost to consider, namely: $16,250.00 being the probable expense for installing a municipal lighting plant for street lighting purposes only, and $34,750.00 for the insallation of a municipal lighting plant with sufficient capacity to provide for street lighting and commercial service as well.

Both of these estimates of cost have been based upon the supposition that the municipal lighting plant will be built at the same location as the municipal water works plant, so that the same set of men could operate both plants.

It would be perfectly feasible to do this particularly if you should install in addition to the present water works pumps, a motor driven centrifugal pump.

As to the expense of operation and the probable benefits to be derived therefrom, the following facts should be considered.

If the municipal lighting plant is installed for street lighting purposes only, and is operated by the same men who regularly would be employed to operate the municipal water works, the question of the division of the labor expense as between the electric lighting department and the water works department would be entirely a matter of book-keeping, so that in making the following estimates for expense of operation, I have included only the labor and fuel which would be necessary for the operation of the electric lighting plant in addition to that which would be required for the operation of the water works system: all estimates being made on monthly basis.

I have also assumed in making these estimates that the street lighting system will be in operation continuously from sunset to sunrise every day in the year or approximately 4000 hours per year.

The following would be an approximate estimate of the monthly expense of operation for street lighting only.

LABOR—

One fireman	$ 50 00
One lamp trimmer	50 00
Coal 2 tons per day at $2.50 per ton	150 00
Supplies and sundry expense	50 00
Interest at 1-2 per cent per month	76 75
Depreciation fund	75 00
	$451 75
Thus making a total expense per year of	$5,421 00

On the basis of 60 arc lamps this would make your cost per lamp $90.35 per year or $7.75 per month per lamp.

If commercial power and lighting service were given by the village, the probable income would be more or less difficult to estimate, but owing to the fact that there is already a company giving commercial service in your village the income from electric lighting purposes from the residence district to the city probably would not average over $2.00 a month per consumer, and for the first few years at any rate you probably would not have over 200 customers, making the probable monthly income from this source $400.00 per month.

In addition to this the income from commercial sources such as store lighting and factory power purposes might add $150.00 more per month to this amount making a total estimated income from commercial sources of $550.00 per month.

In addition to the expense for the operation of the street lighting system you would probably need at least two more men, one to act as book keeper, collector and general clerk, and one man for installing and reading meters and doing the incidental maintenance work which is always necessary in an electric lighting system; although it is possible that the amount of $50.00 per month estimated in the first item for expense for lamp trimming, etc., would cover this latter item also so in making the following estimate I have added the wages for the clerk only.

The monthly expense for operation of street lighting plant as given above	$451 75
Additional fuel	100 00
Extra labor	50 00
Additional interest and despreciation fund	144 00
	$795 75

As against this amount we have a probable income from commercial power and lighting purposes of $550.00 a month leaving a balance of $245.00 per month chargeable against street lighting expense which would bring the cost of street lighting down to $41.00 per lamp per year.

From the figures given above, if this plant is put in and operated for street lighting purposes only, your cost for arc lamps per year would be approximately $90.35, for the same service for which you are now paying $60.00 per year.

If your investment is increased so that you will be able to take care of commercial lighting, but you are only able to get 50 per cent of the business available, the revenue to be derived from the commercial lighting will take care of the additional interest on the extra money involved and reduce the cost per arc lamp for street lighting purposes to $41.00 per year.

On the basis of the figures submitted it would not appear to be a good commercial proposition for the village of Tecumseh to install a municipal lighting plant for street lighting plant for street lighting only, so long as satisfactory and adequate service can be secured at rates not to exceed those which you are now paying.

If you find you can get as many commercial customers as indicated above, the installing of a municipal power and lighting plant might be made to pay good returns on the investment.

It would then become largely a question of good management and the hearty co-operation of the people to make the enterprise a success.

I trust the above report may have been given in sufficient detail for your present purposes, but if the figures or statements as made herein are not entirely clear to you in every way, I will be glad to make such further explanations as may be necessary to make this report entirely clear in every respect.

Yours very truly,
F. F. VANTUYL.

Motion made and supported that the Clerk be instructed to write to the State Railroad Commissioner at Lansing to come to Tecumseh and investigate and examine into rates given by Tecumseh Electric Co., according to the contract that has expired, to commercial users and that used by the Village for street lighting, and if on equal basis with other cities or towns of as many users, and with electrical plants of same equipment. Motion carried.

Motion made and supported that the Village Attorney be instructed to draw up a new lighting contract for the Village with the Tecumseh Electric Co., under the supervision of the Common Council, after the State Railroad Commission have made their report to Council. Motion carried.

Motion made and supported that a new crossing be built at the west side of Evans street and across Cummins street. Motion carried.

Motion made and supported that we do now adjourn. Motion carried.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

There have been several attempts by the Freshmen and Sophmores to put up their respective colors on the dome of the High School. All have been pulled down by the Seniors. We are in hopes of some one putting one up for keeps. Beware of the Freshmen.

The foot ball game with the Tecumseh Independents was a fine game. It was well attended by High School students and outsiders. The boys are singing the praises of Seymore Orr and "Doc" Hendershott.

The score of the game by quarters:

First quarter
High School 0, Independents 0
Second quarter
High School 0, Independents 0
Third quarter
High School 6, Independents 0
Fourth quarter
High School 6, Independent 0

The boys of the foot ball team wish to thank the teachers and pupils for the hearty backing they received yesterday. They also add to that three cheers for Prof. Reed who attended the game, although we didn't hear him "root" much.

Three cheers for Coach Cork, he certainly makes us float like a cork, because we are always on top.

The writer has heard rumors of an approaching game with Blissfield a week from today but is not certain. Look in the next issue for a certain verdict.

MRS. A. E. USBORNE

It is with deep regret that we record the death of Mrs A. E. Usborne at St. Luke's Home, Pheonix, Arizona. Mrs. Usborne has been in failing health for several years, and has been for the last two years in Arizona hoping that the change of climate might be of benefit to her. For awhile she seemed better and made a visit home last year. Of late she has been steadily failing until Monday evening when death came to release her from her suffering and pain. Lizzie was a gentle tender hearted woman, and endeared herself to a large circle of friends who mourn her untimely death.

The funeral services will be held at her late home on Chicago street, at 1:30 o'clock Saturday, with Rev. B. R. Weld officiating. Burial will be in Brookside cemetery.

TWENTY-THIRD ANNIVERSARY

Tuesday, September 16 was the twenty-third anniversary of F. D. Avery's grocery business and we feel sure that he has no reason to complain of the success that has followed his efforts during these years.

Sept 16th, 1890, F. D. Avery and G. D. Ellis purchased the grocery and crockery stock of W. F. Anderson and under the firm name of Avery and Ellis, commenced business in the same store now occupied by Mr. Avery.

After about a year, Mr. Ellis retired, Mr. Webster Anderson purchasing the interest formerly owned by Mr Ellis.

The name of the firm was changed to Avery & Co, and continued so till November 1909 when Mr. Avery purchased the interest of Mr. Anderson and since that time has been sole owner.

Mr. Avery says he has been through several panics and has been in some tight places, but has managed to pull through and pay 100 cents on a dollar.

He says he did not get the large business, he now has by selling cheap goods at cut prices, but by selling the best goods possible to obtain, at correct prices and giving good service.

His only hobby is to give every customer a square deal.

The Great Violin Makers.

Antonio Stradivari, the famous violin maker of Cremona, lived 1649-1737. He was the pupil of Nicholas Amati and carried the Cremona type of violin to its highest perfection. The Amati, Nicholas and his sons, Jerome and Antonio, rank next to Stradivari if not with him. The Tyrolese makers, Jakob Stainer, 1621-83, and Matthias Klotz and his sons made violins that stand very high in the estimation of connoisseurs. Villaume of Paris is the most celebrated modern maker.

Rubbing an aching back may relieve it.

But won't cure it if the kidneys are weak.

Doan's Kidney Pills go right at it:

Reach the cause: attack the pain.

Are recommended by many Tecumseh people.

A. C. Aylesworth, W. Chicago St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "About four years ago I had an acute attack of lumbago and my kidneys were disordered. I at length heard of Doan's Kidney Pills and procuring a supply at C. A. Wright & Son's Drug Store, I began using them. In a short time I was relieved and I have had no return attack of the trouble. I hope other kidney sufferers will read my statement and be led to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial."

JEROME AFTER THAW LAWYER

Charges That Attorney Grossman Is in Contempt.

SAYS JUDGE IS IMPOSED UPON

Charge That New York Lawyers Were Without Authority to Take Lunatic Back to Matteawan Is Basis of Jerome Complaint—Deputy Marshal on Way to Serve Sheriff.

Colebrooke, N. H., Sept. 15.—William Travers Jerome, New York's special attorney general, who is trying to get Harry Thaw back to Matteawan, began preparations to bring Moses Grossman, of New York, Thaw's chief counsel, before the district court of the United States in New Hampshire for contempt. Grossman laughed at the idea of his being in contempt and in effect said that he did not care how far Jerome carried the bluff.

The trouble is over the writ of habeas corpus sued out by Grossman before United States Judge Aldrich calling for Thaw's presence at Littleton Tuesday morning and swearing that Thaw is being illegally detained in New Hampshire.

Jerome says that if the writ was sued out as a precautionary measure and a statement to that effect can be got in writing from Grossman, he will feel it his duty to move to have Grossman before Judge Aldrich for contempt. Grossman, it is said, has stated verbally that he did obtain the writ for just this purpose.

According to the laws of New Hampshire, the New York officers could grab Thaw and hustle him into New York immediately following the issuance of an executive warrant. The thing could be done so quickly that the attorneys for Thaw would not have time to find a judge to issue a writ of habeas corpus. Thaw is to be taken to Littleton by a train that leaves Colebrook at 6:15 Tuesday morning unless present plans are altered.

Grossman gave out a statement to newspapermen when he heard that Jerome was making preparations to have him up for contempt.

May Produce Thaw Tuesday.

Jerome said when he heard that United States Marshal Nute was on his way here to serve the writ of habeas corpus on Sheriff Holman Drew, that appearances indicate that Thaw's lawyers expect to produce their client Tuesday.

"Perhaps it won't seem advisable for me after all," he concluded, "to press this matter of contempt."

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

Ed Reulbach Pitching Well For Brooklyn.

When the Brooklyn ball team of the National league secured Pitcher Ed Reulbach from Chicago it did a fine stroke of business.

Reulbach has displayed impressive form for the Ebbets aggregation and inaugurated his advent into the city of churches by walloping the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Reulbach is a veteran twirler, who by careful living has prolonged his career of active play for an unusual number of years.

Lemire to Coach.

There is jubilation among the football men of Westminster college, Fulton, Mo., through the appointment of C. P. Lemire, the former Misouri university star, as their coach for the coming season. Lemire was a crack backfield man while in a Tiger uniform and captained the team in 1911.

He succeeds Ernest Tipton, a former Missouri university athlete, who coached the Blue Jays in 1911 when they won the state collegiate championship. Lemire assisted Tipton during that season.

Kramer Still Supreme.

That Frank Kramer is still the old master of the wheel was proved recently when he defeated Jackie Clarke, the Australian, in two out of three heats of a mile match race at the Newark, N. J., velodrome. Clarke had beaten every rider of note all the way up to Kramer. He won the first heat from Kramer in the race in question, and then in the second the American took the verdict by inches only in the last kick. The deciding heat went to Kramer by three-quarters of a length. He got the jump on Clarke in the last lap and was never headed.

The Dundee-Wolgast Go.

Managers for Johnny Dundee and Ad Wolgast have posted $1,000 guaranteeing a twenty round bout at Los Angeles on Sept. 9. Dundee will call off his meeting with Tommy Murphy scheduled for Labor day at San Francisco.

MAN AND THE SOIL.

Dr. R. V. Pierce of Buffalo, author of the Common Sense Medical Adviser, says "why does not the farmer treat his own body as he treats the land he cultivates. He puts back in phosphate what he takes out in crops, or the land would grow poor. The farmer should put back into his body the vital elements exhausted by labor, or by ill-health induced by some chronic disease." Further, he says, "the great value of my Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is in its vitalizing power. It gives strength to the stomach and purity to the blood. It is like the phosphates which supply nature with the substances that build up the crops. The far-reaching action of is due to its effect on the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition. Diseases that begin in the stomach are cured through the stomach. A bilious spell is simply the result of an effort made by the liver to catch up when over-worked and exhausted. I have found the 'Discovery' to be unsurpassed as a liver regulator and rich blood-maker."

Miss LOTTIE KNISELY of Perth, Kansas, says: "I will here add my testimony of the effectiveness of your remedy upon myself. I was troubled with indigestion for two years or more. Doctored with three different doctors besides taking numerous kinds of so-called 'stomach cures' but received no permanent relief. I was run down, could not sleep at night with the pain in my chest caused by gas on the stomach. Was weak, could eat scarcely anything although I was hungry nearly all the time. About one year and a half ago I began taking your 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and after having taken several bottles am nearly cured of stomach trouble. Can now eat without distress and have gained fifteen pounds in weight.

I thank you for your remedy and wish you all success in your good work."

Doughnuts
That will remain moist.

Every housewife who bakes her own bread knows that if a little potato is added to the sponge, the bread will not dry out as quickly. In this recipe potato is utilized to make doughnuts that will remain moist and fresh for several days.

K C will be found to have distinct advantages over any other Baking Powder for doughnuts. K C is a double acting baking powder with which a large batch of doughnuts may be mixed and fried a few at a time. The last will be as light and nice as the first.

K C Potato Doughnuts

By Mrs. Nevada Briggs, of Baking School fame.

3½ cups flour; 2 eggs; 1 cup sugar; 4 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder; ½ teaspoonful salt; ½ teaspoonful mace; 1 cup cold mashed potato; ½ cup milk, or more if needed.

K C 25 OUNCES

Sift three times, the flour, salt, spice and baking Powder. Beat eggs with rotary beater, then still using rotary beater, gradually add sugar, then work in the mashed potato with a spoon and alternately add milk and flour mixture. Make a soft dough, roll into a sheet, cut into rounds, pinch a hole in the center with the finger and fry in deep fat.

Fat for frying should not be hot enough to brown the doughnut until it has risen. When the doughnut is dropped into the fat it sinks to the bottom. As soon as it comes up it should be turned and turned a number of times while cooking. This recipe is excellent as they do not take the fat in frying and will stay moist for days.

GENERAL NEWS.

WASHINGTON—The entire structure of optimism which President Wilson has reared in his mind for the success of his plan for bringing peace in Mexico, has come down clattering. High officials made no secret of the fact that President has finally concluded that the situation in Mexico City is like quicksand and that there is but little firm ground upon which to base belief that General Huerta will not be a candidate to succeed himself or any other belief with regards to events in Mexico. The president has no information as yet that preparations have been made for holding the presidential elections in Mexico next October.

CARRIZO SPRINGS, MEX.—Barney Cline, the American soldier of fortune, and thirteen Mexicans belonging to his band of ammunition smugglers were indicted for murder by a special grand jury here. They will be placed on trial Wednesday and if a verdict of guilty is brought in as is now expected, they will probably all be hanged. Cline is about thirty-five years old and gives evidence of high education. He claims to be a graduate of Harvard and says that Cline is not his right name. He refuses to throw any light upon his early life. He is familiar with prominent New York families and their social affairs.

NEW YORK — One more arrest has just been made in the case of Anna Aumuller, for whose murder Hans Schmidt, a priest, was arrested early Sunday. The prisoner is Dr. E. A. Muret, a dentist living on the ground floor of 301 St. Nicholas avenue. He was taken to the West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street station. According to the report in headquarters, the physician under arrest is said to have performed an operation on the Aumuller woman, from the effects of which she died.

NEW YORK—"Big Tim" Sullivan was buried at 11:30 a. m. and the occasion was perhaps the most notable in the Bowery's history. It is estimated that 20,000 persons viewed the remains before being taken to Old St. Patricks, where Mgr. Kearney conducted the service. The interment was at Cavalry cemetery. Sullivan had been killed by a train after he had escaped from his brother's house, where he was confined, he being insane.

BERLIN—It is reported here that the Hamburg-American Steamship company announces that their big ship Imperator will be taken off the New York service in October and partly rebuilt. Her boilers have shown that they are unsufficient for her requirements and will be fitted with others which will enable her to use oil fuel. A number of staterooms will be converted into smaller compartments.

CALDWELL, N. J. — Mrs. Laura A. Thompson, a wealthy widow, of New York, who has been occupying a cottage at North Caldwell, with her sister, Mrs. E. Doyle, for the past six months, was instantly killed when a runabout she was driving went under a railing along a five foot embankment on Bloomfield avnue and pinned her body between the car and the railing.

DAVENPORT, IA.—Being charged with violating the Mann "white slave" act in bringing a fifteen-year-old girl from Moline to Davenport for immoral purposes, Count Edwin J. Brunswick de Coromba, Austrian nobleman, was held to $3,000 bonds before United States Commissioner A. G. Bush.

AUGUSTA, MAINE—Latest returns received indicate the election of John A. Peters, Republican, in the special election in the Third congressional district to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Forrest Goodwin by a plurality of 600 over William R. Pattangall, of Waterville, Democrat.

Believe Children Elopers.

ESCANABA, MICH. — Miss Elizabeth Rowan, fourteen years old, and Frank Maleski, seventeen, school children of North Escanaba, have been missing since Friday morning, and it is thought by their parents and the officers they have eloped. The couple tried elopment last winter, but their plans were spoiled at the last minute by the girl's mother.

After Crack Outfielder.

Left Fielder Gilhooley of the Montreal International league team, probably will be sold to a major league club for a big price. Owner Lichtenheim of the Montreal club demands $10,000 in cash and two players for Gilhooley's release. Though the terms are pronounced excessive, the New York Americans, Brooklyns, Chicago Cubs, Cincinnati Reds, Pittsburghs and Boston Red Sox and Braves are considering the Montreal club's proposition. It is said that as much as $6,000 had been offered for this young player. Lichtenheim may close a deal for $2,000 more. Gilhooley is a heavy hitter and one of the best fielders and base runners in the minor leagues.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

ANN ARBOR—According to information which has just been brought to the police, Daniel Cole, Allenel hotel clerk, who disappeared two months ago, leaving a bride of less than a month, has other wives. Cole came here from some place in Indiana, and when he left he took with him, it is alleged, $45 belonging to the hotel. He left his bride a note saying he was going to Canada and that when she had saved up $1,000 he would return to her, but not before. Officer OBrien, being informed that Cole had been arrested in Racine, Wis., went after him. He returned with Cole, who was charged with wife desertion. O'Brien said that Cole was living with a woman in Racine, whom he had married about two weeks ago, and the officer also says he has discovered other wives.

EATON RAPIDS—One of the very oldest of the men who attended the homecoming celebration in Lansing and the only one who could show credentials of having helped in the construction work of the first state capitol, was Elisa Cochrane, of this city. Mr. Cochrane, who is more than ninety years old, was a resident of Lansing in the early pioneer days when the town did not enjoy the luxury of a railroad nor command any more notice as a commercial center than any other village of a few hundred people. He put in twelve hours a day working on the first capitol building, when the wage scale was not high enough to make his week's wages burdensome to carry around.

KALAMAZOO—Some of the farmers in the southwestern part of the state are putting up a hard fight to save their hogs from cholera, which is now sweeping this part of the state. Many farmers in the southern end of the county and Cass, Berrien and St. Joseph counties are spending large sums to vaccinate hogs that have not yet taken the disease. The serum is furnished by the State Agricultural college. Herds of hogs in this part of the state have been almost entirely destroyed. Some farmers are selling their stock at once so as to escape a possible spread of the disease to their herds, although the market prices are not of the best.

SAGINAW — Circuit Court Judge William G. Gage has issued a temporary injunction restraining the drain commissioners of Saginaw, Geness and Tuscola counties from furthering drains or digging new drains which will lead into the Birch Run drain. This action is a result of legal steps taken by farmers in the township of Spaulding. The farmers say that the Birch Run drain in places is two feet below the level of the Flint river, the natural outlet for that section of the county. They assert the drain should flow into the Ferguson creek, as the Flint overflows the banks and destroys crops and property. About twenty-two drains are affected by the order.

ST. JOHNS — A large, poisonous rattlesnake, kept Mrs. William Beebe, wife of a farmer living six miles north of here, a prisoner in the cellar of her home for more than half an hour. While churning Mrs. Beebe saw the rattler crawl from behind a barrel and slowly coil itself on the floor between her and the door. She finally succeeded in attracting the attention of her daughter, who was on the floor above. The girl ran out into the field and summoned her father, who killed the snake. It had 14 rattlers.

LANSING — Whether or not the Michigan Central and also the Perre Marquette railroads were justified in raising the cost of transporting coal from the mines in Saginaw county, to the City of Saginaw, and from the Bay county mines to Bay City, ten cents a ton, is a question that will receive the attention of the state railroad commission.

LANSING—The town of Manchester is threatened with an epidemic of infantile paralysis, five cases in two families having been reported to the state board of health. The board will send a medical expert to Manchester Dr. J. F. Breakey, of Ann Arbor, who has been instructed to investigate.

FLINT — Being violently whirled around several times on a rapidly revolving bar of steel protruding from an automatic screw machine at the Buick factory, George Syze was stripped of all his wearing apparel except his socks and shoes but escaped with a few bruises on his left arm.

BAY CITY — The little five-year-old son of John Vanard, living near Auburn, lost two fingers of his left hand in a machine bean puller while playing. Vanard was working the machine and when he turned from it a moment the child got his hand under the knife.

M. E. HOSPITAL FOR DETROIT

$500,000 Building Contemplated in Rev. Allen's Plan.

YPSILANTI, MICH.—The Rev. C. B. Allen, district superintendent of the Detroit district, Detroit Methodist conference, sprung a surprise in his report before the fifty-eighth annual conference when he proposed a Methodist hospital to be built in Detroit at a cost of from a quarter of a million dollars, one-half of its work to be for charity patients.

The proposal has the endorsement of Bishop Burt, and will be presented to the conference committee on benevolence, and seems likely to be adopted. Dr. Allen has not yet performed the plan of financing the hospital but he declares that it is feasible.

"IT'S THE BEST POLISH I EVER USED"

That's What Every One Says Who Tries

Black Silk Stove Polish

DON'T imagine for a moment that all brands of stove polish are the same. Don't get the idea that to keep a nice glossy shine on your stove you must black it every few days. It's not a question of oft-repeated application. It's a question of the stove polish to use.

Black Silk Stove Polish is so much better than other stove polishes that there is absolutely no comparison—it's in a class all by itself.

It makes a brilliant glossy shine that don't rub or dust off. It anneals to the iron—becomes a part of the stove. It makes old stoves look like new and lasts four times as long as any other shine.

Get a can and give it a trial. Try it on your parlor stove, your cook stove, or your gas range. If you do not find it the best stove polish you ever used, your dealer is authorized to refund your money. Black Silk Stove Polish has been made by the same formula and sold under one name for 30 years.

Here is what some of the ladies write us:

"I sent to you for a can of Black Silk Stove Polish and found it so much better than any I had ever used that I asked my hardware dealer to order a supply. He did so, and is now selling nearly everyone in the place your polish. I had no idea there could be such a difference in stove polishes."

"I was visiting friends and they used Black Silk Stove Polish on their stoves. It made the best shine I ever saw, and after blacking, the polish did not rub or dust off. It is way ahead of any polish I have ever used."

Ask Your Dealer for Black Silk Stove Polish and refuse a counterfeit brand. Costs you no more than the ordinary kind, so why not have the best. Made in liquid or paste—one quality.

Black Silk Stove Polish Works, Sterling, Ill.

Use Black Silk Air-Drying Iron Enamel for grates, fenders, registers, stove pipes, etc. Prevents rusting. Not affected by heat or cold. Produces a permanent glossy black surface. Can, with brush for applying enamel, only 25 cents. Ask your dealer.

Use Black Silk Metal Polish for nickel, brass, silverware or tinware. It has no equal for use on automobiles.

U. S. CHILDREN ARE IN COUNTRY

Rural Localities Contain Four-fifths of Them.

ALIEN BORN ONLY 759,340

Miss Julia Lathrop Quotes Statistics in Urging Welfare Work—Only 6,000,000 Out of 29,500,000 Live in Cities—South Has Largest Per Cent Rural.

Washington, Sept. 22.—Only 5,600,000 of the 29,500,000 children in the United States, or less than one child in five, live in the large cities, according to statistics gathered by Miss Julia C. Lathrop of Chicago, chief of the Children's Bureau of the United States department of labor.

At least 18,000,000 children, or more than three out of five, says Miss Lathrop, live in villages of less than 2,500 inhabitants, that is, in distinctly rural communities.

Southern Percentage Lower.

"In New England, the Middle Atlantic, North Central and Pacific states," says Miss Lathrop, "the percentage of children living in cities of 100,000 inhabitants or over is higher than elsewhere, reaching as high as 43 per cent in the Middle Atlantic states.

"In the South Atlantic and South Central states, on the other hand, the per centage of children living in cities of 100,000 or over is small, the highest being 6 per cent.

"The question of child welfare in the south is distinctly a rural question as the percentage of children in rural districts is higher than 80 in all the southern divisions."

The statistics show that on April 15, 1910, Uncle Sam had 29,499,136 children under fifteen years of age, of whom all but 759,346 were born in the United States.

Native in Vast Majority.

There were 7,225,569 native white children with one or both parents foreign born. The native white children with both parents native numbered 17,731,580, and formed 60 per cent of all the children of the country. There were 3,665,107 negro children, or 12 per cnt of the whole number.

The negro children, according to the handbook, are found mainly in the southern and southwestern states, whereas the foreign-born whites are located principally in the New England, Middle Atlantic and North Central states.

EXPLOSION VICTIM IS BETTER

One Hurst Daughter Leaves Hospital—Blind Pigs Held to Blame.

Bloomington, Ind., Sept. 22.—Elizabeth Hurst, six-year-old daughter of John Hurst, the stone mason who blew up his bedroom with dynamite, killing himself and oldest daughter, Maude, was released from the Bloomington hospital. Her injuries were the least of the four. Fannie Hurst, the thirteen-year-old daughter, will remain in the hospital some time yet.

There was a double funeral for Hurst and his daughter, which was attended by scores. The hearses drove side by side to Rose Hill cemetery, where the victims of the tragedy were buried. At a called meeting of the W. C. T. U., blind tigers were censured in strong resolutions as being responsible for the crime committed by Hurst.

WRECKED IN BORROWED CAR

Chicagoans Driving Fifty Miles an Hour Crash Into Pole.

Waukegan, Ill., Sept. 22.—Driving at a rate of speed of fifty or more miles an hour, three Chicago men—Harry Morris, John Harts, and Joe Roberts—had a miraculous escape from death at 3 o'clock.

Their Overland tourning car crashed into an electric light pole on Sheridan road, snapped the pole in two, and came to a crushing halt when the lower portion of the pole and the curbing crecked the progress of the car. The men were hurled from their seats and escaped with minor injuries. The car belongs to Isadore Bartelstein of 1552 West Taylor street, Chicago. It was a borrowed car.

MONTREAL SUSPECT JAILED

Alleged Member of Bank Robbing Gang Held at Detroit.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 22.—William Houlihan, alleged accomplice of Martin Powell, who has been placed on trial for robbing the New Westminster, B. C., branch of the Bank of Montreal of $220,000, was arrested by Detective Inspector Thomas Lally, with $370 of the bills alleged to have been stolen from the bank in his possession.

The money was identified by J. H. Walker, superintendent of the local Pinkerton agency, and Inspector Downey, of the police department. A portion of the money stolen was unissued bills of $5 and $10 denominations. Walker and Downey examined the money under a microscope and found that the first figure in each bill series had been changed.

SCHMIDT MADE HIM PENITENT

Priest's Crime Awakens Conscience of Girl's Slayer.

MURDER MYSTERY IS CLEARED

Jacob Wolfshon Confesses That He Took Life of Anna Catherine Schumacher Four Years Ago—Conscience Was Dead Until Slayer Read of Schmidt Crime.

Philadelphia, Sept. 22.—Jacob Wolfshon, confessed murderer of Anna Catherine Schumacher, four years ago in Holy Sepulchre cemetery, Rochester, N. Y., was brought to a realization of his crime by reading of the atrocity committed in New York by Murderer Hans Schmidt. This was his admission to Detective Captain Cameron.

August 7, 1909, Wolfshon strangled Miss Schumacher while she was placing flowers on the graves of her father and sister and concealed the body in the woods and then returned at night and buried it in a shallow grave.

Kept Secret Four Years.

For four years he kept his secret. But his conscience was not thoroughly dead—down deep it was pulsating faintly and the Schmidt murder was the lash that brought it back to a tingling activity.

Samuel Marks, his landlord, gave a vivid description of the awakening of the conscience of Wolfshon. When the confessed murderer came here three years ago, he was an unemotional being, a healthy young man who apparently had no worries and slept peacefully at night.

"He read of the Schmidt case," said Marks in telling the story. "I never saw a man change so. His face became sallow, his eyes grew wild and he paced the floor continually. He could not sleep at night. Once I said: 'Wolfshon, what makes you so troubled?'

"A tortured look came over his face and he replied 'Oh, I'm worried about a girl over in New York state. I can't forget about her, that's all.' Way into the night we could hear him pacing the floor."

Good Triumphs Over Evil.

That the forces for good and evil fought continuously for supremacy in Wolfshon's character is evidenced by pictures which he tacked on the walls of his room. At the foot of his bed, where he could observe it the moment he opened his eyes in the morning, was a cheap print of Watts' picture of Sir Galahad, the traditional knight of Chastity. To the left of the bed was a photograph of Jacob Schiff, the millionaire philanthropist of New York. On the left wall was a photograph of himself alongside of a newspaper picture of Harry Thaw and one of Hans Schmidt.

Wolfshon was regarded here as a man of education. He declares his father was a wealthy land owner and his brother, Dr. Leopold Wolfshon, was noted throughout Russia as a specialist on nervous diseases.

FENIAN LEADER ROSSA LOW

Aged Wife Too Weak to Care for Him, He Is Taken to Hospital.

New York, Sept. 22.—Jeremiah O'Donovan Ross, the Fenian leader, is seriously ill in St. Vincent's hospital, West Brighton, Staten Island.

Rossa, who is eighty-two years old, has been confined to his bed for about three years. He was removed to the hospital about two weeks ago, his aged wife having become too ill to care for him properly.

Matters Requiring Immediate Consideration Made It Necessary to Turn Them Over to Sulzer's Rival Under Decision of Justice Hasbrouck—Matter to Higher Court.

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 22.—The letter which Mr. Sulzer sent to Lieutenant Governor Glynn turning over to him for signature requisition papers for the extradition of a prisoner, has aroused considerable comment.

The letter was taken to mean that the impeached executive thereby recognized the right of Mr. Glynn to act as governor pending the outcome of the trial.

This his counsel, Valentine Taylor and D. Cady Herrick, as well as the governor's secretary, Chester C. Platt, all emphatically denied. They were eager to correct the impression that the governor had surrendered the position upon which he has stood since his impeachment—that he was impeached unconstitutionally and is therefore still governor.

Concede Nothing to Glynn.

"Neither Governor Sulzer nor his counsel," Mr. Herrick said "have conceded for one moment the right of Lieutenant Governor Glynn to act as governor nor that the assembly had jurisdiction to impeach him at the extraordinary session.

"Two matters arose that seemed to demand immediate consideration, and under the decision of Justice Hasbrouck it was evident that the public authorities would not recognize any act of Governor Sulzer.

"His counsel, for the purpose of enabling these seemingly urgent matters to be disposed of, advised that the papers should be transmitted to Lieutenant Governor Glynn, thus abiding by the decision of the court until it could be reversed by a higher tribunal."
